In future war aerial scouts are bound to become a very important factor, and regulations for the organization and employment of a new air battalion recently raised at Aldershot have been issued. The Army Council regard the new unit as one of the most valuable means of obtaining information at the disposal of the commander of an army. It will not, however, replace other means of acquiring information, such as cavalry and agents, but will be used in conjunction with such services. The air battalion is to be so distributed that the units may not only be placed in the best positions to obtain information, but to co-operate with the others arms, and especially with the cavalry, in this all-important service. The manner in which reconnaissance is to be carried out is to be left generally to the discretion of those who will actually undertake the duty. It is considered that there is less risk from positions behind rather than in front or on the flank of the enemy when seeking information, as the enemy's dispositions will probably have been made with a view to concealment from observation from the front and flanks rather than from the rear, whilst for fear of damaging his own troops he may hesitate to fire on vessels sailing over the rear of his columns. Vessels also, when so placed may escape fire through being mistaken for friendly aircraft. The presence of troops, if in the open, can be observed in clear weather at an altitude of 5,000 to 6,000 feet within a radius of four to six miles from the aeroplane or dirigible. When nearer the earth objects will be rather more easily distinguished, but are a shorter time in view and the area is restricted. Dirigibles, it is stated, will be exposed to considerable danger from artillery fire when lower than 4,500 feet or within a range of 5,000 yards, and from rifle or machine-gun fire when at a height of less than 3,500 feet, or at ranges under 2,000 yards. Against aeroplanes it is thought that the fire of field artillery will rarely be effective at 4,500 feet, or at a range of 4,000 yards and upwards, whilst reasonable security from the fire of small arms may be expected when 3,000 feet from the earth or at ranges of 2,000 yards and over. High speed, movements in curves, and frequent changes of direction and elevation are suggested as means to reduce the probability of being shot. Concealment in the clouds, if possible, when approaching the enemy is also another useful hint. For transmission of intelligence from dirigibles wireless telegraphy, signalling, or carrier pigeons can be used.

LITTLE PRNICESS JULIANA

Although Princess Juliana's father, Duke Henry of Mecklenburg, is a typical German, she is thoroughly Dutch in her seriousness. Frequently she is to be seen driving a span of tiny ponies about the Royal Palace grounds at the Hague. She sits in a miniature phaeton, while a nurse walks alongside and a groom holds the guide rein. Her second birthday she celebrated by "reviewing" the Apeldoorn Boy Scouts, who paraded in her honor. Among her birthday presents was a large doll dressed in Dutch costume, which was brought to her by a peasant woman from Zeeland. The woman was permitted to hand the doll personally to the little Princess, who received it with great delight.

THE BEGUM OF BHOPAL

Her Highness of East India Visited London in State

Amongst the many interesting visitors who visited London this year was one of the most powerful of East Indian potentates in the person of her Highness the Begum of Bhopal. Her Highness brought a large retinue, including a native doctor, several cooks and an astrologer. The Princess (who is a reigning Sovereign) wore a beautiful silken robe and long veil over her face. A special train was brought to the pier, and her landing was from a gangway which immediately faced the door of the saloon carriage. One eye-witness of a great Durbar held in India tells of seeing at that wonderful and gorgeous ceremony, her Highness the Begum standing between two huge native Princes, Jeypore and Joudphore, who were magnificently got up with full skirts (petticoats he called them) of folds innumerable of soft cream color. From the waist up the garments were of richest embroidered velvets and silks and [illegible] with their high turbans, massed with superb jewels, the splendid scimitars also glittering with precious stones; but the little woman, who had only a few above her in rank, the Sovereign of an independent province, with a gorgeous retinue, was most simply attired in trousers! The pajama-like garments of dull, shaded stripes, the bodice and short jacket being being also of sombre color, her black hair done quite plainly with a short silken shawl draped over head and shoulders and remarkably few jewels, only a few showing in her hair and round her throat. The Begum's rightful place was apparently between the two great Princes, and it was a most curious sight to see the huge Maharatto draw himself up to his stately height, advance, and bow low and gracefully to his Sovereign's representative; then retiring, make way for the Begum, who, small though she was, showed no less dignity in her obeisance; and after her Highness came the second of the huge Princes, all eyes being fixed on such an unusual trio, even in that magnificent and inspiring assemblage.

MELANCHOLY IN FLOWERS

Curious, indeed, the doom assigned to two of the fairest of the spring flowers, for if primroses are forsaken the violet is a nun. Perhaps this atmosphere of gentle melancholy increases the affection inspired by these favorite flowers which seem dearer far to human kind than such rivals as the brilliant marsh marigold and the dandelion accepts. FOR DOING NOTHING

Some Fat Salaries That Were Easily Earned

Uncle Sam has been "getting a move" on him lately, and, as the result of exercising his lynx eyes, has been successful in saving $180,000 a year of the public money which has hitherto been paid to people in the way of salaries for doing nothing. For decades past there have been some snug little jobs connected with the House of Representatives. Apparently, however, some Paul Pry discovered these sinecures, a committee investigated them, and their report has provided one of the most interesting documents produced by the American Parliament for a long time.

One striking example of the "waste of public salary funds," as a chairman of the committee describes it, was the discovery that a thirteen-year-old girl the daughter of the chief doorkeeper of the Congress, was on the pay-roll as "clerk of the doorkeeper" at a salary of $1,300 per annum, and an extra months' pay each year as a vacation gratuity. And although they made the closest investigations, the committee were quite unable to discover exactly what the functions of this minor official were.

Then there were thirty-eight extra policemen authorised when, during the Spanish-American War, it was reported that there was a plot to dynamite the Capitol, who were still on the pay roll, costing annually $39,000. Two telegraph operators, drawing $1,200 each, and assigned to a wire [illegible] discontinued, were also still on the pay-sheet. By abolishing the salaries of employes of the "clerks' document room," which room was itself abolished sixteen years ago, $6,000 per annum has been saved, and an almost equal sum by stopping the pay of employes designated at "attendants in the library," the library having been removed many years ago from the Capitol.

THE CORONATION INVESTITURE NEXT

This Picturesque Function of the Throne Room Set for Late in July.

MANY WILL PARTICIPATE

Ceremony Will Be One of the Largest of This Kind for Many Years.

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

NEXT to the coronation itself, but, of course, of a much more private character, the investiture for the coronation honors, which the King is to hold in the Throne Room of St. James' Palace, will be one of the most picturesque functions of the near future.

It will be the largest ceremonial of this description which has taken place for very many years. According to present arrangements, it is to be held either on July 27 or 28. First, there will be a chapter of the Knights of the Garter, always a brilliant ceremony. Then, at the general investiture, the King is to receive the Companions of all the various orders, as well as the Knights Grand Crosses and the Knights Commanders. Such a large investiture, all in one day, never was held in the reign of either King Edward or Queen Victoria.

THE DELHI DURBAR.

The announcement that King George will occupy a tent at the Delhi Durbar has directed the remarkable rise of house rents in that city. Very high prices are imposed, being asked for ordinary house accommodation, according to a consular report from Calcutta. Two houses which would ordinarily rent from $25 to $60 a month have been let at $3,600 for seven months, and an ordinary one story hotel has been rented for December for $20,000. The government is, however, making every effort to arrange camps, which will modify the price of rents.

Preparations for the Durbar are now in active progress. One firm has sold thirty American automobiles for use at the Durbar, and an American firm is also putting in a filter system for a supply of pure water. The roads along the route of the elephant procession, wide as they are, are being made wider, and experiments are being made with various dust allaying preparations. Only those who know the Indian public can appreciate the need of this.

ROYALTY CATALOGUES GIFTS.

King George and Queen Mary are having all the beautiful caskets, numbering more than two hundred, and the silver trowels and golden keys which have been presented to them since their marriage placed in an apartment in Windsor, where they will be catalogued, so that they may be seen by visitors of the castle when the court is not in residence there.

A few caskets which have appealed, especially by their artistic workmanship to the Queen are used as receptacles for trinkets, and they adorn her dressing room. King George has had two gold keys balanced to perfection as paper weights.

It is not generally known that a few of the wedding presents to the King and Queen are still stored in a great warehouse. These articles are of the "white elephant" order, but as they were presented by patriotic institutions with the best intentions the royal recipients would never part with them. Space may now be found for them in the specially prepared apartment at Windsor.

Princess Mary has been having her first lessons in fencing, and it is said that her father and mother are delighted with the progress she is making and the keen interest she is taking in the pastime. Her aunt, the Princess Royal, Duchess of Fife, is one of the best amateur fencers in England. It is one of the few exercises which appeal to her, and she has practised it steadily since she was a girl. Both her daughters, the Princesses Alexandra and Maud, also are keen and skilful swordswomen.

GEORGE V. STAMPS CALLED FAILURE

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

THE new George V. postage stamps have proved a disappointment, both to the public and stamp collectors. There was, of course, an enormous demand for the stamps, stamp dealing firms having ordered huge batches of them, before they were issued, to send abroad. Now that they have got them they are far from pleased. Mr. John Purcell, who was for nearly twenty years Controller of Stamps, raises his voice in a letter to the Times against the new issue.

"In view of the loud bell rung by the Postmaster General," he says, "I have looked forward to seeing stamps infinitely superior to those heretofore issued, and I confess to very considerable disappointment. I hold that, first, the design of the new stamps is entirely poor, and in it there is no improvement whatsoever upon the old issue; second, that the dies produced by the Royal Mint lack the sharpness of those made by Messrs. de la Rue, and, third, that in the engraving, the printing and the workmanship generally there is no comparison in the matter of superiority between the stamps manufactured by that firm and those now issued to the public.

"I was told that by the change of contractors something like $50,000 a year was effected by His Majesty's government. Surely it was unwise to haggle over such a comparatively small sum unless, indeed, there was a certainty of producing something more worthy of the nation and less like the issue of some small South American State."

SEEKS OUT MANY OTHERS

Has Brief Meetings with the Special Representatives from Nearly All Countries.

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

THE coronation garden party at Buckingham Palace was attended by about six thousand persons. The King went round chatting to the special representatives from other countries, and Mr. John Hays Hammond, who represented the President of the United States, was one whom the King sought out after tea.

When the youthful Prince of Wales, accompanied by Princess Mary and Prince George, made his official début as heir to the throne by inspecting the colonial troops encamped at Chelsea, his coolness and the entire absence of self-consciousness were remarked upon.

As he walked up and down the lines, accepting the salute, he seemed to be taking note of everything, and he discovered a mistake. The name of the officer is kept secret, but as this officer's detachment remained at the slope instead of coming to the salute, the Prince pointed it out, and the error was at once corrected. As the Prince asked for souvenirs of his first inspection, the officers tore badges and buttons from their tunics and helmets; and in return for these the two princes and the young Princess signed their names in the Canadians' visiting book—autographs of which they are very proud.

$10,000 PROFIT ON THE 'MONEY' NIGHT

Command Performance at Drury Lane Nets Good Sum for Many Charities.

HELPING MR. FROHMAN

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

The net profit of the command performance of "Money" at Drury Lane turns out to be $2,500 ($10,000). Mr. Arthur Collins has asked and received the King's permission to divide this sum among several theatrical charities. The surplus money from the gala performance at His Majesty's Theatre also will be given to theatrical charities.

The Stage says "Mr. Charles Frohman will have to find a new leading man for Miss Billie Burke." That's really very thoughtful on the part of the Stage to jog Mr. Frohman's memory. Otherwise he might have forgotten to carry on his own business as he has been doing for so many years.

Sir Herbert Tree, Mrs. Langtry, Mr. Weedon Grossmith, Miss Gertie Millis, Mr. Joseph Coyne and Mr. Alfred Lester acted as waiters to the children who had a fresh air outing in Epping Forest. Previously they had been considered good actors. Anyway they proved that not all the waiters in London come from Switzerland.

Mr. A. L. Lovering, manager of the Boston Theatre, is over here again and finds that London has not forgotten him. He carries the Frohman banner as proudly as ever.

A new play, soon to be brought out, is to be called "The Peckham Pretender." There's more than one of these. In fact, most people from Peckham pretend to live somewhere else. I have even known them to give Upper Tooting as an address.

The Pelican states that Miss Maudie Allan is to dance in South Africa and get $1,000 a night for doing it. The warm climate will be in her favor, so that she need not have the strings of beads she clothes herself with lined with fur.

Miss Kitty Gordon has arrived in London from New York, but she is going right straight back to America again as soon as the next season begins to boil.

According to the Era the following notice is posted in the lobby of a popular Paris theatre:—"Those of the audience who desire songs or dances to be repeated are requested to give in their names at the box office. On the conclusion of the performance those who have thus given in their names can, on paying for fresh seats, have the encore they desire." Certain London managers would like to adopt the same rule just to learn whether or not the claque amounts to anything.

In commenting on the dancing of Fraulein von Deep, the Pelican says:—"With bare legs and abbreviated trousers she dances a number of measures. Their chief failing is a lack of variety. Just why any one should want a dancer's legs to be varied is hard to understand. It would be very embarrassing to any dancer not to have her legs match.

SPITALFIELDS SILK IS A WORK OF ART

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

SOME beautiful pieces of silk made on Spitalfields looms to a design approved by Queen Mary are now on view at No. 13 Jermyn street and are being sold for the benefit of the Prince Francis of Teck Memorial Fund of the Middlesex Hospital. The silk, which is made up in twelve colors, has woven on its surface a design of white York roses entwined with pink May blossoms, surmounted by St. Edward's crown. As with all Spitalfields silk, it is hand woven and has wearing and lasting qualities far surpassing any silk in the world.

Considerable interest attaches to the present effort, the old craft being in danger of extinction. Fifty years ago the Spitalfields weavers numbered tens of thousands; to-day there are not more than two hundred. The work is so intricate and requires such concentration that it is impossible to employ steam power. The Spitalfields weaver is an artist, and the design approved by the Queen is declared by the worker to be the most intricate known. More than four hundred threads had to be thrown to produce one and one-half inches of silk.

"It requires all the brain you can put into it," said an old weaver who took part in the work, "and you could not do such work in a factory. The noise of other machines would distract your mind. It must be done in the silence of your own home. You also need daylight for it, the colors run into one another in artificial light. You need to have your whole heart in it, too, for there is always something new to learn, and each new pattern has its own difficulties, for which the whole loom may have to be altered. I am afraid the whole craft will be extinct soon, as the young people won't stick to it. It doesn't pay, more's the pity."

ENGLAND BUILDING SIX DESTROYERS

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

SIX large new submersible torpedo boat destroyers are being built for the British navy, two at Chatham and four at Barrow. Sir Philip Watts, Director of Naval Construction, has designed the new boats, which will be of 800 tons displacement—that is to say, 305 tons larger than the previous largest submarines in the British navy and seventy tons larger than the French Gustave Zédé, now building, which has hitherto held the record for size.

Although no details have been officially made known, in addition to their armament of torpedo tubes, the new boats will carry a quick firing gun forward on a collapsible mounting, so that the gun can be brought into action when the boat is on the surface and stowed safely away when submerged.

Mr. J. R. Keene, in Perfect Health, Chats on World Affairs in Mile Walk in London

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

Mr. James R. Keene, who is stopping at the Carlton Hotel, was completely upset when he learned that cables to New York had pictured him as little short of a physical and mental wreck. He cabled a denial of the cruel canard to his family.

In the course of a mile walk, with the thermometer at eighty-five, Mr. Keene discussed current topics with a "Keene" perception of the meaning of the moves in world politics and business affairs.

Of Canadian reciprocity he said that the ratification of the agreement with the United States would redound to the benefit of both countries. He evinced deep interest in the proposed Anglo-American peace treaty, holding that its adoption would be the forerunner of world peace. Mr. Keene is conversant with every move in Morocco and the threatening conditions in the Near East. He is thoroughly posted on all the big news of the day. His mind is perfectly clear.

Mr. Keene, who is well advanced in years, stated that outside of a stomach ailment due to intestinal trouble he is perfectly well.

In discussing reciprocity Mr. Keene said that, in his opinion, the United States would be the greater gainer. In his judgment annexation will follow as a matter of course.

Referring to the effect of universal peace, he asked:—

"Is it not probable that with war made impossible the nations will be de-energised in patriotism?"

He made the point, too, that if the Anglo-American peace treaty were signed the question of Canadian annexation might have to be settled by arbitration and become latent instead of active.

Mr. Keene admitted that he has been under treatment for five months at Palermo and at other places on the Italian Riviera. He will probably go for a short rest to Harrowgate and then start for home.

DUKE OF ARGYLL BUYS SANDHAMS

Great Many Finished and Unfinished Pictures by Canadian Are Being Sold.

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

A GREAT many of the hundreds of pictures and sketches, finished and unfinished, which were found in the studio of Henry Sandham, the Canadian artist, after his death, a year ago, and which are on view at the Imperial Institute, already bear the little red disks which denote that they are sold.

The Duke of Argyll has bought several works, including a gravure of the portrait of Sir John MacDonald, which is now in the Parliament House of Ottawa, and which Lady MacDonald, of Earnscliffe, the great Canadian statesman's widow, has declared to be "the most speaking likeness" ever painted of her husband.

The Duke also has acquired a small picture of Mount Stephen, which Lord Mount Stephen also wished to possess. His Lordship, however, has become the possessor of twenty-six other pictures in the exhibition, including most of those which are paintings of Canadian scenes and characters, his purchases embracing the study of the late General Sir William Butler for the "March of Time."

Lord and Lady Clanwilliam, Mr. Russell Stephenson and Mr. Robert Howard, whose wife was the daughter of Lord Strathcona, also have bought many of the pictures.

CHINESE FINANCIAL EXPERTS LEAVE FOR PARIS CONFERENCE

Four Powers' Bankers to Select Fiscal Adviser for Dragon Empire.

RUSSO-JAPANESE AIMS ALSO TO BE EXAMINED

[Special Despatch.]
Paris, Saturday.

Delegates representing the Board of Finance have departed for Paris to attend the conference with the four nations' bankers relative to the currency reform programme.

It is expected that one result of the conference will be the final determination of the nationality and identity of China's currency adviser, which, despite the announcement of the selection of Jonkheer Wiessering, of Holland, is still unsettled, and also that the effect of the Russian and Japanese protests will be disclosed.

The feeling in diplomatic circles here is that Russia's aim is to obtain participation, but that the Japanese do not desire to participate, their protests against Article XVI. being inspired rather by the hope of causing complications which may prevent the loan for Manchurian development becoming operative.

LONDON COOL TO "THE PARISIENNE"

Princess Bariatinsky's Comedy, Produced at the Royalty Theatre, Fails to Please.

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

THEY may have liked a comedy called "The Parisienne" in Paris, but they certainly do not like it in London. Princess Bariatinsky, whose stage name is Lydia Yavorsky, produced it at the Royalty Theatre, which she has taken for a season.

"The Parisienne" does not appeal to the British mind. In fact, it rather offends it, for the British theatregoer does not like to see his domestic linen washed in public.

The play consists simply of a series of quarrels between a weak and flirtatious wife and her insanely jealous lover. The dormant husband looks on placidly and sides with the lover. When it came to his insisting that his wife should be more kind to the lover the British sense of propriety got up on its hind legs and roared.

To be sure, it was well acted, with the Princess in the leading part, ably supported by Charles Bryant. Princess Bariatinsky has a pretty accent and a charming stage presence, but she should take a few lessons in make-up. Mons. Henri Becque was the author of the play in the original French. The English translator carefully kept his name off the programme.

It was produced by the Incorporated Stage Society, a club for the encouragement of classical farce entitled "Pericles and Aspasia," by Mr. W. L. Courtney. Any one without a playbill would have guessed that Mr. Bernard Shaw wrote it. The fun was a little above the heads of the persons who were not Greek scholars, and consisted in bringing ancient Athens up to date.

SAYS INDIA WANTS NEW GOLD MOHURS

Mr. M. de P. Webb Makes Suggestion for Coinage to Celebrate the King's Visit to East.

[Special Despatch.]

COLOMBO.—Mr. M. de P. Webb writes from Karachi, in connection with the forthcoming visit to India of King George, that he could not more appropriately signalise his recognition of the marvellous economic progress made in recent years in India than by ordering the recommencement of the coinage in India of the old celebrated gold mohur.

The new George the Fifth gold mohur might be of exactly the same weight and fineness as the British sovereign, with the same image of the King-Emperor on one side as on the new British sovereign, while on the other side the design of the old gold mohur might be reproduced. If a smaller Indian gold coin were also required, George the Fifth pagodas of exactly one-half of the value of the new gold mohur might also be coined. There can be no doubt that the revival of the pagoda would be very popular in the south of India.

The moment is especially propitious for this step forward. Not only is India being carried upward on a wave of daily increasing prosperity, but the output of gold from the mines of the world has in recent years assumed such vast and unprecedented proportions, close upon a hundred millions sterling per annum, that there is now ample gold for all, for East as well as West.

CORONATION COSTS THE KING $500,000

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

THE coronation medal King George is to bestow upon the members of his household is rather larger in size than usual. It is being made of gold, silver and bronze, according to the position of each recipient.

No one is to be omitted, down to the most humble of the royal servants who were on duty during the festivities.

The medal is being manufactured at the Royal Mint and will be ready for distribution in a week or two. The King is bearing the whole of the cost out of his private purse.

The expense to which he has been put in connection with the coronation is not generally understood. King Edward has stated that he estimated his crowning had cost him quite $500,000 out of his own pocket, and it is probable that King George will find himself called upon to disburse an even larger sum.

IS SURE 'THE MILL' IS A REMBRANDT

[Special Despatch.]
Berlin, Saturday.—England is indignant because a rich country could not raise enough money to prevent the sale of Rembrandt's "Mill" to America, and now Professor von Seidlitz, of Dresden, tries to prove that the picture, for which $500,000 ($500,000) was paid, is not by Rembrandt's hand. He declares that the question of its author cannot be answered decidedly, but that its warm transparent coloring and the technical treatment of its numerous figures would agree with the work of Rembrandt's pupil Aert de Gelder.

Dr. Wilhelm Bode, general director of the Berlin Royal Museum, and an authority in Rembrandt investigations, thinks the genuineness of "The Mill" is far above all doubt.

"It indisputably is a first class Rembrandt," Dr. Bode stated. "The picture before its journey across the Atlantic had been in Berlin, where it was thoroughly cleaned by Professor Hauser. Then it studied it closely again," said Dr. Bode, "and the beauties of the picture never came more overpoweringly to the light than now after the successful cleaning. With the work of Aert de Gelder 'The Mill' has nothing in common."

NOT A CLAIM PAID ON "FANCY" RISKS

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

As was the case with the Titanic, underwriters at Lloyds, or at any rate that section of the "room" which makes a business of "fancy" risks, did well out of the coronation. It is impossible to say exactly how much money was at stake, but the amount is variously estimated at from $50,000,000 to $60,000,000. And there has not been a single claim to view, therefore, of the fact that the great majority of insurances were effected at premiums ranging between 2 and 10 per cent, it will be readily understood that there has been a good deal of rejoicing in the neighborhood of the Royal Exchange.

"The Parisian Mystery," Cleo de Merode, beautiful protege of the late King Leopold, dancer and adventuress, for the first time unveiled the mystery surrounding her birth as she stepped aboard a train for Italy, where, at the age of 38, broken in health and with beauty marred by premature age, she will live quietly for the rest of her days, in order, as she says, to free herself "from the everlasting public stare." She is the daughter of a small tradesman in Poland.

Mlle. de Merode's career has been nothing short of meteoric since she was proclaimed the most beautiful woman in the world by King Leopold in 1889. She has been the toast of the boulevards, the idolised of wealthy age, and the friend of Royalty. Scandal has connected her name with the devastation of six enormous fortunes, and she has frequently figured in the columns of the press. Through all this publicity, however, Mlle. Cleo has kept the secret of her birth, being at various times reported to be the daughter of parents in every stage of society from coal heavers to kings. This passion for secrecy resulted in her sobriquet "The Parisian Mystery," and at one time a continental duke offered a large sum to him who could solve the riddle.

HAPPY SUFFRAGETTES

Delighted with the Success of Their Big Procession

The English suffragettes are jubilant over the success of their monster procession through the streets of London a few weeks ago, which created a very strong impression, and emphasized the fact that public feeling towards the movement has undergone a vast change during the last year. Miss Christabel Pankhurst, one of the leaders of the movement, replying as to whether the suffragists ever intended to resume their former militant tactics, which, according to many have done great harm to the cause said: "It all depends on circumstances. We are not particularly fond ourselves of making 'rough house,' but we surely don't wish anyone to think for a moment that there is any weakening of our militant spirit. We are strong believers in its usefulness under certain conditions, and we are still prepared to resort to militant tactics when and where it is necessary. The events of the last few weeks have impressed upon the minds of the people of England that representatives of every political shade of opinion are in favor of our movement, which is undoubtedly the most popular political movement of the day. The task immediately to engage our attention now is to increase the strength of our organization and to pay particular attention to our constitutional work. We feel we are going to win, and that the conciliation bill will soon go through."

AT LAST, A CURE FOR RHEUMATISM

"Fruit-a-tives Cured Me" Says Mrs. Baxter.

"I was a helpless cripple from Rheumatism for nearly a year. All down the right side, the pain was dreadful and I could not move for the agony. I was treated by two physicians without help.

I saw "Fruit-a-tives" advertised in "The Telegram" and decided to try them. After I had taken one box, I was much better.

When I had taken three boxes, I could use my arm and the pain was almost gone.

After taking five boxes, I was entirely well again. The cure of my case by "Fruit-a-tives" was indeed splendid because all the doctors failed to even relieve me. "Fruit-a-tives" cured me.

MRS. LIZZIE BAXTER.

4 HOSER PLACE, TORONTO, Dec. 15, '09.

In hundreds of other cases, "Fruit-a-tives" has given exactly the same satisfactory results because "Fruit-a-tives" is the greatest blood purifying medicine in the world. "Fruit-a-tives" the famous fruit medicine regulates kidneys, liver, bowels and skin, and prevents the accumulation of uric acid, which is the prime cause of Rheumatism.

"Fruit-a-tives" will positively cure every case of Rheumatism, when taken according to directions. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial size, 25c. At all dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

RAILROAD TICKET TAX

Germany In Many Cases Objects to the New Levy

There is much opposition in Germany to the new tax on railroad tickets. Every railroad ticket costing less than 18 cents is exempt from taxation, but every ticket costing more pays a tax graduated according to the price. The tax on a ticket costing from $1.25 to $3.50, for instance, is 15 cents in the first class, 10 cents second class, and 5 cents third class. The tax on a ticket costing from $5 to $7.50 is 60 cents first class, 30 cents second class and 22 cents third class.

The tax produces about $5,000,000 a year, but its result has been to drive the first-class passengers into the second, the second-class into the third, and the third-class passengers into the fourth class. At the present time first-class cars are run at a loss. The Government would like to abolish the first-class altogether, but influential persons who use it object.

The fourth class has hitherto been tax free, and in order to induce passengers to return to the higher classes the Government has suggested the abolition of the present system of taxation in favor of a universal tax of about 3½ per cent. on tickets of all classes. It is believed, however, that the Reichstag will not consent to this, and the latest proposal is that the tax on first-class tickets shall be reduced, that on second and third-class tickets raised, and a very moderate tax imposed on fourth-class tickets. The travelling public is already raising an outcry against the proposed changes, which would benefit only first-class passengers and are universally described as a check to social progress.

FOR ASSISTANCE OF EMIGRANTS

British Society That Will Advance Part of Necessary Funds—Matrimonial Bureau

New impetus to emigration from Britain to her overseas dominions has been provided by the Empire Emigration Society, an undertaking organized to assist those who wish to emigrate but are unable to do so for lack of funds. Lord Ridley and Lord Stanhurst are actively interested in this society and act as trustees of its fund. Not the ill nourished and poverty stricken but the able bodied with some savings to their credit are the class of emigrant to whom chances are being offered. Soon after it was established, the Empire Emigration Society had over 1,500 people on its books with $10,000 at their disposal, who were anxious to save the balance in order to win through to hoped for prosperity in Canada, Australia or New Zealand.

The intending emigrants have to open an account with the Society with a minimum deposit of four dollars. Each subsequent payment must not be less than one dollar. As soon as the depositor has paid in half the necessary amount his passage is booked and arrangements made to supply him with employment when he arrives at his destination. Every class of worker is dealt with, and steps are taken to help emigrants to follow their own callings overseas. Typical of the variety of applicants in touch with the Society are four cases the secretary selected at random: A nurse, who desires to go to British Columbia has enough money to pay her passage, but is in need of advice as to the best means of going; a stonemason, who means to emigrate as soon as he can raise sufficient funds and who has paid a first instalment of seven dollars; a widow, who is an expert dressmaker, and hopes to have saved enough by the end of June to go out to Canada; a doctor with some capital who wants to know of a colony where he may practice his profession and at the same time give his two sons a start in farming.

The Duke of Marlborough recently gave a broad hint to the surplus women of England to go to the dominions beyond the seas where men were waiting for wives. Said the Duke: "There are a million more women than men in England, and there are a million more men than there are women in the dominions." So, indirectly, the Empire Emigration Society is playing the part of marriage bureau for Canadian bachelors, and domestic helps all over the country are becoming infected with the travel fever after dreaming of more congenial careers in new lands.

A GROTESQUE OFFERTORY

Mengo Cathedral, in Uganda, which was recently destroyed by lightning was probably the largest edifice in Central Africa, being capable of containing nearly 5,000 people. It was consecrated about six years ago, and an offertory of grotesquely varied gifts was collected on the occasion. This consisted of 13 cows, four goats 125 eggs, 130 fowls, 75,000 cowrie shells, and a number of coins. The cows, for lack of room, were not taken inside the Cathedral, but the goats were led up to the altar and presented to the bishop, while the fowls were brought in big bamboo crates.

No Gas or Dust.

And it is just as important to keep the air free from coal gas and dust. In the "Hecla" every place where experience has shown that gas might otherwise find an outlet, has been fused absolutely tight by our patented process. The same fused joints keep out the dust and smoke.

Adding moisture to the air in your home will give you the same heat for less fuel.

But that is not all.

Warm dry air, however pure, is not healthful. The human body demands more moisture than is carried in the winter air.

The "Hecla" supplies this moisture in plenty. A large circular pan of water is placed where it will be easy to fill and where it will not be overlooked.

GREAT BRITAIN'S UNCROWNED KINGS

It was only last autumn that Mr. William L. Cary dispossed of his island kingdom, the Calf of Man, to a Huddersfield manufacturer for $100,000. Under a grant of the island from the Crown in the days of Queen Elizabeth, the Calf of Man was declared to be forever free from taxation. No one can land, and, above all, live, on the island without the consent of the owner. It is in every sense of the word a strictly private estate, and laid out as such. The only objection to this little kingdom in the Irish Sea is that but a small part of it is cultivated, and the whole of it is overrun with rabbits and rats, which, strange to relate, like Manx cats, are tailless. Mr. Cary's father lived there for many years, leading a very retired life. He was a man of most scholarly attainments, immersed in study, devoted to his books, and allowed years to go by without so much as visiting the neighboring kingdom, the Isle of Man. His son and successor emigrated as a boy to the United States, and, after serving behind the counter in some of the big stores, started a business of his own in California, which proved so successful that in a few years he amassed quite a fortune. He developed, however, a taste for American life which totally unfitted him for the quiet, secluded existence which his father had lived on the island, and it was for this reason that, after holding it for ten years, he sold it.

Bardsey Island

Out in the waters of Cardigan Bay, off the coast of Carnarvon, is Bardsey Island, a small slip of land two miles long, covering an area of 444 acres. Here reigns the Hon. Frederick G. Wynn, who is acknowledged chief by the inhabitants, numbering less than 200 all told. The island figured largely in the early religious history of the country. Tradition has it that no less than 20,000 "saints" were buried there. That the story has at least some substance of truth is proved by the immense number of human bones and antique remains which have been unearthed in every part of the isle. The name "Bardsey" was bestowed upon the island by the Saxons, probably on account of its having formed a refuge to the Bards. Thither fled a great number of these monks, who escaped the general massacre by the Saxons under the Northumbrian Prince Ethelfrith, the Bernician conqueror. Of the monastery built here, as early as the sixth century, only the shell of a ruined tower remains.

Island of Lambay

Just north of Howth, in Dublin Bay, lies the island of Lambay. Formerly it was the property of the Archbishops of Dublin, but a few years ago it was purchased by the Hon. Cecil Baring, heir to the Earldom of his childless brother, Lord Revelstoke. The island is a small one, barely three miles in circumference, and, although scarcely four miles from the coast, is curiously isolated when one considers its proximity to the capital of the Green Isle. It is only occasionally that any of the frequent excursion steamers from Dublin touch at Lambay. The cliffs which go to make up the greater part of the coastline are exceptionally fine, and rise to a considerable height.

Lambay Castle, the residence of the owner, is an interesting old building of some historic note, from the fact that Archbishop Usher, a staunch adherent to Charles I., took refuge in the house on one occasion when his life was endangered. Some declare that it was on Lambay that St. Patrick first landed in Ireland, and that he built his first church there; while others aver that the old church ruins on the island are those of a sacred edifice founded by St. Columba.

Inishmurray

Another island kingdom in Irish waters is Inishmurray, in Sligo Bay. It has been owned for two hundred years by a family of the name of Waters. The late Michael Waters, the father of the present proprietor, was a great character, and known throughout Ireland. Although his kingdom was small and his subjects few, he ruled without difficulty over a community which knew no law but his will, and who devoted themselves to farming, fishing, and to the manufacture of illicit but excellent whiskey. The island boasts of the most interesting remains of early monastic architecture to be found in Ireland. St. Mulacuis, a disciple of St. Patrick, having established a monastery there, his wooden representation being still preserved in the oratory. Among the oddities of the island is the fact that there is one graveyard for the women, and another, some distance off, for the men. The islanders firmly believe that no male could rest content in the female burying-ground, and that any attempt to inter him there would result in the unrest of his spirit and in ghostly wanderings.

HIRAM CARPENTER'S WONDERFUL CURE OF SKIN DISEASE

After 20 Years of Intense Suffering.

"I have been afflicted for twenty years with an obstinate skin disease, called by some M. D.'s. psoriasis, and others leprosy, commencing on my scalp; and in spite of all I could do, with the help of the most skilful doctors, it slowly but surely extended until a year ago this winter it covered my entire person in the form of dry scales. For the last three years I have been unable to do any labor, and suffering intensely all the time. Every morning there would be nearly a dustpanful of scales taken from the sheet on my bed, some of them half as large as the envelope containing this letter. In the latter part of winter my skin commenced cracking open. I tried everything, almost, that could be thought of, without any relief. The 12th of June I started West, in hopes I could reach the Hot Springs. I reached Detroit and was so low I thought I should have to go to the hospital, but finally got as far as Lansing, Mich., where I had a sister living. One Dr. —— treated me about two weeks, but did me no good. All thought I had but a short time to live. I earnestly prayed to die. Cracked through the skin all over my back across my ribs, arms, hands, limbs; feet badly swollen; toe-nails came off; finger-nails dead and hard as a bone; hair dead, dry and lifeless as old straw. O my God! how I did suffer.

"My sister, Mrs. E. H. Davis, had a small part of a box of Cuticura, in the house. She wouldn't give up; said, 'We will try Cuticura.' Some was applied on one hand and arm. Eureka! there was relief; stopped the terrible burning sensation from the word go. They immediately got Cuticura Resolvent, Ointment and Soap. I commenced by taking one tablespoonful of Cuticura Resolvent three times a day after meals; had a bath once a day, water about blood heat; used Cuticura Soap freely; applied Cuticura Ointment morning and evening. Result: returned to my home in just six weeks from the time I left, and my skin as smooth as this sheet of paper. Hiram E. Carpenter, Henderson, N. Y."

"We hereby certify that we are acquainted with the aforesaid Hiram E. Carpenter, and knew his condition to have been as stated. We believe his statement to be true in every particular." L. B. Simmons & Son, Merchants; G. A. Thompson, Merchant; A. A. Davis; Millard E. Joiner, Merchant; John Carpenter; A. M. Leffingwell, Attorney and Counsellor-at-law, all of Henderson, N. Y.

The above remarkable testimonial was written January 19, 1880, and is republished because of the permanency of the cure. Under date of April 23, 1910, Mr. Carpenter wrote from his present home, 610 Walnut St. So., Lansing, Mich.: "I have never suffered a return of the psoriasis and although many years have passed I have not forgotten the terrible suffering I endured before using the Cuticura Remedies."

Since this cure was made by the Cuticura Remedies, they have made their way to every part of the civilized world. A 32-page booklet describing humors and affections of the skin will be mailed free to those desiring further information by the Potter Drug & Chemical Corporation, Boston, U. S. A.

ONE TO THE PRIME MINISTER

Mr. Asquith, the Prime Minister, is in these days regarded as such a particularly solemn gentleman that the following anecdote is interesting:

Long years ago he attended a small preparatory school for boys, the principal of which was a learned clergyman, and a strict grammarian.

One night, after ten o'clock, when all the boys should have been in bed, he was passing silently along the corridor when he heard sounds of revelry from a darkened dormitory.

He rapped on the door. Silence within. Then:

"Who's there?" called out the future Premier.

"It's me—the principal. Open the door!"

"Ha, ha, ha-a-a!" answered young Asquith. "If it were the principal he would say, 'It is I.'"

Seeing the force of this argument the schoolmaster passed on.

PIGEON PHOTOGRAPHERS

Cameras are Fixed to the Birds Breasts With Braces

The Germans have conceived a new idea of obtaining information which cannot be supplied by human agencies. They are training pigeons as photographers. The inventor of the pigeon photographer is Doctor Neubrovner who, occupying a villa some distance from the sanatorium of which he had charge, thought of establishing a pigeon post between the two places. He found that some of the birds played truant, and made up his mind to know where they went. He had small cameras made, which he fixed on the birds' breasts with braces. These were passed under the wings and buckled on the back. He invented an apparatus by which pigeons flying at the rate of 63 miles an hour can take eight photographs during this period without knowing it. The first results were mediocre. These pigeons which were badly trained revolted against the camera. The pictures obtaingd were so much blurred that they furnished no "information." Doctor Neubrovner renewed his experiments, and has obtained better results. A humorist suggests that all that is now necessary is to put uniforms on the pigeons and enrol them in the German Army. The Germans have great faith in their "pigeon scouts," believing that in a future war they will be able to bring back photographs of an enemy's position.

HAT FACTORY MAY LOCATE IN THIS CITY

Gentlemen Connected With Scheme are in Peterborough Looking Over the Ground—Want to Interest Local People

PROSPECTS BRIGHT

In consideration of this fact a number of gentlemen who are at present interested in a plant in Canada, are contemplating erecting a hat factory in Peterborough, in order to minimise the financial loss occasioned by importation. The proposed factory will employ 115 people, the pay roll will be $1500 a week and the output 50 dozen men's and 75 dozen ladies' hats per day. It is intended that straws and felts shall be the specialties.

These gentlemen desire that the Peterborough inhabitants should become interested in this proposition. Probably many will be interested, realizing what a factory employing 115 persons would mean to Peterborough, as not only would it mean an addition to the city's business, but the money which would otherwise be expended in the importation of hats to Canada, would still be in Canadian circulation, and speaker at a venture, there might possibly be a reduction in the price of hats locally.

An Examiner reporter was shown a specimen of the old time Caandian and American hat together with one of those intended to be manufactured, which showed a marked improvement in favour of the latter, both in style and finish.

Duchess Of Devonshire Is Dead

Special to The Examiner

LONDON, JULY 15.—The Dowager Duchess of Devonshire is dead. She was taken ill at the races yesterday from excesive heat, and died without gaining consciouness, to-day.

If you value the saving in time Moon College shows a profit of from $150 to $200.

STEAMER IS SUNK BY DYNAMITE

Special to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, JULY 15.—A despatch from Port Limon, Costa Rica, says the crew and thirty passengers were drowned, when the steamer "Sima" was sunk by a dynamite explosion during a storm on San Juan River.

DETECTIVE MURDERED

Special to The Examiner:

CHICAGO, JULY 15.—Thomas Schweg, a detective, was shot and killed this morning. The crime is believed to have been committed by a criminal, whose enemy Schweg had incurred. Five men were seen running away from the scene of the shooting.

STEAMSHIP RATES TO BE RAISED

Special to The Examiner:

LIVERPOOL, JULY 15.—Steamship compaies involved in the recent seamen's strike, have decided on an advance of rates to Canada and the United States as an offset of the increase in wages granted. It is possible there will be some increase in freight rates.

MINE-WORKERS CONVICTED

DENVER, COL., JULY 15.—Fourteen members of the United Mine Workers in the strike, were found guilty of contempt of court for not observing the Court's order, prohibiting violence. The sentences vary from a fine of two hundred and fifty to a year's imprisonment.

ESCAPED BY STANDING IN A POND OF WATER

Another Peterborough Survivor of the Porcupine Disaster Tells His Story to the Examiner—Mr. C. H. Reid, of 559 Reid St. Was One of Those Who Escaped From the Dome Mine

Considerable interest is centred in the fact that Mr. C. H.Reid, 559 Reid street was one of the number of men located at the Big Dome mine. He stated to an Examiner reporter last evening that he and 56 others sought refuge in a reservoir situate in the middle of an expanse of clearing while the conflagration swept over it. In this predicament they remained two hours, breathing the burning air, and suffering severely from the smoke.

There was a power house, mill and other buildings erected on the clearing, which all seemed to burn at once. The magazine, however, which contained 15 tons of powder, was still intact, on account of the concrete wall surrounding it having just been completed. A colossal blaze was caused by about 1,400 cords of wood blazing fiercely, but happily the wind was in the men's favour. All the men's suit cases were consumed by the fire, and Mr. Reid only saved his by covering it completely with an old wheelbarrow. The fire swept over the place so suddenly that scarcely a thing could be saved; in fact, to save their lives was not an easy task. Everything seemed to be in flames at once, and the heat was intolerable. As soon as practicable Mr. Reid fought his way to the city and located a doctor for the relief of the sufferers, after which he escaped by the second relief train.

Manager C. E. Weeks and his wife and two children and his mother-in-law remained until the flames began to envelope their dwelling, when they all ran over a hill to some barrels of water which had been placed there for emergency, and although somewhat burned, they were not seriously injured.

To Mr. Reid's knowledge ten persons lost their lives in the Big Dome mine alone, while in the West Dome 27 were similarly unfortunate.

Mr. Reid's party were singularly fortunate in the matter of food, the train by which it was conveyed having comparatively little difficulty in reaching its destination.

Every one of the 57 was saved.

MORE DETAILS OF THE PORCUPINE FIRE HORROR

Special to The Examiner.

Porcupine, July 14.—South Porcupine and Pottsville to-day stand blackened and smoking ruins. There are over one hundred lives lost at a conservative estimate, and the monetary loss runs into many thousands. Prospectors coming in from outlying sections tell of narrow escapes and deaths on every hand, but a week or more will be necessary to complete anything like a correct list.

An estimate of the number drowned in Porcupine Lake while attempting to escape from the fire runs from twenty to forty. At Redstone River five are reported dead on the trail, and possibly twenty on the trail to Mattagami. The bodies of all the dead were recovered here yetserday and in the majority of cases the remains had to be buried at once.

Statement by Committee

This despatch has been sent out by the Porcupine Relief Committee:

"Relief parties have been sent to scatter throughout the camps. Many persons are reported burned on the trains, but very little definite information can be obtained until relief parties return. Some few more are undoubtedly drowned, but we have been unable to recover the bodies as yet. Many men who were in the bush are reported missing, and are being searched for. Definite news will be published as quickly as possible, and the committee are notifying relatives wherever possible. The injured are well cared for, and everyone in Golden City is provided for. Conservative estimate gives loss of life at one hundred. Please advise all papers."

Hundreds of people are on the station platform crowding to get a special train from Porcupine. This makes about one thousand who have left Everything is quiet now.

The sights of dying men are pitiful. Twelve empty canoes on the shores of the lake make the outlook horrible. Dynamite has been used in the lake but no bodies have risen yet It is estimated that forty were drowned. One man was drowned at Pearl lake.

Men from McArthur Township report a hard trip. All the townships near here have been completely swept Pearl Lake, Bewick-Moreing and McIntyre are the only big mines saved.

Little to Eat.

Cobalt, July 14. — The horrors of Porcupine's great disaster increase hourly. Out of the chaos and confusion of the first day following the fire, affairs are becoming adjusted to such an extent that the terrible import of it all can be realized. But never will it be half appreciated as it is by those who went through it. Doctors, nurses and medical supplies arrived during the night and no time was lost in getting to work. Hunger, the usual follower of such terrible incidents, is the one thing that those not otherwise injured, have to fight against, and bread and provisions are being rushed in as fast as possible. With the exception of what remained in the few stores of Golden City, there remained nothing to eat.

Place Dead at Two Hundred

At the beginning it was believed that the greatest loss of life occurred at the mines and in the bush, where many prospectors must have perished; but now the towns may give up the greatest number of dead, and 200 as a total is a conservative estimate of those who lost their lives. As far as is known there was no loss of life in Pottsville, and at first it was thought that South Porcupine's loss numbered but four, but since then five bodies, whether of men or women is not known, have been found at the rear of where the Empire Theatre stood, making it apparent that they were endeavoring to make their escape to the north of the zone of flames.

Porcupine Lake has given up forty-one victims drowned by plunges into the lake, by suffocation while standing in the water, or being swamped when in canoes.

Along the Shaw-Deloro line on the trail lie eight bodies of unknown men, and on the south side of Porcupine Lake are three more to add to the six on the trail between the Dome Mine and South Porcupine. Coffins are being built out of rough lumber, and already four bodies have been shipped out.

Nothing can be added to the stories from the loss at the mines beyond the fact that Captain Jack Hamilton, who was at first counted among the dead, at the West Dome, is alive. So is Jos. Tracey, accountant for F. A. Heinze.

Shaft Caught Fire.

Tracey tells a vivid story of the disaster as it visited the property. It appears that Manager Weiss and those who perished did not take to the shaft as a last resort, but thinking the property well cleared was fairly safe from the fire, went there to get away from thede nse smoke. With them was Mr. Tracey. As the fire approached, he went up the ladder to the surface and there found the bent frame and the shaft house ablaze. He then tried to extinguish the flames but could not, and so shouted down the shaft for the others to come up and find some other means of escape. He then rushed for the swamp, back of the powerhouse, and there buried in the muskeg, escaped the flames which consumed the others.

"Shotgun Bill" King, prospector for Heinze, was among those who came out of the shaft after Mr. Tracey, but he perished on the surface at the mouth of the shaft. It is probable that Mrs. Burt, whose body was found half way up the main, was also trying to follow.

It is known that R. A. Meyer, manager of the Success, and his 54 men, escaped without injury, and it is believed that the camps miraculously escaped the flames, although on the edge of the fire zone and near the Vipond, which was burned.

Nothing has been heard from the Golden Crown, and the owners think that Foreman Fred Constable and his men must be lost.

LIGHTNING STRUCK TREE MAN HAD NARROW ESCAPE

Mr. Robert Briggs of the Quaker Oats factory had a thrilling experience during the storm last evening. Whilst walking on Sherbrooke street a brilliant flash of lightning struck a tree immediately opposite him, tearing off a large limb and scattering splinters and bark in every direction.

At that moment, says Mr. Briggs, blinding flashes of lightning darted hither and thither and appeared to literally rend the sky.

SAW-MILL AT LAKEFIELD IS DESTROYED

LUMBER WAS SAVED

The saw mill of Mr. John McGrath at Lakefield was totally destroyed last night at 8.30 o'clock by fire, caused by a spark from the boiler house. The mill and its machinery were burned, entailing a loss of some $2,000. The Lakefield Fire Brigade turned out and did good work, succeeding in saving the big piles of lumber around the mill. Mr. McGrath intends to rebuild his mill at once.

A QUICK SHAVE

New Machine Which Cleans the Face in Twenty-eight Seconds

SAN FRANCISCO, July 14.—A miniature "lawn mower" operated by electricity is the latest innovation in man's world. It is a buzzing little contrivance that threatens to relegate to history the barber's razor and give more freedom to the talkative tonsorial artist. It made its first demonstration in San Francisco when Martin Effinger, of Los Angeles, famed in the Nevada mining camps as the promoter of "Maricopa 36," was shorn of a two days' growth of beard in just 28 seconds from the time he lathered his own face and turned on the electric juice.

The new fangled shaver is practically the creation of Effinger's fertile brain. One morning while shaving in his home in Los Angeles, a task which he at no time liked, Effinger, glancing out of a window, saw a gardener peacefully mowing a lawn.

"If I could shave my face like that fellow mows that grass," thought Effinger, "I'll go at the infernal job like sport."

Why couldn't a razor be built like a lawn mower? He consulted with a man of science, who said it could. Then they went to work and the result of many months of labor is the machine that shaved Effinger's face at the St. Francis Hotel.

Built almost identically on the lines of a lawn mower, its three blades in spiral shape, Effinger's machine, weighing half a pound, is easily connected by wire to a chandelier and made to work at the rate of 800 revolutions a minute.

SPEAKS FOR ITSELF

To show the great and growing demand for Tiger, the new domesticated Hand Cleaner, one contract was made recently for seven hundred and fifty gross—one hundred and eight thousand tins—to be shipped to the lower provinces. Nothing succeeds like success, and Tiger certainly has been a great success, as everybody likes it. Tiger is sold in Peterborough by all the local dealers. You can procure a large tin at ten cents, if you wish to try it.

ANARCHY IN PERSIA

Special to The Examiner

LONDON, JULY 15.—Despatches from Persia say the Cabinet has resigned and the country is in a state of anarchy. Rebellious movements have started in several provinces. Forty villages were sacked by the rebels.

YOUNG LADY INDIGNANT

A young lady was standing on a crossing yesterday afternoon, waiting for the passing of the water waggon, so that she could cross the street, with safety. Before his wagon had passed the crossing, the driver turned on the water, and the young lady was drenched through all her skirt clothing. She was very indignant when she dropped into the Examiner office and showed her beautifully laundried white skirt, saturated and unstarched by the civic substitute for oil, prematurely projected upon an inoffensive citizen.

57th BAND LEAVES FOR SCARBORO MONDAY

Will Play a Week's Engagement at the Popular Toronto Resort—A List of the Programmes—Mr. Gliddon's Organization Will Play Over One Hundred Different Selections During the Week

The Band of the 57th Regiment, under the direction of Mr. R. Gliddon, will play a week's engagement at Scarboro Beach, Toronto, beginning on Monday next, July 17th. A special car has been arranged by C.P.R., leaving Monday at 7.40 in the morning.

The Bandmaster requests that all members of the Band see that all instruments and buttons are properly cleaned before that date.

Concerts will be given each afternoon at 3 o'clock and each evening at 8 o'clock.

Finds A Gold Mine As The Result Of A Vision

Special to The Examiner:

ROGERS, ARK., July 13.—On top of the Ozark Mountains, not many miles from here, there is a diamond-shaped excavation, each side 125 feet long, from which gold is being taken day by day as a result of a vision that came to William H. Kruse, a former wholesale and retail fruit dealer, and a member of the Board of Trade of Minneapolis.

This gold mine, the only one in Arkansas, is on a little farm, the property of Kruse's father, and is in a geological formation to which gold is foreign.

The vision that pointed out to Kruse the location of his gold mine is but one of many that have been profitable to him and his friends. In fact, Kruse declares all his actions in the last decade have been guided by his visions.

Kruse believes religiously in them. And he has followers that believe he is endowed with supernatural powers. So strongly are they impressed that on a day set apart by Kruse as the one upon which he should uncover gold, scores of residents of this little town, headed by a band, marched to the little farm southwest of Rogers.

A noonday meal was served by Kruse and at 2 o'clock all pitched in and helped work the mine. This was a part of the festivities. By five o'clock five piles of ore had been taken out, the first being reached at a depth of seven feet. This was shipped to St. Louis and assayed. Kruse avers that his powers of prophecy came to him as a sort of sixth sense.

HAD NARROW ESCAPE AT POTTSVILLE

Virginia Earle and Octavia Neale Vaudeville People who Recently Played in Peterborough Had a Close Call

MISS NEALE'S STORY

Miss Virginia Earle and Miss Octavia Neale, two vaudeville actresses who have played in Peterborough several times, the two visiting the Royse as a "sister" team and the latter singing at the "Rex" Theatre a few weeks ago, had a narrow escape from death in the Porcupine fire, while filling an engagement at Pottsville. Miss Neale, who will be remembered at the girl who exploited the harem skirt here, tells a Toronto newspaper the following story of her experience:

"I can remember clearly every incident, It surely is a wonder that there were not more perished."

"I was in Pottsville when the fire broke out there. I had all my clothes in two trunks over in Golden City, and went over there to get some costumes which were at the Lyric Theatre. I was just taking one costume out of a trunk whe nI heard a scream of fire, and right after I heard an explosion. The shock threw me right across the room. I managed to get out of the building and started to cross the bridge. Men were running in every direction and the whole town seemed to be out. I started over the bridge which was not completed and had to finish the walk over on the stringers. The end of it had caught fire, but some men put it out.

Wet Towel Around Her Head.

"I was standing in Mr. Hersey's with Miss Earle and some other women when the second explosion occurred. It blew all the windows out of the house and the plaster off the walls. I ran along the pier first having a wet towel tied around my head. The smoke completely obscured everything and I couldn't see my hand in front of me. Several times I fell flat on my face before I was able to reach the pier.

"I then went to the house of Dr. Rogers and after putting in a terrible night was taken across in a boat in the morning.

"My clothes were in an awful condition and I had nothing else to make a change with. Some kind lady lent me this dress and while it doesn't exactly fit me, I am thankful that I escaped with my life. I don't think I shall ever forget this experience if I live to be a thousand years old.

Collision With Box Car.

"When the second relief train came we got on. There were two coaches and, I think, four box cars. The engineer passed a switch point or something, I don't know just what happened, but we banged in to another box car which was standing on a siding. A man in the seat in front of me jumped right out of the window. He had a small satchel in his hand and I suppose he thought we were in for another wreck. I don't know whether he got back on the train again, because I never saw him after.

"All that I can say is that I am truly thankful that I am alive."

BACK IN BAND

Mr. Geo. Chambers Was Handling Bass Drum Last Night

The crowd which attended the 57th band concert in Victoria Park last night were glad to see Mr. Geo. Chambers, the veteran bass drummer, back at his old post again. Mr. Chambers has been out of the band for some time and has been sadly missed. His coming back adds strength to the organization, that is appreciated, in view of the important engagement at Toronto next week.

TO-DAY IS ST. SWITHIN'S DAY

St. Swithin was a weather prophet long before the modern weatherman set up business. He gained an influence so great that even his birthday ruled the weather for forty days. It is stated, as a fact, that is, however, hardly capable of proof, that the patriarch Noah, loosed the ark from its moorings on a rainy St. Swithin's day; hence this big rain of forty days and forty nights, that precipitated the greatest freshet on record. This circumstance or some other, no doubt, gave rise to the following popular English rhyme, which its believers claim ,contains more truth than poetry:

St. Swithin's day if thou dost rain
For forty days it will remain;
St. Swithin's day, if thou be fair,
For forty days 'twill rain no mair.

There is not much comfort in this. It's a toss up which would hit us harder—forty days rain or forty days drought. If St. Swithin's day begins at midnight we are stuck for forty days' rain, for it was coming down merrily this morning shortly after twelve.

WEEDS.

In Thorold township, Welland county, the township authorities are enforcing the law in regard to dealing with noxious weeds. Several farmers have been heavily fined for neglecting to destroy weeds on their farms, and a batch of fifteen offenders were, at last accounts, waiting their turn to appear before the magistrate. This matter is simply mentioned to show that there are municipal authorities that realize their responsibility, in a matter that so vitally affects the farmer, lessens the value of his labour, decreases his crop production, and besides, endangers the interests of his neighbours in a similar way. We have a few weeds in Peterborough, that seems to be immune from municipal interference.

FOREST FIRE WASTE.

The loss of every kind, material and of life and health, represented by the Porcupine district fire scourge, can never be estimated. The loss of provincial property in the destruction of forest resources is incalculable. Such calamities in dry seasons may not be preventible, but much may be done by efficient fire-ranging work. In 1910 the Ontario government had 1,000 forest rangers at work, but unfortunately they were not all capable men. A report of the Department, says it is a difficult matter to get capable men for the wages paid. Efficient fire ranging should not be a question of wages. The loss of timber and injury to soil, and future interests, by the Porcupine forest fires, is a matter of time greater than would have been the cost of efficient fire ranging, even if ten times the ordinary wages were paid. Some times economy is the equivalent of the greatest extravagance.

STRANING AT A GNAT.

The Mail and Empire comes to the championship of Lord Strathcona, picturing him as the victim of a plot to secure his retirement. Of course it evolves all the charges in this regard from its imagination. If Lord Strathcona were a boy of forty instead of a man of ninety years, and had an anxiety to remain in harness, there might be a case made out. There is nothing surprising that a man who has well served his country in a responsible and difficult capacity for nearly twenty years, and that, too, on borrowed years—twenty of them lived after he had passed the Psalmist's allotted length of days—should seek retirement without being the object of a cabal to secure his removal. But in this case, as in others, anything to beat Laurier—from an alliance with the empire-wrecking Nationalists to a ghost story about the betrayal of Canada's venerable High Commissioner. The organ is straining a ta gnat.

RESPONSIBILITY.

This morning when a city official's attention was called to the filling in of a trench for a sewer service, in such a manner as to leave a hump in the street for half its width, he deprecated such criticism and demonstrated the folly of such criticism, by remarking that it was of no use, for it ran off the responsible shoulders of the city officials like water off a duck's back. If the streets were so made that water would run off them like water off a duck's back, no complaint would be possible. If that is the spirit that our city officials have with regard to their responsibility or in respect of spending the people's money, it is unfortunate. The civic officials are, as a matter of theory, the people's servants, not their masters, as they seem to be when they hold themselves above criticism. The first instalment of city taxes is nearly due, and it won't reconcile the ratepayer any better to parting with a large share of his income, to be told that it will be spent without his having the right to remonstrate if he considers that it is being improperly expended. We spend money on our streets with the supposed intention of making them better for public use; and it does not seem unreasonable for the ratepayers to demand that they should not be destroyed so far as their comfortable use is concerned, by leaving mounds from improperly filled trenches, at right angles to the line of driveway, to "give the bumps" to auto cars and other vehicles. Let the civic official with the duck's back, ask automobilists what they think about it, and he will not be left in doubt as to their sentiments.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Conservative nominating convention is called to meet in a music hall—probably with a view of facilitating harmony.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, says the Toronto Star, comes back from the Old Land the outstanding figure of an Empire conference. Mr. R. L. Borden comes back from the West the outstanding figure of an unsuccessful attempt to convince Canadian farmers that they do not know their business.

NO REASON WHY THEY SHOULD.

(Montreal Herald.)

Sir Wilfrid did well to avow his disbelief that the manufacturers of Canada were at the back of the agitation against tthe Taft-Fielding agreement. If they are, or if any important section of them are, they ought not to be, and that is about all a Minister reponsible for his acts can go by. It did look, for a time, as if some of the manufacturers were in a bit of a panic, not because anything actually had happened to them, but because they were afraid something might happen in the course of time. When they took time to look over the ground they saw how little cause there was for alarm. They realized that, long before they had perceived the danger themselves, Sir Wilfrid had forseen it and had guarded against it by public statements that the manufacturing industry of Canada must be left alone, their vested rights secured to them. They learned that in the negotiations with the States this same attitude was adopted and insisted upon as a necessary preliminary. And finally they had the most specific assurances, given by Sir Wilfrid and his colleagues in open Parliament, that the manufacturers of Canada would not be subjected to the perils of competition with the more highly organized industries of the United States under conditions which would impair their chance to exist and prosper.

All the indications are that when the manufacturers came to see the position in its true light they lost whatever early interest they had in opposing the agreement. There is now no sign that they are opposing it.

THE PASSING OF THE DREADNOUGHT?

(London Advertiser)

American papers are taking an interest in the recent announcement that Sir Philip Watts, director of construction for the British admiralty has devised a much smaller and less expensive battleship to do the work of a Dreadnought with the speed of a destroyer. Time was when the old-fashioned Yankee paid no attention to European wars and rumours of wars. He lived peaceably at home, skinning buffaloes and English immigrants, he let the outside world go by, and hardly thought of the game of gunning on the high seas. But now he keeps up a fleet with the best of them, and is getting ready to follow old England's lead in the new invention.

If the new battleship is to sail nearly forty miles an hour, with guns the equal of those carried by the Dreadnought, it ought to have the name of the dreadnought-destroyer. The German navy of 1912, which took away the appetites of, panicstricken jingoes a year or so ago, will soon look like Spanish galleons, an easy prey for the lightning manoeuvres of the coming British fleet. The best thing about Sir Philip Watt's invention is that it will again put the emphasis on seamanship more than on mere equipment. This should suit Great Britain, which was said to be handicapped by her own creation of the Dreadnought, in the maintenance of the sovereignty of the seas.

Canada may also be pleased with the cautious policy of her government a year ago in omitting the expensive Dreadnought and starting our navy with the permanently useful cruiser, instead of expensive Dreadnoughts, costing 15 millions each, that would have been useless and replaced by another style of battleship.

THE FAVOURED NATION TREATIES.

(Manitoba Free Press)

A correspondent asks the Free Press for information as to the relationship between the favoured-nation treaties to which Canada is subject and the recent reciprocity arrangement with the United States. The nations with which such treaties are in existence are twelve in number—Argentina, Austria-Hungary Bolivia, Colombia, Denmark, Japan, Norway, Russia, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, and Venezuela. With two exceptions—Japan and Spain—these treaties date from a period anterior to confederation. Canada is subject to the favoured-nation clause in these treaties because, at the time they were made, the British Dominions overseas had not the right to contract themselves out from their operations, as they now have. The effect of these favoured-nation treaties is that all the concessions Canada gives to the United States must be extended to these countries. Canada gets no advantage in these countries in return, nor does the United States extend to them the rights to which they are entitled in Canada.

Although the character of Canada's commerce with these favoured nations makes the concession occasioned by the reciprocity treaty of little or no value, the possible danger of being bound by these treaties has been recognized by the Dominion Government, and, at the recent Imperial Conference. Sir Wilfrid Laurier secured the passage of a resolution calling upon the Imperial Government to have these treaties renegotiated, giving the Dominions the power to declare whether or not they will be parties to them. The result will doubtless be that Canada will free herself, within the course of the next two or three years, of the obligation to extend to these nations the concessions which she is giving the United States in return for similar concessions.

THE SIN AND SHAME OF SLANG.

The Toronto Star very appropriately says:

Slang is sometimes defended because it enriches the language, adding to the store of piquant and forcible expressions; and this defence, to a certain extent, holds good. But slang has also a tendency to impoverish the language. Such an expression as a "a roast" or "call him down" is used long after its freshness and piquancy have departed; and in the meantime such legitimate words as scold, rebuke, challenge, contradict, pass out of common use.

Slang, as the Star points out, not only tends to impoverish the language, but tends to, and actually does, debase, disfigure, and dishonour the language. A young lady would consider herself disgraced if she should ornament a costume of silken attire, all a la mode, with a rosette of soiled cotton rags, yet she complacently befouls her speech with slang words and phrases, originating, perhaps, with thieves and thugs, in some vile city slum quarter—slang which, if traced ot its origin, has a filthiness of double meaning, or a quality of blasphemy that would shock her if she knew. When a young lady in conversation threatens to reprove her "young man" for some offence she declares that she will "rub it in" so that he will not forget it. If she traced the quoted phrase to its origin or its original application she would blush to the tips of her back hair. When a lady, elegantly attired, and with an educational accomplishment of boarding school calibre, uses the expective, "O je!" or as it is usually spelled in the yellow journals—"O gee!" she does not think that she is using a contracted form of the sacred name of Jesus, flippantly and blasphemously abbreviated by some tough or degenarte of the slums, as he would curtail the name of his pal to Rob, or Dick, or Sam. Let every clean-minded, clean-living young lady recollect that when she is using slang she not only gives pain to her friends and to civilized people generally, but she is degrading herself in this respect, from the position of a virtuous girl to the level of a girl who is not virtuous, by using the language that originates from the unnameable creatures of the lowest level to which woman can fall.

British Conservative Leader On The Imperial Conference

The view that the late Imperial Confernece was a fiasco, which is strongly held by the violent wing of the Chamberlainita Tariff Reformers and Empire-makers in a desperate hurry, is not taken by the responsible leaders of the British Unionist party. We quoted the other day the emphatic statement by Lord Curzon that in his judgment the result of the conference proceedings marked "an enormous advance." Mr. Balfour has made it even plainer that he has a sympathetic understanding of the problems which beset the unification of the Empire, and is entirely friendly to the policy of union through co-operation, to which the conference adhered. At a banquet tendered to the Prime Ministers of the Overseas Dominions by the Constitution club, Mr. Balfour proposed the health of the guests; and in his address the gave apt and eloquent expression to the problem of Empire and the conditions which must become factors in its solution. Mr. Balfour said:

"I cannot help thinking that as we have now thoroughly realized in every one of these great communities that each is to manage its own life, makes its own experiments as freely as if it were an independent political entity—as that is a truth thoroughly understood by every politician of every party in every one of these several communities—I cannot help thinking that upon the solid basis we shall build up something which the world has never yet seen, which political dreamers in the past have never yet dreamed of, a coalition of free and self-governing communities, who feel that they are never more themselves, never more masters of their own fate, than when they recognize that they are parts of a greater whole from which they can draw inspiration and strength, and to which they can give inspiration and strength; and that each lives its own life and is most itself when it feels itself in the fullest sense a self-governing entity, which yet has a larger whole to look to, whose interests are not alien to it, on whom it can rest in time of trouble, from whom it can draw experience, to whom it can look, whom it can aid, and from whom it can receive aid.

"That is an ideal coalition, congregation—use what phrase you like—of free, self-governing communities, which has never yet existed in the world, but of which we see the beginnings at the present time, and of which only our posterity will see the full fruition. It is in the light of this vision, if vision it be, this dream, if dream it be, that I ask you to welcome our visitors today. I acknowledge that the sort of ideal I have ventured to sketch is one which can only be realised slowly and with difficulty. Each one of these great communities consists of hard-working men immersed in their own affiars, not over-endowed with imagination, easily looking at the immediate needs, rather than at the distant goal, and yet, in spite of all those difficulties, I believe that that goal will be reached.

"In such Conferences as are now going on, tentatively, possibly, now and then, there are errors and mistakes made. There must be so, there have been so, there will be so, whoever represents these great communities from oversea and what ever Government be in office in this country, but yet, tentatively and surely, I am certain that these Conferences are leading to the realization of that ideal which I have ventured to sketch. And it is because our friends have come over to labour in this great cause, because they are labouring in it with self-sacrificing zeal, because they represent in their own persons the affection and regard which the Dominions have for the Empire as a whole, because they know they are met in a like spirit in these islands—it is because, I say, all this is happening, because each time they meet they implaint in the hearts of their people something of this universal spirit of the British Empire, great for defence purposes, great for purposes of civilization, threatening no man, fearing no man—it is because of that I ask you now unanimously and with heartfelt enthusiasm to drink the toast of 'Our Guests.'"

The Empire is to be "a coalition of free, self-governing communities," each of which "is to mange its own affairs, carry out its own life and make its own experements as freely as if it were an independent political entity." This delineates admirably the conception of Empire, which found expression in the late Imperial Conference is a series of resolutions emphasizing the policy of coalition as against that of centralization. It is enlightening to turn from the words of Lord Curzon and Mr. Balfour, in sympathetic approval of the work done by the Conference, to the shrill and hysterical complaints of the aggressive ultra-Imperialistis; the contrast gives the measure of the sense and sanity of the movement to tie the Empire together with a rigid constitution which would put the reins of control into the hands of a central governing body. These schemes get a good deal of newspaper support in England; but no responsible public man of any political party appears to care to identify himself with them.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

IN THE State of Missouri the Widows' Pension Law which was passed in the last session of the legislature is being put into effect.

In the famous reform bill of Chancellor Lloyd-George of England there is a clause providing for a pension or allowance for maternity cases.

By the Missouri law any needy widow is entitled to receive a sum not to exceed ten dollars a month for one child attending school and as much as five dollars a month for each additional one.

The idea of the bill is to enable poor widows to keep their children at school without being obliged to go out to work themselves and thus deprive the children of their birthright of a mother's care and a well-kept home. Incidentally it is said that such a scheme would cost no more than the board of the children if the widow were obliged to place them in asylums.

The idea of the maternity pension, as I understand it, is to supply a state aid that will make it unnecessary for any woman to work directly before or after the birth of her child and to insure proper care and comforts at this time to the poorest mother in the land. In at least one state we already have a law making it illegal for a woman to work for a certain number of weeks before and after her child is born, and this maternity pension is surely the logical and inevitable corollary to such a law.

Now, don't you think these are two splendid bills? I do.

And I am calling them to your attention to-day because I hope that knowing about them will inspire you to want them in your own community.

Don't you think it would be splendid if destitute widows and mothers-to-be—and incidentally the next generation—all over the world were protected by such laws?

Very well, then, why not do what you can to see that they are passed in your corner of "all the world?"

You don't know how you can do that? Well, do you belong to a woman's club or a big Sunday-school class or a Home Missionary Society or any large organization that could be brought to take an interest in such things?

If you do, why not tell this society at its next meeting about these laws and get it to pass a resolution approving them and ordering its secretary to write to its state representatives and senators asking them what can be done about such legislation.

Judge Porterfield, of Kansas City, Missouri, is putting the Missouri law into effect for the first time, and he doubtless would be glad to send a copy of it and information about its workings to any woman interested in it. And information about the maternity pension could surely be obtained from the English State Department.

Surely this is a subject in which any woman with the least bit of altruism in her make-up, that is, any woman whose unselfishness extends beyond her love for her own immediate family and makes her care something what is to become of these myriad "sisters under the skin" who are less fortunate than she, cannot fail to be deeply interested.

THE FAMILY HEARTH

MORE COOL DRINKS

A very simple and refreshing drink which is often made for the benefit of farmers and others who have to work out of doors on very hot days is the Harvest Drink. To make it, take a quart of cold, fresh water, add one tablespoonful of ground ginger, three tablespoonfuls of sugar, and one-half pint of lemon juice. Vinegar may be used in place of the lemons if more convenient, and it will be found that the ginger will mix better if blended with the sugar before both are added to the water.

Another cooling summer beverage is Cream Nectar. Dissolve one and one-half pounds of white sugar in a pint and a half of boiling water; add two ounces of tartaric acid, and put the mixture on the stove for about twenty minutes. Remove, and when cold, stir in the beaten white of two eggs, adding flavoring, preferably lemon, to taste. The use of drinks containing tartaric acid is not very advisable if they are indulged in to any great extent.

To make the old-fashioned raspberry vinegar, put the ripe raspberries into an earthen jar or jug, cover with cider vinegar and let stand for twenty-four hours. Pour off the liquid, put it over fresh berries, and again let it stand over night in a cool place; then allowing one pound of white sugar to each pint of juice, boil to a thin syrup, skim and bottle. When serving, add about one-half glass of the vinegar to one-half glass of ice water.

HOT WEATHER PRECAUTIONS

Although it is to be hoped that there will be no recurrence of such heat as we endured within the past ten days, hot weather is to be expected during the midsummer weeks, and it is well to be prepared for contingencies. Very high temperatures are especially dangerous in this latitude, both because we are unaccustomed to them and because most people are ignorant of the necessary precautions, which are familiar to those living in the tropics.

Dr. Ernest J. Lederle, Health Commissioner of New York city, is quoted by the Knickerbocker Press as giving the following simple rules for hot weather, which ought to be remembered and followed:

"Dress lightly and as cool as possible.

"Avoid physical exercise as far as possible.

"Keep out of the sun.

"Drink cool water in plenty.

"Avoid ice water, sweet drinks and alcoholic beverages, and tea and coffee in excess.

"Eat sparingly—of fish, fruits, and vegetables, cereals, clean milk, and buttermilk.

"Wash and bathe in cool water at least twice a day—take salt water baths (ocean) if possible.

The use of alcoholic drinks is a very common cause of prostration, and Dr. Lederle advises strongly against them, even in moderation. He is equally positive in opposing the soda fountain. "There is an increasing tendency among all classes to drink ice cold, sweet drinks," he says. "I can not be too emphatic in warning persons against the evil effects of the habit. Such drinks ought to be shunned as should alcoholic drinks."

While we all cannot follow all the rules laid down by Dr. Lederle, we may at least observe as many of them as is possible under the circumstances.

* * *

Never suspect a friend of doing you wrong until the proof of it is as plain and as clear as the sun at noon on a cloudless day, and then—yes, even then, do not accuse or censure until you have heard from his own lips his version of the supposed wrong. If you were ever a friend to him he is certainly entitled to that much forbearance and consideration. If this rule was practised, many a misunderstanding would be averted, and many a heartache spared.

* * *

Boys, you have but one mother; care for her and spare her. She is not a beast of burden to drive along the highway of life. There is no love like your mother's love; you may not know it now, but you will some day.

* * *

The need of some place to drop down for a moment and forget things is a crying one in most homes. There ought to be enough sofas around to accommodate all the family. Five minutes' rest will prevent many a family row, and how can you get rest if you have to pull shams off the bed and roll up the overlid. A shabby old lounge, where you can get at it, is worth its weight in gold; and you won't want to die half so many times if you make use of it.

* * *

Teach children to be polite. Teach them there is nothing but goodness of heart of so much durability as a pleasing deportment. They will lose the idea after a while that it is smart to be pert and boisterous, and take pride in being little ladies and gentlemen. Teach them to say, "How do you do?" or "Good morning" to everybody with whom you are acquainted; never to contradict, whisper, hum, beat a tat too with the fingers on the furniture or loll around in lounging attitudes in company; to say "Yes, Ma'am," and "No sir," "What ma'am?" "If you please," and "Excuse me," if it is necessary to pass before any one, or to leave the table before the rest, and never to do any of the things for which it is necessary to ask to be excused unless it is absolutely unavoidable; not to toss things instead of handing them; not to listen to anything not intended for their ears; not to refuse to give the whole to a visitor when half will not do. A polite child is the best of companions but a rude one is a troublesome nuisance, and will find himself learning at eighteen or twenty things which should have been taught when a child.

* * *

Girls of a marriageable age do not like to tell how old they are, but you can find out by following the subjoined instructions, the young lady doing the figuring: Tell her to put down the number of the month in which she was born, then to multiply it by 2, then to add five, then to multiply it by 50, then to add her age, then to subtract 365, then to add 115 then tell her to tell you the amount she has left. The two figures to the right will tell you her age and the remainder the month of her birth. For example, if the amount is 822 she is twenty-two years old and was born in the eighth month (August). Try it.

* * *

A happy home, whether it consist of two or twelve members, is one where love presides at the board and watches over the couches; where each person loves himself last and considers the other first; where the irritable word is restrained and the affectionate thought given utterance, and where each is glad in laboring for the other's comfort and relieving the other's cares.

* * *

If there is one thing above another a young man should be ashamed of doing, it is loafing without aim or purpose or profit on the streets or in stores day after day, all week. If you have nothing to do, stay at home—a part of the time at any rate. No young man with any self-respect will content himself with aspiring to no higher reputation than that of a chronic loafer and store box magnate. Nothing will so blunt the higher faculties of the mind as inactivity and no inactivity is so baneful and malevolent in its effect as that voluntary idleness termed loafing.

* * *

Troubles come to all of us. The past is strewn with broken expectations and inconsolable griefs. Death has left its shadows across almost every hearthstone and its constant ravages ever approaching near to us fill the bravest spirits with terror. But to us the rainbow of hope has been ever present. We have never believed that existence was purposeless. The same all-prevailing Power, whose handiwork jewelled the heavens with stars, who levelled the plains, who lifted up the mountains and taught the rivers to run down to the sea, designed our being and contemplated our destiny.

* * *

If you can have help enough to keep your household machinery in perfect running order without making a machine of yourself, do so by all means. White floors are lovely, shining tin ware is very fine, spotless windows and highly polished silver are a delight; the mending basket, emptied every week, is much to be desired, but there are things of more importance, and if it all depends on one pair of hands, one back, and one set of nerves, for Heaven's sake, for your own sake, for your children's sake, don't.

A girl that is not neatly dressed is called a sloven, and no one likes to look at her. Her face may be pretty and her eyes bright, but if there is a spot of dirt on her cheek, and her fingers' ends are black with ink, and her shoes are not laced or buttoned up, and her apron is dirty, and her collar not buttoned, and her skirt is torn, she cannot be liked. Learn to be neat; and when you have learned it, it will almost take care of itself.

An All-British Lord Mayor.

"When I got out of bed this morning I left behind me Irish linen sheets and Witney blankets. I went into the bathroom and used English soap and Irish towels. I dressed in Scotch tweeds and put on English-made boots, and went to breakfast supplied wholly with British produce. So far as I am concerned, everything I eat, drink, and wear comes from the British Empire." Such was the interesting confession made a few days ago by Sir T. Vezey Strong, Lord Mayor of London, in connection with the movement for an all-British shopping week.

There's a divinity that shapes our ends,
Rough-hew them how we will.
Hamlet, Act V., Sc. II.

Shakespeare is frequently spoken of as the supreme mind of the race. This may seem to many an extravagant claim. Some will point to Michael Angelo and give him the palm for greatness, as he occupies a high position in four arts, architecture, painting, sculpture, and even verse, whereas Shakespeare was supreme in but one, the drama. Shakespeare's exalted position is due to the fact that he concentrated his mind on life. Mankind is the highest study of man, and Shakespeare, more fully than any other thinker in the world's history, has in a practical way investigated and solved man's relationship to society and to the universe in which he lives. It would be difficult to find a character that has not its parallel in Shakespeare's works; it would be hard to discover a situation that has not its like on his pages.

It is most natural that the minds of thinking men should enquiringly turn to him to find out his attitude towards the Infinite. Was he atheist, deist, or theist? is frequently asked. The loftiest genius of all times was distinctly a believer in a Supreme Being who was not only the creative impulse in the universe, but is the guiding principle in it and in the lives of the individual inhabitants of even one of the least of the worlds, the Earth. Men may rough-hew their lives how they will, but they "are in God's hands." Their ends are shaped by infinite wisdom. It is only necessary to read Shakespeare's great tragedies to see this principle at work. Vice and virtue are shown in all of them in conflict. Shakespeare invariably makes good triumphant. The fate of Macbeth, of Richard III., and Antony are but manifestations of retributive justice.

It is maintained by many that Shakespeare was merely an artist, that he constructed plays to please, that from them it is impossible to form a judgment as to his belief or character. The mental attitude of Scott, George Eliot, Hawthorne, Victor Hugo, and Balzac can be arrived at from their creations, and equally as it true of Shakespeare. His pages as a whole show that he was intensely and broadly religious, and utterances of his noblest characters emphasize this. Hamlet was evidently very dear to Shakespeare, and the poet has used him to express many of his own points of view with regard to the problems of existence. It is on Hamlet's lips that he puts the words that have placed many a heart puzzled by the mysteries of life:

'There's a divinity that shapes our ends,
Rough-hew them how we will."

To this speech Horatio, Hamlet's good angel, replies by way of emphasis, "That is most certain." Yes, it is certain; and was most certain to Shakespeare. His work, like all really great work, is largely inspired by the overwhelming sense of Deity,

'In the light of setting suns,
And the round ocean, and the living air,
And the blue sky, and in the mind of man."

He could say with Hamlet, "There is a special providence in the fall of a sparrow," or with old Adam of "As You Like It" he could speak sympathetically of the being that

"Doth the ravens feed.
Yea, providentially caters for the sparrows."

Shakespeare no doubt often paused, as did Hamlet, to wonder at the character of the undiscovered country from whose bourne no traveller returns, but never on his page is there anything to lead the student to believe that he doubted the existence of God, and there is much to convince that he held that the universe and society are sustained and regulated by an over-ruling Providence. Shakespeare frequently makes his noblest characters appeal to God in their difficulties and doubts, and acknowledge His influence in their successes. Henry V. is peculiarly Shakespeare's hero, and Henry V. is a sturdy soldier of unquestioning faith. It was God who "brought to light the dangerous treason" of his nobles. After notable victories his cry was "Praised be God, and not our strength"; or "O God, Thy arm was there;
And not to us, but to thine arm alone
Ascribe we all."

Portia of the "Merchant of Venice" in her speech on mercy is clearly voicing Shakespeare's thought on the subject. In this speech mercy is called an attribute of God Himself.

One of the most remarkable instances of Shakespeare's recognition of Divine providence is where Banquo, tempted, is battling with the tempter, and, as he retires to rest, prays that "the merciful powers" may restrain in him the cursed thoughts that nature gives way to in repose. There are a hundred such instances of Shakespeare's belief in an omnipotent being whose attributes are love, justice and mercy, who is no pagan deity sitting apart unmindful of his worlds or his children, but a vitalising principle in the universe and in the hearts of men.

GRAY HAIR WILL MAKE YOU LOOK OLD

Use Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur and Your Gray Hair Will Quickly Vanish.

Gray hair is a mark of age, and nothing that can be said as to its beauty will effect the disadvantages of this mark of age set upon your brow.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy darkens the hair and restores it to its youthful beauty. Our grandmothers and their grandmothers before them used sage and sulphur for darkening their hair. Nothing has ever been found more effective for this purpose than these two time-honored remedies, but Wyeth, a modern chemist, has combined the two with other ingredients which makes a delightful dressing for the hair, and which not only removes every trace of dandruff but promotes the growth of the hair. It also stops the hair from falling out and makes it beautiful.

Fifty Years of Song.

The approaching retirement of Mme. Albani recalls the prima donna's interesting confession that she began to sing before she began to walk. "As a baby," she says, "I was remarkable for the power of my voice, if not for its quality. My parents recognided this, and at the age of four I began my musical studies. I have been singing ever since." Mme. Albani will celebrate her fifty-ninth birthday in November next, and made her first appearance on the concert-platform when she was eight years of age. Her most cherished memories hover around her intimate friendship with Queen Victoria. The great singer was a frequent visitor to Buckingham Palace and Windsor, and was a welcome guest at Balmoral. When she sang before the Kaiser once in Berlin he afterwards shook hands with her and said, "Good-bye. When you see her, give my love to grandmamma."

A Real Lung Tonic

There are many preparations that will relieve a cough—few that will cure it. The first class, containing such drugs as Opium and Morphine, simply deaden the irritation and stop the cough, but do little or no permanent good.

Rev. Father Morriscy

"Father Morriscy's No. 10"

does not contain a trace of these dangerous drugs, but is an absolutely safe and scientific preparation of Nature's own remedies—Herbs, Roots and Balsams.

It entirely removes the irritation that caused the cough, by cleaning out the mucus, stopping the inflammation and healing the delicate membrane of throat and lungs.

Moreover, it tones up and strengthens the whole system, particularly the lungs, and protects against future coughs and colds.

A happy home, whether it consist of two or twelve members, is one where love presides at the board and watches over the couches; where each person loves himself last and considers the other first; where the irritable word is restrained and the affectionate thought given utterance, and where each is glad in laboring for the other's comfort and relieving the other's cares.

If there is one thing above another a young man should be ashamed of doing, it is loafing without aim or purpose or profit on the streets or in stores day after day, all week. If you have nothing to do, stay at home—a part of the time at any rate. No young man with any self-respect will content himself with aspiring to no higher reputation than that of a chronic loafer and store box magnate. Nothing will so blunt the higher faculties of the mind as inactivity and no inactivity is so baneful and malevolent in its effect as that voluntary idleness termed loafing.

Troubles come to all of us. The past is strewn with broken expectations and inconsolable griefs. Death has left its shadows across almost every hearthstone and its constant ravages ever approaching near to us fill the bravest spirits with terror. But to us the rainbow of hope has been ever present. We have never believed that existence was purposeless. The same all-prevailing Power, whose handiwork jewelled the heavens with stars, who levelled the plains, who lifted up the mountains and taught the rivers to run down to the sea, designed our being and contemplates our destiny.

If you can have help enough to keep your household machinery in perfect running order without making a machine of yourself, do so by all means. White floors are lovely, shining tin ware is very fine, spotless windows and highly polished silver are a delight, the mending basket, emptied every week, is much to be desired, but there are things of more importance, and if it all depends on one pair of hands, one back, and one set of nerves, for Heaven's sake, for your own sake, for your children's sake, don't.

A girl that is not neatly dressed is called a sloven, and no one likes to look at her. Her face may be pretty and her eyes bright, but if there is a spot of dirt on her cheek, and her fingers' ends are black with ink, and her shoes are not laced or buttoned up, and her apron is dirty, and her collar not buttoned, and her skirt is torn, she cannot be liked. Learn to be neat, and when you have learned it, it will almost take care of itself.

An All-British Lord Mayor.

"When I got out of bed this morning I left behind me Irish linen sheets and Witney blankets. I went into the bathroom and used English soap and Irish towels. I dressed in Scotch tweeds and put on English-made boots, and went to breakfast supplied wholly with British produce. So far as I am concerned, everything I eat, drink, and wear comes from the British Empire." Such was the interesting confession made a few days ago by Sir T. Vesey Strong, Lord Mayor of London, in connection with the movement for an all-British shopping week.

Seems Possible.

SERMON FROM SHAKESPEARE

(Copyright, 1909, by Bradley-Garretson Co., Ltd.)

There's a divinity that shapes our ends,
Rough-hew them how we will.
Hamlet, Act V., Sc. II.

Shakespeare is frequently spoken of as the supreme mind of the race. This may seem to many an extravagant claim. Some will point to Michael Angelo and give him the palm for greatness, as he occupies a high position in four arts, architecture, painting, sculpture, and even verse, whereas Shakespeare was supreme in but one, the drama. Shakespeare's exalted position is due to the fact that he concentrated his mind on life. Mankind is the highest study of man, and Shakespeare, more fully than any other thinker in the world's history, has in a practical way investigated and solved man's relationship to society and to the universe in which he lives. It would be difficult to find a character that has not its parallel in Shakespeare's works; it would be hard to discover a situation that has not its like on his pages.

It is most natural that the minds of thinking men should enquiringly turn to him to find out his attitude towards the Infinite. Was he atheist, deist, or theist? is frequently asked. The loftiest genius of all times was distinctly a believer in a Supreme Being who was not only the creative impulse in the universe, but is the guiding principle in it and in the lives of the individual inhabitants of even one of the least of the worlds, the Earth. Men may rough-hew their lives how they will, but they "are in God's hands." Their ends are shaped by infinite wisdom. It is only necessary to read Shakespeare's great tragedies to see this principle at work. Vice and virtue are shown in all of them in conflict. Shakespeare invariably makes good triumphant. The fate of Macbeth, of Richard III., and Antony are but manifestations of retributive justice.

It is maintained by many that Shakespeare was merely an artist that he constructed plays to please, that from them it is impossible to form a judgment as to his belief or character. The mental attitude of Scott, George Eliot, Hawthorne, Victor Hugo, and Balzac can be arrived at from their creations, and equally as it true of Shakespeare. His pages as a whole show that he was intensely and broadly religious, and utterances of his noblest characters emphasise this. Hamlet was evidently very dear to Shakespeare, and the poet has used him to express many of his own points of view with regard to the problems of existence. It is on Hamlet's lips that he puts the words that have placed many a heart puzzled by the mysteries of life:

'There's a divinity that shapes our ends,
Rough-hew them how we will."

To this speech Horatio, Hamlet's good angel, replies by way of emphasis, "That is most certain." Yes, it is certain; and was most certain to Shakespeare. His work, like all really great work, is largely inspired by the overwhelming sense of Deity,

'In the light of setting suns,
And the round ocean, and the living air,
And the blue sky, and in the mind of man."

He could say with Hamlet, "There is a special providence in the fall of a sparrow," or with old Adam of "As You Like It" he could speak sympathetically of the being that

"Doth the ravens feed.
Yea, providentially caters for the sparrows."

Shakespeare no doubt often paused, as did Hamlet, to wonder at the character of the undiscovered country from whose bourne no traveller returns, but never on his page is there anything to lead the student to believe that he doubted the existence of God, and there is much to convince that he held that the universe and society are sustained and regulated by an over-ruling Providence. Shakespeare frequently makes his noblest characters appeal to God in their difficulties and doubts, and acknowledge His influence in their successes. Henry V. is peculiarly Shakespeare's hero, and Henry V. is a sturdy soldier of unquestioning faith. It was God who "brought to light the dangerous treason" of his nobles. After notable victories his cry was "Praised be God, and not our strength"; or "O God, Thy arm was there;
And not to us, but to thine arm alone
Ascribe we all."

Portia of the "Merchant of Venice" in her speech on mercy is clearly voicing Shakespeare's thought on the subject. In this speech mercy is called an attribute of God Himself.

One of the most remarkable instances of Shakespeare's recognition of Divine providence is where Banquo, tempted, is battling with the tempter, and, as he retires to rest, prays that "the merciful powers" may restrain in him the cursed thoughts that nature gives way to in repose. There are a hundred such instances of Shakespeare's belief in an omnipotent being whose attributes are love, justice and mercy, who is no pagan deity sitting apart unmindful of his worlds or his children, but a vitalising principle in the universe and in the hearts of men.

GRAY HAIR WILL MAKE YOU LOOK OLD

Use Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur and Your Gray Hair Will Quickly Vanish.

Gray hair is a mark of age, and nothing that can be said as to its beauty will effect the disadvantages of this mark of age set upon your brow.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy darkens the hair and restores it to its youthful beauty. Our grandmothers and their grandmothers before them used sage and sulphur for darkening their hair. Nothing has ever been found more effective for this purpose than these two time-honored remedies, but Wyeth, a modern chemist, has combined the two with other ingredients which makes a delightful dressing for the hair, and which not only removes every trace of dandruff but promotes the growth of the hair. It also stops the hair from falling out and makes it beautiful.

Fifty Years of Song.

The approaching retirement of Mme. Albani recalls the prima donna's interesting confession that she began to sing before she began to walk. "As a baby," she says, "I was remarkable for the power of my voice, if not for its quality. My parents recognized this, and at the age of four I began my musical studies. I have been singing ever since." Mme. Albani will celebrate her fifty-ninth birthday in November next, and made her first appearance on the concert-platform when she was eight years of age. Her most cherished memories hover around her intimate friendship with Queen Victoria. The great singer was a frequent visitor to Buckingham Palace and Windsor, and was a welcome guest at Balmoral. When she sang before the Kaiser once in Berlin he afterwards shook hands with her and said, "Good-bye. When you see her, give my love to grandmamma."

A Real Lung Tonic

There are many preparations that will relieve a cough—few that will cure it. The first class, containing such drugs as Opium and Morphine, simply deaden the irritation and stop the cough, but do little or no permanent good.

Rev. Father Morrisey

"Father Morrisey's No. 10"

does not contain a trace of these dangerous drugs, but is an absolutely safe and scientific preparation of Nature's own remedies—Herbs, Roots and Balsams.

It entirely removes the irritation that caused the cough, by cleaning out the mucus, stopping the inflammation and healing the delicate membrane of throat and lungs.

Moreover, it tones up and strengthens the whole system, particularly the lungs, and protects against future coughs and colds.

RICHARD HALL & SON

Forest Fires; Their Causes And Preventive Measures

(Mail and Empire)

In Porcupine the terrible loss of life in the great fire dwarfs all other considerations. On account of this loss, rather than because of the value of the property destroyed, it is timely to point out the absolute necessity of greater expenditure upon forest protection. The methods that will protect the forest from fire will save the lives of the people dwelling near the forest. The Porcupine calamity will do much to create a public opinion that will support the Government in any expenditures that it may deem necessary for the protection of the forest in the north. It is a mistake to hold the heat responsible for the holocaust at Porcupine. Unless the kindling is ready the match will not light the fire, and the terrific heat can only be considered as the match to the kindling already prepared by the carelessness of prospectors and others, for it is the dry debris lying on the ground and not the standing trees that provides the great fuel for the bush fires.

Five Necessary Measures.

In a report on the subject issued by the Department of Agriculture at Washington five necessary measures for the protection of the forest are given, as follows:

The disposal of slash from logging operations.

The development of roads, trails, and fire lines.

The control of insects which kill trees and cause an accumulation of dead, inflammable timber.

No one of these measures alone will protect a forest, nor can one of them be safely omitted. With all these measures in operation and carried out by an adequate force, such fires as that of the Porcupine would be impossible. To put into effect such a scheme a great expenditure of money would be necessary, but no district in the world is better able to afford it than Ontario's mining district. There has been more than enough silver taken out of Cobalt to give forest protection from North Bay to James Bay.

A Billion Dollars Lost.

Apart from the necessity of protection to human life, the forests of the north are well worth preserving for their own sake. Until a few years ago it was popularly supposed that our timber was almost as inexhaustible as our supply of fresh water, and even yet the official estimates of the remaining timber convey this impression to anyone who is not a lumberman. We have standing in Canada something less than 2,000 billion feet of timber, including the very low grades. It seems a lot, but it is not much more than half the estimated amount at one time. What we have cut and used amounts to little compared with what has been lost by fire. In our greatest lumbering region, the Ottawa valley, it has been calculated that for every foot that has been cut by lumbermen twenty feet have been destroyed by fire. A recent bulletin from the forestry branch of the Department of the Interior says that the loss to the public Treasury due to forest fires is not less than $1,042 million dollars.

The Laws Not Enforced.

The same report declares that the forest fires that are occurring are not so much the result of the absence of laws as to the lack of enforcement of existing laws. To be properly enforced, these laws must have back of them the support of the people, for without it Legislatures will not vote the generous sum necessary for carrying on the work. It also points out that reforestration has its limits and that it cannot undo the work of a disastrous fire. Not only are standing trees destroyed, but often the soil is rendered permanently unfit for growing another forest. This is because the humus in the ground is consumed. In cases where the soil is not spoiled for producing a second growth it is generally found that the forest succeeding a burned pine or spruce district is made up of inferior varieties of trees, on account of the fact that aspen, poplar, birch and jack pine produce more seeds than white pine and spruce and scatter them over a wider area.

The Time for Action.

The effect of forests upon rainfall and climate generally is pretty well understood. It has been discussed previously in this column and need not be pointed out again. The fact to bear in mind is that wisdom twenty years from now will not correct any neglect of the forests to-day; and that there is considerable neglect is indicated by the following passage from the report of the Department of the Interior: "Of all the civilized nations in the northern hemisphere, Canada is doing the least to treat the public lands as a permanent asset." When it comes to be a question of the lives of citizens, as in Porcupine Canada is not likely to remain indifferent.

A WEAK CHESTED BOY

"My boy Frank seemed weak-chested, and took a very severe cold," writes Mrs. D. Stevens, Niagara, Man. "The many medicines used did not seem to benefit him, until we tried Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine and found it to be exactly what was wanted to cure him." No treatment is so thorough and effective as a cure for croup and bronchitis.

FARE TOO HIGH

So Wealthy Chicagoan Donned Hobo's Attire and Rode "Blind Baggage"

BELLEVUE, OHIO, July 13.—With $2,600 in the bank and several hundred dollars on his person, Chas. Smith, who says he hails from Chicago, left that city for Lorain yesterday on a train without first going through the formality of purchasing a ticket. He hopped a freight train and rode the blind baggage.

He explained that he thought passenger rates too high, so he attired himself as a tramp and thought to beat his way to Lorain, where he intended to visit relatives. Railroad detectives here sized up Smith as not being a genuine hobo, and they detained him. A search revealed the wad of cash and the bank books, showing the deposit of $2,600.

"Yes, I've got plenty of money, but the railroads charge to much."

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON QUESTIONS

JULY 16, 1911.

(Copyright, 1910, by Rev. T. S. Linscott, D.D.)

Manasseh's Wickedness and Penitence.—2 Chron. xxxiii., 1-20.

Golden Text—Cease to do evil; learn to do well.—Isa. i., 16-17.

1. Verses 1-2—Whose son was Manasseh, and what was the character of his father?

2. When the son of a good father becomes a bad man how do you account for it?

3. To what extent may good parents be assured that their children will also be good?

4. What scriptural or philosophical ground is there for the belief that children may be so trained that they will certainly be Christians?

5. Upon which depends most the character of the children—the father or the mother?

6. Verses 3-5—In what particular respect did Manasseh sin against God?

7. That land was rife with idolatry, and God made strict laws against it; why did He do so?

8. What were in those days the grave evils of idolatry?

9. What habits to-day, among Christian people, are equivalent to idolatry?

10. What are the results of present day idolatrous habits?

11. Verses 6-7—What is meant by "enchantments, familiar spirits, and wizards?"

12. Why does the Bible forbid use of all such occult things as mentioned in verse six?

13. How do you class palmistry, looking into the teacup for signs, thirteen sitting at the table, unlucky Friday, and similar "signs?"

14. How do you estimate a witch or a wizards, that is a bad person supposed to have the power of exercising, mentally, an evil influence upon another?

15. What is your estimate of those that have "familiar spirits," persons who claim to communicate with the spirits of the dead?

16. Verse 8—How long did God say that the Israelites should possess the land of Canaan, and on what conditions?

17. Which of God's promises, if any, are absolute or unconditioned?

18. Verses 9-10—When good people become degenerate, are they or not generally worse than those who have always been bad?

19. How did God probably speak to Manasseh and his people, and how does God speak to sinners to-day?

20. Verse 11—God is here said to have brought the army of the king of Assyria to war with Israel, and to take Manasseh prisoner as a result of his sin. Does God in these days punish sin in any such material way?

21. Verses 12-20—What is the general effect of punishment upon sinners?

22. Why did not Manasseh know taht the Lord was God before his punishment and repentance?

23. God freely forgave Manasseh the moment he repented; does He always act the same way with sinners?

24. Were all the effects of Manasseh's sins blotted out, as well as the sins themselves?

POST CARD COLUMN

CHEAP ELECTRIC LIGHT.

Editor Examiner:

Dear Sir,—The Peterborough Light & Power Co. in their recent announcement of reduction of rates for house lighting, state it will be a saving of 18 per cent. to the consumer. That is partly misleading, as the plan they propose, while a saving to the large consumer, means an increase of cost to the small consumer.

As the plan is optional, it is only fair that the point where it would be unwise to adopt this new scheme should be indicated. As a rule, any customer whose light bill for the year is $15.00 or under had better stay on the old plan.

Take a 7-room house for example. On the new plan the company collects 10c. per room or $1.20 per year for each room, which means you pay $8.40 per year room rate, even if no light was used. How much does this leave for the additional charge of 3c. per kilowatt?

A large number of small families run on $10 or $12 per year on the present rate of 7 cents per kilowatt. Take a 7 room house, where present cost is $12.00 per year. Under the new system the meter charge would be 3-7 of $12.00 or $5.14 plus $8.40 room rate, a total of $13.54; increased cost $1.54. Similarly a 5 room house running on the minimum charge of $6.00 per year, on the new plan would cost $9.43.

To determine which plan is best, multiply your present yearly cost by 3, divide by 7 and this gives the meter cost on new plan. Add to this $1.20 for each room and this gives total cost by the new system.

Stoney Lake Paragraphs

Interesting Budget From the Examiner's Own Correspondent

STONEY LAKE, JULY 15.—Mrs. J. B. Hotchkiss, accompanied by Miss Helen and Miss Mary, are summering at "Rayhaven."

Miss Ethel Masey and Mr. S. C. MacDonald are guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Knapman at "Forest Home."

Miss Alfords, Miss Laing, Mr. J. H. Carey and Mr. F. H. Emmerson spent the week-end at "Portree," the guests of Mrs. J. W. Carey.

Mr. Bert Everett spent a few days at "Idle Side."

Rev. W. C. Riddiford and family are camped at Juniper Island.

Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Dumble came up the lakes on Tuesday to their summer home "Ballyraggit."

Mrs. Davis of Toronto, has opened "Glen Oosk" for the season.

Mrs. Morgan and Miss Aileen, accompanied by Messrs. R. G. and C. R. Watson and Miss Amy Watson, are located at "Bon Repos."

Miss Beatrice Walsh and Miss Pearl Faint are stopping at "Kilkenny".

Mr. A. D. Permal is a guest at "Forest Nook."

Mr. A. Wadsworth is registered at "Glenwood."

Mrs. Holdridge and Miss K. Holdridge of Rochester, are visiting the former's daughter, Mrs. A. W. Cornwall, "Stockholm."

Mr. Ernest Rice, Mr. M. F. Rice and Miss Alice C. Ruddsfoot, of Indianapolis, are summering on "Grassy Island."

Mr. and Mrs. C. Guillet and Master Jack, of Washington, Mr. Geo. L. Guillet of Montreal, accompanied by Mrs. and Miss Guillet of Cobourg, have arrived at their summer home, Westaway," Horseshoe Island.

Mr. H. M. East and family of Toronto, with Dr. H. M. East, are spending their summer holidays at "Indian Isle."

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Warne have taken "Ellwood Glen" for a few weeks.

Misses Amy and Madine Angstorm and Miss Edith M. Hutchinson of Toronto, are located at "Matameete."

Mrs. Morrow, with her daughters, the Misses Morrow, and Miss Mary Elliott of Peterborough, are holidaying at "Capalino."

Mr. David Carlisle is spending a few days with his parents at "Upsidedown."

Mrs. Walter Stocker and family are guests at "Seldom Inn," the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Beal.

Mr. Norman Geale visited "Saints Rest," last week.

Mrs. Russel and Mrs. Williamson of Toronto, have taken Mr. Fitzgerold's cottage at Sandy Point for the season.

One of the campers at Juniper Island is an enthusiastic fisherman and has met with splendid results. However, we fear his luck has turned. Last week a hungry lunge, which was basking on the sunny shores of "Iugleatane," greedily swallowed his bait, to which he has attributed much of his success, Whoever lands this monster of the deep, in the vicinity of Mr. Sutherland's Point, will please examine its anatomy and if successful in recovering the "allurement" will kindly hand to Mr. Stock at Juniper Island.

A boat out of its element is like a fish out of water. Occasionally a vessel will get "stuck" on a rock by going in the forbidden paths, but motor boat enthusiasts generally come to grief, owing to the fact that most of them graduate from the canoe or rowboat, and forget, for the time being, that their launches "draw" more water than their old-time craft. The "landing" season was opened the Sunday after Dominion Day by the "Mae" becoming perched upon a rock near Mr. Barrie's Island. The "Hiawatha," with her "thirty-five horses," came to the rescue, and succeeded in dragging her from "terra firma."

The second boat to keep up the excitement was the "Sloth," a tug in the employ of the Randolph MacDonald Construction Co. Last Tuesday she manifested a strong preference for one of the four boulders in the channel beside Mr. Fisk's Island, and was precipitated on its crest. A few gentle tugs from the "Bob Hall" released her from her lofty position. The "Cap" has made a firm resolve never to get so "stuck up" again.

Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Thompson, of Peterborough, and Mr. and Mrs. Hubert McBain of Vancouver, B.C., are guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. McBain, "Bona Vista."

—Simon the Sailor.

AN EARLY MORNING BLAZE
BED CLOTHES WERE IGNITED

Fire Had Made Considerable Headway When Brigade Arrived on the Scene—Mistake Was Made in Sending in the Alarm

What might have proved to have been a serious conflagration was averted by the prompt action of the Fire Department this morning. At 3.30 a call was received to the home of Mr. Thomas Franks, 488 Homewood Avenue. On their arrival there the fire was found to have made considerable headway in the bedroom upstairs. It required the use of four chemicals to extinguish the blaze.

Just what the extent of the damage will be is not definitely known. The bed clothes were destroyed together with a portion of the woodwork. The fire was caused by matches.

The fire was materially assisted in its work of destruction by the fact that the party who sent in the alarm, which was from box 35, neglected to pull the book down after turning the key, with the result that the fire department received no notification of the call at the station. Finally some of the neighbors who had by this time become alarmed, sent in a telephone call. This was immediately responded to by the brigade.

It required considerable persuasion on the part of Chief Howard to convince the sender of the alarm that the fire alarm system was not out of order.

$3,000,000 Is This Gir'ls Birthday Present

Special to The Examiner.

LOS ANGELES, July 13.—Miss Rhoda Rindge, on September 10, will celebrate her eighteenth birthday, and likewise the receipt of about $3,000,000.

On that date, the anniversary of her birth, the estate of her father, the late Frederick H. Rindge, will be distributed, and she, with her mother, Mrs. May K. Rindge, and her two brothers, Frederick H. Rindge, Jr., and Samuel Rindge, will receive their individual proportions.

In reality the individual shares of the Rindge estate are likely to greatly exceed the estimated amounts, as the calculation is based on appraisement, which is always much lower than the actual worth.

The largest holding of the estate is the Malibu ranch, about twenty miles north of Santa Monica. It is estimated to contain 10,000 acres, and its market value, as the only water front property left undeveloped in this vicinity, may possibly make it worth as much as all the rest of the estate. Besides this ranch there are quantities of valuable business properties here and in other cities.

REFERENCE AND GUIDE BOOK OF TRENT CANAL

There has just been issued from the Examiner presses a most comprehensive and artistic reference and guide book of the Trent Canal, containing a host of valuable and hitherto unpublished information concerning the waterway, compiled by Mr. E. S. Clarry. This book will fill a long felt want as it gives precisely the information about the canal that is so much in demand. Containing as it does, charts of the lakes throughout the system from Orillia and Barrie on Lake Simcoe to Healey's Falls on the Trent, with the main steamer channel clearly indicated it will be of invaluable assistance to the owners of power boats in the district. The book contains an interesting history of the Canal from the time Champlain traversed the lakes and rivers of the system nearly three hundred years ago, to the present day, dealing with the development of the scheme, the different steps that have been made in the construction of the canal and the money so far expended. Information is given as to the area of the lakes and of the reservoir waters, the amount of power already developed at the different heads and the estimated amount of undeveloped energy, most interesting and carefully compiled figures.

The distances between the principal points all along the canal has been obtained and included in the book, and this feature is one that will be appreciated by everyone. Hitherto distances have been a matter of guess work with most people, but the new book clears up this point satisfactorily. The maps and charts which the guide book contains are alone worth many times the price of the publication and that they will be appreciated by all navigators in the district. The book is beautifully illustrated by artistic photographs of many points of interest along the system and will be much in demand if only for souvenir purposes. It will be placed on sale at once, and should have a ready sale. The value and accuracy of the information and the beauty of the book certainly warrants a quick disposal.

FIRE CHIEFS CONVENTION

Chief Howard has been invited to the International Association of Fire Chiefs meeting, which takes place in the fall. It is understood that Ald. Morgan will accompany him as the chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee.

The association has some 700 members, all of whom are professional Fire Chiefs.

The delegates go to Milwaukee, where the association meets.

After the business of the association is finished, the members will take in a number of side trips. The principal of these is to Chicago, where the International Municipal Congress will meet. Here there will be a special fire department exhibition. The chiefs will explain all that fire protection means to the cities and towns. Many notable chiefs and ex-chiefs will be present.

The congress is of great educational value both to the chiefs and the general public. The delegates will be conveyed to Chicago by a steamer chartered for the occasion. While in Chicago the members and delegates, who will wear distinctive badges, will have the freedom of the city and a right royal time is assured.

Chief Howard received notice of the Congress yesterday afternoon and although the convention does not meet until early in the fall much preparation will be necessary before our two public officials will be in a position to make arrangements for the appointment of officers to fill their places while they are absent.

KINGSTON ALDERMAN BUYS A TRACT OF LAND

Anticipating the possibilities of Peterborough as a manufacturing centre and the prospective move, which is hinted in connection with one of our railways, has, we presume, influenced Mr. J.M. McCann, a progressive real estate man, in purchasing a large tract of land in the manufacturing district, just south of the city limits, west of the Driving Park. This field has been surveyed into building lots and placed in the hands of A. Brown & Co. for sale.

Mr. McCann's enterprise is commendable and should be encouraged.

GRIST MILL WAS SWEPT AWAY

During a severe thunderstorm which swept over the country west of Peterborough on Tuesday last, a grist mill and saw mill, known as Best's Mills, Mount Pleasant, and situated about twelve miles west of here, was swept away and deposted in a swamp. The damage will amount to about $3,000.

BIRTHS.

For Better Farm Life

"The real rural life problem will not be solved till we establish and build up better schools, churches, and rural organizations. They must all grow together and reach the highest efficiency before we have the best that is possible in country life."

In these words C. F. Curtiss sounded the keynote of all the discussions at the country life conferences held at Ames, Iowa, June 22-24. Some of the facts brought to light at the conference show in a truly deplorable light conditions in some of the rural sections of the United States and should afford food for thought for all interested in the rural problem whether in Canada or the United States. Rev. C. S. Adams of Illinois gave the results of his investigations in 42 country communities in Central Illinois.

In the rich districts where land sold for $190 to $260 an acre he found that 55 per cent. of the land was farmed by tenants, only 66 per cent, of whom held leases for periods of five years or more. Country life was not attractive in most of the neighborhoods. The social, educational, and religious sides of country life were worse than the material conditions when compared to the same factors in the towns. He found that the average school year for the country boy and girl was 98 days against 146 days for the town child. The country teacher received $35 to $70 a month against $46 to $150 for the town teacher. Country schools were for the most part poorly equipped and the teachers inefficient though usually conscientious and hard working.

COUNTRY CHURCHES LOSING GROUND

Of the 235 country churches of all denominations visited by Mr. Adams, only 77 have grown any in the past 10 years, 55 have stood still, 56 have lost and 47 have been abandoned completely. If the averages for the state are in the same proportions as for the districts visited, 1600 country churches have died in Illinois in the last 10 years and 1000 more are ready to die. He found 397 people to each church, while the churches averaged 125 members each. Thirty-one per cent. of the rural population were church members, 19 per cent. went to church and 13 per cent. to sunday school. The richest and best improved communities were the lowest in church attendance. The two richest communi-

FRITTERS

Two eggs, two cups sour milk, one teaspoon sugar, four tablespoons of butter, flour to thicken, fry in pans, with lard.

GRILLED ALMONDS

Blanch a cupful of almonds and dry them thoroughly. Boil a cup of sugar in the same amount of water until it strings. Throw in the almonds and let them simmer, stirring occasionally, until they turn a yellow brown. Remove them from the fire immediately.

BEAN LOAF

Press the contents of a can of lima beans through a colander and season with salt, pepper and a little melted butter. Then add one egg well beaten and enough cream to enable you to make the mixture into the form of a loaf. If it seems a little too moist to retain its shape well, add a few breadcrumbs. Place in a small buttered baking pan, sprinkle the top with crumbs and dots of butter and bake brown. It is excellent when served with tomato sauce, or the sauce may be used in the loaf instead of cream. Left-over gravy from meat also makes a very good sauce for this dish.

SCALLOPED HAM

Chop fine two hard-boiled eggs, and put about two-thirds of a cup of cold boiled ham through the meat grinder. Take two-thirds of a cup of finely-sifted breadcrumbs and mix them well with a tablespoonful of melted butter, so they are evenly coated. Sprinkle the bottom of a buttered baking dish with some of the crumbs, cover with half the eggs. Over these pour a good half-cup of white sauce and over this sprinkle half the ham; then repeat, and cover the top layer with the remaining crumbs. Bake till the crumbs are brown.

BIRDMAN WILL DIE

"Bud Mars," One of the Most Intrepid of the Aeroplane Navigators In America, Has an Accident While Exhibiting Before Big Crowds, and Falls to the Ground—Doctors Have Given Him Up.

Erie, Pa., July 15.—"Bud" Mars, the well known aviator was probably fatally injured in this city yesterday afternoon when he crashed several hundred feet to the ground. The heavy biplane dropped on top of him. His injuries are of such a nature, it is said that there is practically no hope for his recovery.

The aviator's wife witnessed the accident and last night her condition is serious, due to shock.

Mars had made one successful flight earlier in the afternoon. He was in the air for the second time when the accident occurred. Several thousand spectators were watching him. He circled the field a number of times at a height of several hundred feet. Suddenly the machine made a dip downward and Mars was seen to jerk at something in an effort to regain control. It was a futile attempt, however, and an instant later the machine struck the ground. The biplane was completely wrecked and Mars lay under it. He was covered with blood, and at first it was believed he was dead. His wife ran towards him screaming, but she collapsed before reaching the wreck.

Doctors, who were present as spectators, were soon at the side of the injured man. The serious nature of his injuries was evident and he was rushed to a hospital. Last night, Dr. Broughton, one of the physicians attending Mars on the field, issued a statement from the hospital to the effect that the aviator's chest was badly injured, and that he had sustained concussion of the brain and suffered internal injuries, while he is also bruised from head to foot.

James C. Mars is well known for his daring in the field of aviation. At the age of fifteen he learned parachute jumping as a pupil of Captain Tom Baldwin, the aviator, and though only a young man, he has been a circus rider, trapeze, high diver and balloonist. He took up aeroplaning with Glen Curtiss a year ago, and on his second day's practice made twenty-five flights. He left San Francisco last December and came back last month laden with trophies of 250 flights in Honolulu, Manila, Sumatra, Japan, Korea, Siberia, Russia, and on one occasion carried a royal passenger, the King of Siam.

He has had several narrow escapes. Last August he fell under water in New York Bay and narrowly escaped drowning. A few weeks later he crashed down at Memphis, Tenn., on top of an automobile, and was in bed for ten days. His young wife, who accompanies him everywhere, has been his companion in many of his flights.

Should Mars succumb he will be the seventy-fifth victim to the sciences of aviation, the first being Lieut. Thomas E. Selridge, U.S.A., Sept. 17, 1909. In 1909, four lives were lost, in 1910 thirty-four fatalities occurred, while so far this year thirty lives have been sacrificed.

Mrs. Neapolitano Not to Hang.

Ottawa, July 15.—Mrs. Angelina Neapolitano is not to hang. The case was considered and decided at a largely attended Cabinet Council yesterday morning, and on the recommendation of the Minister of Justice the commutation of the sentence was agreed upon. This decision goes to the Governor-General's deputy for approval.

DEPARTMENT OF THE NAVAL SERVICE

SEALED TENDERS, addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for the Erection of Wireless Telegraph Station," at Tobermory, Ontario, will be received at this office until noon, on July Twenty-ninth, 1911.

Plans, specifications and form of contract to be entered into can be seen on and after July 20th instant, at the office of the Superintendent of Wireless Telegraphs, Department of the Naval Service, Ottawa, the Office of the Agent of the Department of Marine and Fisheries, Parry Sound, Ontario, or the Office of the Superintending Engineer of Sault Ste. Marie Canal, Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., or the offices of the Postmaster at Owen Sound, Ont., or the Postmaster at Tobermory, Ont.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed forms supplied, and signed with their actual signatures, stating their occupations and places of residence. In the case of firms, the actual signature, the nature of the occupation and place of residence of each member of the firm must be given.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of the Naval Service, equal to ten per cent (10%) of the amount of the tender, which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,
G. J. DESBARATS,

PACT IS RENEWED

The United States by Reason of the Arbitration Treaty Is Excluded From the List of Great Britain's Possible Enemies, According to Text of Treaty Signed Thursday by Grey and Count Kato.

London, July 15.—The Anglo-Japanese alliance has been modified to exclude the United States from Great Britain's possible enemies, and the life of the alliance has been extended nearly six years by the new version of the treaty which Sir Edward Grey, the British Secretary of Foreign Affairs, and Count Kato, the Japanese ambassador, in London, signed on Thursday. The original agreement, which was signed August 12, 1905, included eight articles and a preamble. The only practical difference between that and the new versions is embodied in article 4, which reads:

"Should either high contracting party conclude a treaty of general arbitration with a third power, it is agreed that nothing in this agreement shall entail upon such contracting party an obligation to go to war with the power with whom such treaty of arbitration is in force."

The preamble states:

"The Government of Great Britain and the Government of Japan having in view the important changes which have taken place in the situation since the conclusion of the Anglo-Japanese treaty of 1905, and believing that a revision of that agreement responding to such changes would contribute to the general stability and peace, have agreed upon the following stipulations to replace the agreement above mentioned."

Then follows the objects of the alliance, which are the same as the previous draft. These include the consolidation and maintenance of general peace in the regions of Eastern Asia and India, the preservation of the common interests of all the powers in China, and the maintenance of the territorial rights of the contracting parties in the regions of Eastern Asia and India, and the defence of their special interests in those regions.

Articles three, four and six of the treaty of 1905 are omitted in the revised version. Article three of the old version stipulated that "Japan, possessing paramount political, military, and economic interests in Korea, Great Britain recognizes Japan's right to take such measures for the guidance, control and protection of Korea as she may deem proper and necessary to safeguard and advance those interests, providing the measures so taken are not contrary to the principle of equal opportunities for the commerce and industry of all nations.

Article four referred to the recognition by Japan of Great Britain's rights to safeguard her indian possessions. Article six specially referred to the war between Japan and Russia at that date, and Great Britain's neutrality.

This version of the treaty is known to be largely the result of the discussion of foreign affairs at the Imperial Conference, and was responsible to the wishes of the colonies, particularly Australia. That it was consummated so soon was a surprise to the diplomats. The extension of the time of the alliance is another surprise.

"Death to Congress."

Lima, Peru, July 15.—The opening of the preliminary sessions of the Chamber of Deputies was made the occasion of a demonstration, in which two persons were killed and several wounded.

The Government failed to send a guard to keep order, but several secret police acted instead. When the deputies were leaving the chamber there were cheers for the Government and cries of "Death to the Congress."

Hundreds of revolver shots were fired. None of the deputies were injured.

May Fine Railway Company.

Montreal, July 15.—A new phase of the fight between the city and the street railway, the former seeking a better and more extensive service and the latter a new and more profitable franchise, developed yesterday when action was entered by the city against the Montreal Street Railway Co., asking a mandamus against the company and to fine it heavily for not constructing lines in St. Paul and Emard wards. The company asked a delay of fifteen days to file an answer in writing.

"Go North, Young Man."

New York, July 15.—Interviewed on his return from a three-months' trip to Europe and the coronation, John Wanamaker said regarding reciprocity the English people seemed to favor the idea in the abstract, but that they had many differences of opinion as to the articles of agreement. Mr. Wanamaker held a pamphlet on Canada in his hand, and pointing to it, said:

"Canada is a great country. It is a fine field for Americans. There is no longer any need for our young men to go west. They should go north and settle in the country of the lumber."

ESTIMATES TOO BIG

Minister of Lands and Mines Says the Survivors of the Disaster, In the North Have All They Need Except Utensils—North Bay estimate of Loss of Life Persists In Calling It Five Hundred.

Toronto, July 15.—Reassuring reports came to the Parliament Buildings and offices of the T. & N. O. yesterday regarding the loss of life in the Porcupine fire.

Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines, who has shared with Mr. Englehart a large part of the anxiety and responsibility of controlling the situation the last few days, was rather severe in his criticism of what he termed exaggerated reports of the casualties. He said:

"While we don't want to minimize this terrible affair, reports coming in are grossly exaggerated. Our Mr. Clements, chief engineer of the T. & N. O. Railway, says that only 50 people have been accounted for as dead. We have it directly from the Dome people themselves that their death list is nine only. In a number of instances where bodies have been reported as lying on the ground, investigation by Mr. Clements has failed to find anybody who had seen any. Wild rumors are caught up and they are spread to an incredible extent. We want to check these wild rumors, and feel from the reports we receive and the questions asked that people are needlessarily alarmed. What the people want is nothing unusual. There is plenty of provisions on the way for the present."

Subsequently Mr. Cochrane deplored the effect of these reports on relatives and friends of those in Porcupine. The loss of life was bad enough without stampeding the people into alarm. It was much better to comfort the people and inspire confidence them to excite the feelings of those already on the verge of panic.

"The fact is," added Mr. Cochrane, "every person who wanted to come out of Porcupine could come. Two cars on the train which left Thursday were unoccupied. There is no real suffering. They have food, tents and covering against the weather. Everybody from Cochrane, Porcupine, Matheson and other affected districts could come out on the railway without expense, but many refused and preferred to remain."

Another point cleared up at the Department of Lands yesterday was that the fire which destroyed Cochrane was not the same fire that devasted Porcupine. The Cochrane fire was confined to Whitney and Tisdale Townships. There have also been fires in other sections of the country.

The tales from the northern country have now brought from the fire-swept districts nearly one hundred persons. Every train from North Bay has from one to fifteen people whose stories of escape thrill with human interest.

Into the truth of the big fire is known the wonderful self-sacrifice and heroism displayed by many of the men who understood to save the women and children first will be equalled by that shown by the women themselves. Returned sufferers state that the women as a rule were cool and self-collected, and that many heroic deeds were performed in the course of what they took to be the call of duty and self-sacrifice.

The vastness of the north country, the wide area destroyed by the numerous bodies of water into which men have plunged, the flames and the number of prospectors, miners and laborers scattered in all directions, makes the task of listing the dead an impossible one, say refugees, who shudder as they tell of the dangers through which they have passed.

"There are bodies lying at the bottom of Porcupine Lake, which no one knows of," said, R. R. Henderson, proprietor of the Lyric Theatre, at Golden City, last evening on his arrival in Toronto.

Both Mr. Henderson and a friend, Mr. Whittam, were of the opinion that at least one hundred people had perished in Porcupine Lake alone. They said at least 60 went down in full view of their own eyes.

It appeared that the fire had been raging near South Porcupine and Pottsville on Sunday and Monday the wind rose and without a moment's notice carried the sparks from the wood to the rear of South Porcupine over to the waterfront, setting the buildings there on fire. The inhabitants, in less than five minutes, were hemmed in by fire on all sides.

Messrs. Henderson and Whittam said the damage to the mines is very slight, in fact the clearing away of the trees makes the work of prospecting very much easier, and the works of mining will also be made lighter.

Orders have already been placed for mining machinery and other supplies. The work will not be dormant for more than a few weeks at the most and will then go on with greater activity than ever.

One Estimate Given 900.

North Bay, July 15.—Refugees are pouring out of the north country and all gave cries of suffering and death along the trails and roads. The estimate of dead now reaches over five hundred and may be more. One prospector tells a story of seeking refuge in a mud hole, where a black bear snuggled up beside him until the fire passed over. It is hard to say which was most frightened, the man or bear, but bruin sheddaddled in the bush after the fire passed and the prospector got out to the steel.

George Donnelly is dead.

At the Big Dome an Italian woman who was about to be confined was in serious danger, but was cared for and gave birth to the child after the worst was over."

Mr. Malcom, a graduate of Toronto University, reported dead, is all right. At the Dome the scene was terrible. When the shaft house succumbed to flames, the air was shut off in the shaft, and Mrs. Burd managed to reached the surface, but fell back to her death, exhausted. She must have had a hard fight as the cage was not in operation and the woman must have crawled from timber to timber only to see the daylight and fall back dead in the shaft.

Reports are coming in of fires along the line of C.P.R. and other railroads. Sellwood is wiped out, with great loss but no casualties as far as known.

Fires are burning around Lake Nipissing, but conditions are good to save lives and property.

Half a Million For Equipment.

Ottawa, July 15.—Contracts have been awarded by the Railway Department amounting to half a million dollars for new equipment for the Intercolonial Railway.

The Canadian Locomotive Works has been awarded the contract for five locomotives, costing $114,900; the Canadian Car Co. for 200 steel-framed box cars, 20 steel platform cars, 25 dump cars, 2 baggage cars and a refrigerator car, totalling $334,790; and the Nova Scotia Car Co., 100 freight cars, two postal and two stock cars, for $112,000. It is understood that the Dominion Steel Co. has put in the lowest tender for steel rails.

Jack London Gets Rare Trout With A Diamond

Special to The Examiner:

LAKE CRESCENT, WASH., July 13.—Jack London has been fishing in Lake Crescent, in the heart of the Olympic Mountains, in northwestern Washington.

In Lake Crescent abound the renowned Beardslee trout, found nowhere else in the world. To feel the tug of one at the end of a casting line brought London here to spend five weeks. In a double-covered tent to the right of the inn is his typewriter.

The author vowed to remain until he had captured a Beardslee trout. For four days he went out in the morning and rowed back at night, ate his meals, and repaired to his tent. Not a word was said. Guests saw him bring in strings of fine speckled and Dolly Varden trout, but no Beardslee.

Mr. Alexander Pantages finally bet $195 against all the money London had in his pockets that he would not catch a Beardslee trout during his stay here. London put up three dollars and they left the money with the innkeeper.

London rowed five miles from the inn, fished all day, was swamped with various species of trout, but in spite of forty-seven changes of flies and three hours of trolling, not a Beardslee trout made a strike.

Suddenly the author had an inspiration. He took his glittering 15-carat diamond stud and tied it to the leader an inch above the cluster of hooks on his trolling spoon.

Soon there lay in the boat a nine-pound spotted trout. At dinner time London carried the prize to the verandah and displayed it, and then pocketed the $196.

It cost Mr. Pantages another $50 to learn how the trout was caught.

Alexander's Wonderful Record In The National

Leading the National League in effectiveness if not in the percentages, Alexander the Great, the Phillies' mighty pitcher, has more than made good the boasts of Charley Dooin that the Quakers would uncover the find of the season.

No pitcher in recent years, not even Russell Ford, has created a greater sensation during his first season in fast company than this Alexander person. With nothing more than the most ordinary looking curves, but with good speed and wonderful control, this youngster has found every club in the league, excepting only Chicago, pretty easy picking.

And Grover Cleveland Alexander cost Philadelphia only $750! Several clubs had chances to purchase Alexander last season when he was making a record for himself as the winning pitcher of the Syracuse team of the New York State League. He won twenty-nine games and lost fourteen, ranking seventh in the percentages. He hit .248 in the forty-seven games in which he participated, and proved as fancy a fielder as ever played in the league. He has thirty put-outs, 102 assists, and only one error, a remarkable fielding record for a pitcher.

On the strength of this record the Phillies and the Detroit Tigers put in drafts for him. Philadelphia won out on the draw and the Junglers lost a pitcher who would probably have brought a pennant to Detroit.

Two of the four games Alexander has lost to date were dropped to the Cubs. Boston beat him his first time out on April 15, and Brooklyn won by a 3 to 0 score last week. Chicago's victories, one a 6 to 2 affair and another a 4 to 3 nose-out, were won on May 22 and June 17 respectively. Alexander has beaten Boston and Brooklyn four times each, Pittsburg twice, Cincinnati four times, St. Louis twice, and New York once.

ENGLISH PUGILISTS HAVE COMPLAINT ABOUT THE METHODS OF AMERICANS

LONDON, July 13.—In view of the prospective match between Jack Johnson and Bombardier Wells for the heavyweight championship of the world, a great deal of talking is going on among Englishmen concerning American pugilistic methods. And the consensus of opinion throughout the British Isles is that of all the dirty fighters on earth, Americans are easily the dirtiest.

Inasmuch as Americans will agree that this is not the case, it might be inferred in the United States that the English are not the fair-minded sportsmen they think they are; that they are only "good sports" when they are winning, and that they consider American tactics unfair simply because, in most Anglo-American contests, the Americans are victors. There is a good deal in this view, too, but it is not a full explanation of the British attitude. The honest fact of the matter is that not one Englishman in 500 knows the rules of the ring as they are laid down by the authorities of his own country.

The popular English theory is that the two fighters ought to stand well apart from one another, with figures stiffly erect and left arms extended, and spar for points. If one of the points also happens to be a knockout well and good. But of infighting the Englishman has no notion. The moment the two men are so close together that their bodies touch or their arms seem to be interlocked, the Briton wants them to separate and start over again. If one of them strikes his opponent without doing so, the blow is immediately classed as a foul. Naturally, then, Englishmen see a great deal of what they think is foul fighting by American professors of the art of ringcraft.

They are perfectly honest when they say American fighting is dirty. They simply don't know the rules of the game.

English comment on the recent fight between Billy Papke, the American, and Jim Sullivan, the Briton, very aptly illustrates how ignorant the masses of Englishmen are concerning the rules of the sport at which they profess to be so efficient.

Referee Eugene Corri, who really does understand the rules, says that Papke fought and won quite fairly. "Leave this to me," he shouted impatiently from the ring during the progress of the battle, in answer to the storm of hisses and cat-calls with which the audience greeted an exhibition of the American's prowess as an infighter. "The lad's entirely inside the rules."

But except for Corri and "Cestus," an English writer versed in American prize-ring rules, the English were a unit in lauding Sullivan and denouncing Papke.

"Papke went to any extreme to win," said the Express. "He butted. He held whenever it was tolerated. The tactics were not those of the boxer we welcome to England."

"The astonishing point was that the American was not disqualified early in the contest," declared the Mail. "When he dealt the knockout blow, a short right-arm jolt to the body, he was apparently holding with his left."

"The crowd took Papke's triumph rather coolly," reported the Leader. "They could not forget certain incidents of the fight that left a rather nasty taste in the mouth. Meanwhile, here is no reason to be ashamed of our British champion."

These are simply a few illustrations. All the rest of the newspapers, accurately reflecting British public opinion, adopted the same tone. They were honest about it, but they did not and do not know the difference between a fair and a foul blow. This educational defect is responsible for an immense amount of dislike among the British for American fighters. The Briton's characteristic conviction that any one who can outdo him—a Briton—at anything under heaven, must have done it by trickery, is responsible for the rest of it.

If Jack Johnson and Bombardier Wells get together there will probably be a lot of bets to be had at big odds on Johnson.

Bombardier Wells is distinctly an English fighter. His only style is of the point-making variety already rather contemptuously referred to as so vulnerable to American methods of attack. It must be borne in mind, however, that the English style is weak in practice—not in theory. If it can be made as good in practice as in theory it is ideal. Almost no English fighters are able to do this. They make a prodigious number of points in stopping their American opponents' rushes, but sooner or later there is nearly always a failure to stop a rush—and then it is all over.

MARKET REPORTS.

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Close Lower—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, July 14.—Fear of forced liquidation thru the calling of loans by banks had considerable effect today in causing wheat prices to smash. Record-breaking deliveries of new wheat from the farms put trade facilities under a heavy strain. At one time the market showed a fall of more than three cents for the July option. Taking the list as a whole, latest figures, however, were at a net decline of 1 5-8c to 2 1-2c. On the other hand, corn finished with a gain of 1-8c to 1-4c and oats up 1-8c to 1-2c. The outcome for hog products was a loss of 2 1-2c to 15c.

The Liverpool market closed to-day 3/4d lower than yesterday on wheat, and 1/4d lower on corn. Berlin closed unchanged for wheat, Rotterdam 1/16c lower, Antwerp unchanged.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, July 14.—The foreign demand for Manitoba spring wheat was fair at the decline in prices in the Winnipeg market. Bids were in line and sales of 150,000 bushels were made. The demand for oats continues good, but as foreign buyers have not responded to the recent advance here bids are still out of line. The local market is firm and holders as a rule are very strong in their views as to the future course of prices. A good business continues to be done in spring wheat flour for export account and a fair trade on spot.

Oats, Canadian western, No. 2, 40½c to 40c, car lots ex store; extra No. 1 feed, 40c to 40½c; No. 1 C.W., 41½c to 42c. LEGACY GENUINE.

Montreal's Strange Benefactor Was a King's Son.

Montreal, July 15.—Mayor Guerin, who has been in London investigating the bequest of over $100,000 "to the poor of Montreal," by a certain Gustave Mourling, unknown here, explains in a letter the unusual gift, which he discovers to be absolutely genuine.

Somewhere about fifteen or twenty years ago the morganatic son of one of the kings of Europe lived in Montreal under the name of Mourling. Among his acquaintances was the late Senator Forget, who had befriended him in a very marked manner. He had at that time only $10,000, which, on the advice of Senator Forget, he invested as directed, and made over $75,000. He went away from Montreal alone, and no news has been heard of him until the City Council of Montreal received a notice that a Mr. Gustave Mourling had left $100,000 to the poor of Montreal in memory of courtesies and kindnesses received from its citizens. There are also estates in France and Germany, and American securities, the value of which have not yet been determined.

According to details supplied Mayor Guerin in London by Messrs. Stibbard and Gibson, the London firm that drafted the will, Mr. Mourling was married many years ago to a French countess of considerable social prestige, but several years later they were divorced. Five years later he married another French lady, who died in three years. He himself died at the age of seventy.

Deceased was without children, and consulted with his London solicitors as to whom he should leave his money. He did not take their suggestions, but eventually decided in favor of Montreal in, memory of a courteous and kind people.

Mayor Guerin has gone to Montreux, France, to instruct the French lawyers as to the disposition of the property there.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

The Bank of Montreal has decided to increase its capital to $15,000,000.

Edmund Hartnett, a St. Catharines hotelkeeper, dropped dead on the street.

The Unionist party in Britain is torn by dissension, on account of the veto bill. The moderates are unwilling to amend it.

The Tussock moth has made its appearance again this summer in Montreal and traces of its work are noticeable in all the city parks.

The Dominion Government is sending militia tents and blankets into Porcupine, with a detachment to distribute them. Parliament will be asked for a vote to aid the sufferers.

A serious fire broke out in Canso, N.S., yesterday in the centre of the town and before it was got under control three residences and three stores were totally destroyed and others damaged.

There was a mix-up among a gang of Italian laborers on St. Antoine street, Montreal, yesterday afternoon, and as a result, Angelo Beligne of Lasigne street, received a bullet wound in the right side.

A score of guides and others are searching in the mountains for Homer Tidman of Boston, who set out several days ago, unaccompanied, to climb the Dent-Du-Midi, a lofty peak of the Alps. It is feared that he has fallen over a precipice.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

ANY PERSON who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district. Entry by proxy may be made at any agency, on certain conditions, by father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of intending homesteader.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres solely owned and occupied by him or by his father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister.

In certain districts, a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties—Must reside upon the homestead or pre-emption six months in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and cultivate fifty acres extra.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may enter for a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3 per acre in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate fifty acres and erect a house worth $300.00.

TRAIN DITCHED

BUFFALO, JULY 15.—Train No. 5 of the Erie railroad from New York to Buffalo, was ditched near Portage. Engineer Oliver was killed and the fireman injured.

$14,000 FIRE

AYLMER, ONT., JULY 15.— The Draper Company's leather factory was burned this morning at a loss of about fourteen thousand. Lightning is supposed to have been the cause.

DANGER STILL PRESENT

TORONTO, JULY 15.—Wires received by Hon. Frank Cochrane this morning indicate that all danger is not over from the fire yet. J. A. Hogh, a mining recorder at Matheson, in a wire dated yesterday afternoon, says the wind has risen and the fire has started again, and that Matheson was in serious danger again; also that the fire further north was more extended than that, though it is shown by a wire from A. J. Macdonald, crown timber agent at Cochrane that seven settlers were burned out in Glackmeyer township, which is north of Cochrane. Two lives were lost there.

HAVE CONFIDENCE

From Farm and Dairy.

That creamery patrons have confidence in the maker is important. I believe that most of my patrons have full confidence in me. This confidence is sometimes pretty hard to get, even if you deserve it. I always try not to make a patron feel "sore" by always going after him with "teeth and toenails" if his cream is not as good as it should be. I realize that it is sometimes necessary to go after a patron strongly to make him bring better cream, but I never say anything to him about his cream when other patrons are around, and when I do say anything I do not go after him in such a fierce way that he gets frightened and never again comes near the creamery door. I talk to them in such a way that they never get sore and sell to an outsider on that account

All creamery patrons cannot be handled in the same manner. Some are very sensitive and need only a hint; others again need a lesson strongly emphasized in order to make any improvements. A successful buttermaker must know his patrons. I try to get well acquainted with my patrons. Those who do not come to the creamery themselves I make a point to see every now and then.

MUTUAL UNDERSTANDING

It is not only important that the buttermaker know his patrons, but the patrons must know the buttermaker. This mutual understanding of each other should spell confidence in each other and friendship. My experience has been that such a relationship between creamery management and patrons is a stronger force for the success of the local creamery than is discord or even attractive offers to pull the local creamery interest apart.

IS RICH

From Farm and Dairy.

"I believe the silo is the right thing and wherever much stock is kept a silo is of great advantage. But silos are expensive and supposing I built one, I would find difficulty in getting it filled." Several farmers in Victoria and Peterboro counties, and one farmer in Western Ontario recently made remarks to this effect to an editor of Farm and Dairy who was calling at their places.

The matter of cost is a prime consideration and one should satisfy himself about the cost before he builds a silo. Three weeks ago one of the editors of Farm and Dairy called on Mr. W. E. Taylor, of South Paris Plains, in Brant Co., Ont., who last year erected a cement block silo 11 feet by 35 feet. The silo is a finished job and Stopped When Motorman Died.

New York, July 15.—The question of what happens if a motorman of a speeding subway express train drops dead at his post was most assuringly answered yesterday when a ten-car express train, crowded with passengers during the rush hours, came to a sudden standstill between stations. The motorman, W. A. Stone, was found under the third car dead. He had opened the window of his box to get air and had fallen out when his controller was on at full speed.

An emergency button, on which the motorman's hand naturally rests while working the controller, was released when he fell, automatically shutting off the power and applying the air brakes. Within three car lengths the train came to a sudden halt, averting what otherwise might have proved a disastrous collision with a train ahead.

Would Force Dr. Wiley Out.

Washington, D.C., July 15.—Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, chief of the Bureau of Chemistry, who for twenty years has been leading the fight against adulteration of foods, is charged with having violated the law in the payment of a salary to Dr. H. H. Rusby of Columbia University, as an expert.

The committee on personnel of the Department of Agriculture has recommended that Wiley be permitted to resign, but he won't.

Enemies made in the enforcement of the pure food law have been long on his trail.

VOTE ON PACT.

U. S. Senate Will Ballot on Measure on July 22.

Washington, July 15.—The Senate will vote on the Canadian reciprocity bill July 22, on the wool tariff revision bill, July 27, on the free list bill August 1, Congressional reapportionment bill Aug. 3, Statehood bill for Arizona and New Mexico on the legislative day of Aug. 7 and will adjourn, according to general understanding, quickly thereafter. This voting program, decided upon after prolonged conference yesterday, and resulting from conference that have covered many days, was agreed to by the Senate.

The agreement is now specific regarding adjournment, but it is understood generally that adjournment will follow immediately the disposition of the statehood bill. All the measures mentioned have passed the House. President Taft was quickly acquainted with the Senate's action and expressed his gratification, particularly over the precedence given to the reciprocity bill in the program.

The understanding forecasts the end of a long struggle in the Senate over the reciprocity and the Democratic tariff measures. The final votes will not be taken on the bills named until the dates fixed, but amendments can be disposed of from time to time.

The Bristow amendment to the Canadian reciprocity bill, proposing a reduction of the sugar tariff and the abolishment of the "duties standard" basis of assessing tariff on imported sugar, was defeated yesterday afternoon 38 to 8, after Senator Bristow had made an exhaustive speech on the subject. Senators Bourne, Bristow, Brown, Cummins, Clapp, Dixon, Gronna and Nelson voted in support of it.

Doukhobors Block Census.

Nelson, B.C., July 15.—More than one thousand Doukhobors, members of a colony at Brilliant, on the lower Arrow Lake, have rebelled against the census taking, absolutely refusing to be counted. Sherbining, the leader of the colony, has done everything in his power to persuade the colonists to submit, and they have been threatened with arrest without avail.

The census commissioner has telegraphed to the Minister of Agriculture at Ottawa asking for instructions. From previous experience, the police and census men here believe that the instructions will be to arrest all men who refuse to give the data required and preparations are being made to send a strong force of officers to the colony to enforce the law.

Found Bodies in the Niagara.

Niagara Falls, Ont., July 15.—The body of an unidentified man was taken from the river below the falls by the Maid of the Mist at six o'clock last night. The body, which had apparently been in the water for some time, was that of a young man with red hair, partially clothed in brown trousers, light brown underwear, and low black shoes. Nothing that would aid in identification was found on the body.

The body of eight-year-old Daniel Fill, who disappeared from his North Tonawanda home Tuesday, was found in the river above the falls late yesterday afternoon. It was recovered by power house workmen.

Niagara Falls, Ont., July 15.—City Clerk Seymour yesterday notified Edward Davis that he is entitled to the council seat made vacant by the resignation of Ald. William Holliman, following the hearing before Master-in-Chambers Cartwright recently. Davis has until July 19 to accept

PETERBORO BOYS GIVE GRAPHIC DESCRIPTIONS OF THE FIRE HORROR

Garnet Rankin Former Pupil of Collegiate Institute had to run for his Life Through the Blazing Bush—J. D. O'Brien Tells of the Conditions at Cobalt.

SOME THRILLING DETAILS

The Examiner has received a number of vividly interesting letters from Peterborough boys in the Porcupine district. Mr. Jack O'Brien, son of Separate School Inspector M. O'Brien, Gilmour street, writes as follows from Cobalt:

Cobalt, Ont., July 13, 1911.

The Daily Examiner,
Peterborough, Ont.

While the terrific holocaust in the North, as far as fatalities are concerned is consummated, the bush fires are still raging and awaiting to be extinguished by the one Blessed Power on earth that alone can extinguish them—rain. I cannot tell from actual experience of the immensity of the horror that reigned in the mammoth fire zone since Monday noon. I was, thank God, not there. From the gruesome reports gleaned from the hundreds of poor, half-clothed individuals—who as by miracle escaped from a masterful and overpowering hell—and those more or less wounded who, bandaged from head to foot, came down on the early morning special, it were infinitely more impossible to conceive what the terrible agony must have been to the perished and the survivors during the last forty-eight hours. Cobalt is far removed from the scenes of disaster, but as it was the Mecca of the North when there were no terrorizing elements to impede the great mining industry, so it is now and will be the haven for all the afflicted. Three special relief cars arriving to date from Cochrane and Porcupine with the sufferers have kept the sisters of the Town Hospital and the nurses of the Red Cross Hospital constantly on the move. The capacity of both hospitals will shortly be over-taxed. Everyone so far brought down has had all possible attention. Nothing has been left undone to make the poor patient even forget his terrible encounter with death. Great praise is due to the hospital staffs, the Mine Managers' Association and in fact the mass of the citizens of Cobalt, who all last night worked unceasingly for their unfortunate brethren.

OTHER DISASTERS IN NORTH

But the pathetic and somely kindness of the Northland is not a novelty just sprung into existence. Innumerable disasters have occurred before. I remember the terrible explosion that took place on the 18th of May, 1906, when the powder house of the Timmins mine fell a prey to the flames of the bush fires in Coleman and when the two hundred homes were shattered as match-wood. I saw several disastrous conflagrations in Old Cobalt, including the never-to-be-forgotten one of July 2d, 1908, when the flames fairly spirited away every shack that stood on the "historic" Haileybury Road. I saw Gowganda and Elk Lake when the flames swept away the little all of everyone, and I was in Cochrane a year ago when the Grand Trunk Pacific Town got its first visitation. While there were few fatalities resulting from these, each and everyone was attended with sorrowful losses. But "Big-hearted Jim" in his Khaki clothes and Stetson hat was right there just the same. He stood on the same pedestal as the Idols of Service and Rex Beach for everything he had—purse, clothing, provisons belonged to his unfortunate brother in the time of need.

WORST ON RECORD

For extensive loss of life and property, no disaster ever recorded in Ontario compares with the present. It is contended that the total loss of human life will be over three hundred souls. But while the entire district is in the throes of this morbid disaster, it must not be imagined that all the suffering is confined to the Northern camps that were eaten out by the flames or the hospitals where now lie the dying and wounded. Remember that the larger percentage of prospectors in the new fields were Old Cobalters who knew the Silver City when it was a swamp. Many who will never return were actually born here and never felt the sweetening influences of the more stolid civilization of Older Ontario. As one old man remarked who heard from his son "George" but had his fears about his poor boy "Dick." "You might say this was their native town, for here were they born and brought up to their new rugged life." Think of five hundred families in Cobalt to-day, each with one or more of its members strayed—God knows where—in the thick of the ill-fated bush, and imagine the mental anguish that must have been theirs as they formed en masse on the station platform or congregated in eager little knots on the "square" early this morning to await the arrival of the first southbound relief train. Masterful fiction can graphically describe similar circumstances but I am convinced that it is the sight-seer alone who can be truly impressed with the sorrowful details in all their grim reality. Scores of tear-

Double Drowning Was Narrowly Averted

A Young Lady and Her Escort Were Precipitated Into the River—Two Young Men Make a Gallant Rescue

A double drowning fatality was narrowly averted by the prompt action of two young men yesterday afternoon near Yankee Bonnett.

A party of four, consisting of two girls and two young men, decided to spend the afternoon on the cool and inviting waters of the Otonabee. They accordingly secured the use of a canoe and a row boat. The male members of the party occupied the latter and towed the ladies who sat in the canoe.

The young ladies, no doubt, tiring of their isolated positions, decided to change, with the result that the canoe was swamped and two of the party were precipitated into the water.

A number of canoeists hastily paddled to the scene of the accident and took up advantageous positions as spectators, but no assistance was offered to the couple who were in the water clinging to the side of the boat, until two gallant young men who had espied the accident from a distance, paddled up and took a hand in the affair.

As the young lady who was in the water represented a considerable amount, avoirdupois, the question of lifting her into the boat was not to be considered. It was then decided to tow the entire outfit to shore. This was accordingly done, and the couple were landed safely on terra firma none the worse for their thrilling experience.

CARELESS SHOT FROM CAR WOUNDED SECTION-MAN CULPRIT IS ARRESTED

A most unlucky shot was the one that Bert Slade of Kincardine, a representative of a lightning rod concern, fired from a box car on the Grand Trunk at Hastings on Saturday afternoon. The ill-fated discharge of a Smith and Weston revolver resulted in a Grand Trunk section man being shot in the leg, in the arrest of Slade at Lindsay charged with the shooting and in the apprehension at the same point of a Peterborough youth who had chosen the economical method of travelling via the box car route. It appears that Slade was coming from Hastings in a box car in charge of some vehicles and horses and shortly after the departure of the train tried out his revolver by carelessly firing from the open door of the car. He fired at random, but unfortunately the missile wounded a section man, whose name could not be learned, in the leg. The Lindsay police were communicated with and Slade was arrested at the arrival of the train at that point. With him was logged a Peterborough boy who had boarded the train here and who was locked up for several hours, appearing in police court at Lindsay this morning on a charge of trespassing, his offence costing him a $5 fine and $4.60 in costs. Slade was fined $12 and costs, or $14.50, on a charge of having fire-arms in his possession, while he is being held on the charge of shooting until more information is received from the authorities at Hastings. Detective Scott went down to Hastings today to investigate the affair.

Peterboro Man Is Badly Injured At Blackwater

Lindsay, July 17.—W. E. Taylor, a Grand Trunk brakeman, whose home is in Peterborough, is in the Ross Memorial Hospital with his right arm and wrist terribly mangled as the result of being run over by a Grand Trunk engine and van at Blackwater Junction this morning.

From information received here it appears that Taylor was attending to a switch when he became caught in the switch and was run over by the train, which passed over his arm. He was brought to Lindsay on a special train in charge of Conductor Ringland, with Dr. Oliver of Sunderland in attendance, and on the arrival of the train here was taken to the Hospital, where it has been decided to amputate the injured arm.

THE
Cost of Glasses

When you think of having your eyes examined and of the possibility of wearing glasses, the matter of cost naturally arises.

As in everything else, good work, careful skilful work, is apt to cost more than work less good.

There is nothing you buy for your personal use that you ought to be more careful about, that you can afford to have the best of, than those glasses that you are going to depend on to preserve and assist your eyesight.

The reason we have succeeded so well and our business has grown so satisfactorily is that the best work is given in every case and a reasonable price is charged.

RESPONSIBILITY FOR THE ELECTION.

In regular course there would be another session of the Dominion Parliament after the present one before the election of a new House of Commons; apparently the country is to be plunged prematurely into a general election, for which there is neither cause, nor excuse. To increase the consequent inconvenience this has been preceded by a session during which much time has been wasted, and comparatively little progress has been made with the ordinary work of Parliament. For both this waste of time and the untimely election, if there is one, the Opposition in the House of Commons should and will, be held entirely responsible.

While the Government has no reason to shrink from the apparently impending contest, which would result in an undiminished Liberal majority, if not an increased one, it is every way better that the adoption or rejection of the reciprocity agreement should be settled at once in the usual way, and that the election should be held at the usual time. This is especially the case in this census year, which should and must be followed by a redistribution of the representatives of the electors in the House of Commons. The West has been filling up so rapidly that it must have an increase of membership, and to go prematurely to the country now means deprivation of its right for a whole Parliament, whether long or short. Unless there is another election held almost immediately there will be great injustice done to a large and growing section of the Dominion, and for this injustice Mr. Borden and his supporters must be held absolutely and entirely responsible.

The excuse for the stand taken by the Opposition, that there must be an election ,is that the reciprocity agreement with the United States is of such importance that it ought to be referred to the people for their decision . This is perilously close to nonsense. There have been many things done by Parliament in the past fifty years to which the same remark would apply with equal fitness, including the adoption of the Quebec resolutions, which contained the principle and much of the form of our federal constitution. The enactments that led to the ultimate construction of our great transcontinental railways have always been put through without appeals to the people. The Washington Treaty of 1871 contained a considerable element of reciprocity, and it was submitted to the Canadian Parliament for approval, but Parliament did not refer it to the people. Neither was the adoption of the naval policy within the past two years so submitted. It was developed by degrees and by discussions until it took its present form.

The fact is that the British parliamentary system does not lend itself advantageously to such references to the electors. General elections, besides being costly and cumbrous, are ineffective so far as deciding a single issue is concerned. There are many issues at every election, and each issue has its own share in producing the general result. It has always been so, and it will always be so. In fact, it is better so. If the will of the people is to be found out in relation to such question as reciprocity a plebiscite might be taken and Parliament might then be allowed to run its course and provide for a leisurely redistribution arrangement. But this is not a question about which so much fuss need be made, for the agreement is virtually a yearly one. It is not for any fixed term, and it may be discontinued any time on a reasonable notice.

People sometimes wonder and inquire how an Opposition, which is a minority of the House of Commons, is able to force the Government to go to the country sooner than the proper time. The explanation is that in Committee of Supply every member is allowed to speak as long and as often as he pleases, and as the appropriations must be made before the 1st of September next, the Opposition can easily force a dissolution of Parliament, by allowing that date to pass without any progress being made. Perhaps this power should not be in the hands of the minority, but it cannot now be withdrawn during this session. If Mr. Borden really wants an appeal to the people on reciprocity he can have it, but he must be held responsible for having the election out of due time, and also for the disappointment of the West in the matter of redistribution and of increased representation.

SIR WILFRID'S WELCOME.

The Kingston Standard is much exercised by reason of the enthusiastic welcome extended to Sir Wilfrid Laurier on his return from the Old Land. It gives expression to its feelings in the following paragraph:

"After having been away barely six weeks, Sir Wilfrid Laurier returns to Canada and is welcomed in almost royal state. It would be interesting to know what he has done or said in these six weeks that warrant his reception as a conquering hero. Is it his anti-Imperialism that has appealed to these worshippers; or is it his separationist policy? But is it not all absurd, this blare of trumpets, this clash of cymbals, this lip-effusion, after six weeks?"

The Standard has missed the point of the welcome extended to the returning Premier. Its significance was not confined to his achievements during six weeks in the Old Land, although his presence there as the dominating figure of an Empire conference did much to advertise Canada in the eyes of the world. It was an opportunity, rather, for an expression of the admiration which has been growing in the hearts of thousands of Canadians year by year. His homecoming was the occasion, not the cause, of the general rejoicing. This welcome extended by the people of Canada was a tribute earned, not by six weeks abroad, but by many years spent in the service of the Dominion. A similar confidence will be expressed by the ballots of the electors at whatever date the next election may be brought on.

THE IMPENDING CRISIS IN BRITAIN.

The House of Lords has amended, in several important respects, the "Parliament" Bill sent up by the House of Commons. The bill has passed through its committee stage and has been reported back to the House. The amendments have been concurred in and there can be no doubt that it will, as amended, be read a third time and passed. It will then go back to the House of Commons, which will promptly and summarily reject the amendments that were adopted in spite of warnings from the Liberal Peers that they would not be accepted by the government which leads the lower House.

This will precipitate the most important singe constitutional incident in the whole range of British history, not excepting the accession of William III and his acceptance of the Crown under a mere parliamentary title instead of an hereditary one. By the parliament bill the House of Lords is expressly debarred fro mamending any financial bill sent up to it by the House of Commons, and is prevented from permanently preventing the enactment into law of other than financial measures. For example the Education bill, passed by the Commons early in the career of the Liberal Ministry has been hung up in its progress for several sessions. Should the Parliament bill become law, the Education bill may be passed inside of two years in spite of the Lords, if they oppose its enactment. The Home Rule for Ireland bill will quite certainly be passed in a very few years, and so will the "Conciliation" bill, the one which is intended to confer the parliamentary franchise on all otherwise qualified unmarried women and widows.

What will the Lords do when their amendments are rejected by the Commons? What will the King do when he is advised to create Peers enough to pass the Parliament bill without amendment, if the Lords undertake to insist on their amendments? It is hardly worth while to prophesy when the event is so near, whatever it may be. The probability seems to be that the Lords will submit, as the lesser of two evils, and that an important permanent change will thus be made in the constitution of the United Kingdom.

Some of the British Conservative journals strongly advise submission with the assurance that at the next general election the Unionists will be victorious and will then repeal the obnoxious measure. It is not likely that they will be victorious, and the surest way to keep the Liberals in office is to talk of so reactionary a proceeding. In any event it is worth the while of thoughtful men all over the Empire to watch important history in the making. We have our own impending crisis, which is important enough, but the British crisis has an Imperial interest attaching to it, which we can not arouse by any of our domestic struggles.

Waste Of Forest Wealth Caused By Forest Fires

(Toronto Star.)

In 1910 the Ontario Government reported a fire-ranging staff of nearly one thousand men on duty on licensed lands, forest reserves, railways and Crown territory. It was pointed out, however, that well-qualified men are not always available. A departmental report says:

"It is a difficult matter, at the season of the year when fire rangers are most required, to obtain a number of well-skilled bushmen, who are educated and otherwise equipped for this work. In the early part of the summer such men are still employed by the lumber companies in driving the streams, and again in the months of August and September lumbering operations are beginning for the ensuing winter, and such men are looking for a winter's employment, and will not stay on fire ranging when they can get better wages and be sure of several months' steady work."

The question of wages should not be allowed to stand in the way of securing a competent fire-ranging staff. If money can buy and equip a thoroughly effective fire-fighting organisation for New Ontario, it will be well spent in the preservation of life and assets. For years the north country has been a prey to fires. This year is the fortieth anniversary of one of the worst of these conflagrations, and its effects are still visible. J. F. Whitson, O.L.S., refers to it in a book published a few years ago. "To-day," he writes, "you will scarcely find a township in the white and red pine country that has not been burned or partly burned over, and in many instances the fire has swept over them several times. The fire of 1871 started at almost every part of the compass along the north shore from French River to Kaministikwia on Lake Superior. The fire swept with fierce energy over an area of more than 2,000 square miles, leaving blackened and giant pines to be a reminder for more than half a century of the immense destructiveness there and then caused, converting a virgin forest into a barren and desolate wilderness." There was also a great fire in 1885 "which burned easterly to the shores of Lake Temiskaming, up the Montreal River to its source, and westerly along the height of land for over 200 miles to near Michipicoten." But the two thousand square miles covered by the conflagration of 1871 represent only one-fifth of the area over which forest fires have raged of recent days.

The disastrous results of burning over a large extent of territory were set forth by the Hon. Clifford Sifton in an address before the Conservation Commission, in which he described the effects of a forest fire which he himself witnessed:

"It destroyed not only the timber, but the young growth and the covering of moss and forest mould, which is the only thing that sustains vegetable life on those hills. In that district the soil covering is very thin, and once the fire goes through, there is nothing left but the barren rocks interspersed with lakes. For such destruction there is absolutely no excuse, and the most drastic enforcement of the law should be had to prevent it. A few striking examples will quickly disseminate the knowledge that no mercy will be shown to those who violate the law in this respect, and the fires started by careless prospectors and miners will cease. . . . Without the protection of the forest growth and vegetable covering upon the soil, the regular and even flow of our rivers will be forever a thing of the past. This is not a problem of the far distant future; it is a problem of the present."

The terrible loss of life entailed in New Ontario's bush fires of recent days has plunged the whole Province in sorrow. When such loss is accompanied by a destruction of Provincial assets and a devastation of thousands of square miles of country, it becomes all the more significant. When the very soil is devoured by the flames, and the waterways of the future are imperilled, the demand for a better system of fire protection in the north country becomes imperative. As it is, the fire-scourged area will bear the scars of 1911 for half a century to come.

Meeting Of Liberals Held To Consider Local Situation

Hon Mr. Stratton Desires to Retire For Business Reasons---Strongly Urged to Continue in Public Life----Meeting Adjourned to Permit Him to Reconsider and Pending Developments as to Certainty of General Election

In answer to the call of Mr. T. J. Hartley, president of the West Peterborough Liberal Association, a meeting of representative Liberals was held in the offices of Messrs. O'Connell & Gordon on Saturday evening.

Mr. Hartley occupied the chair and explained that he had called the meeting, in view of the possibility of a general election in the near future, to consider the matter of calling a convention for the selection of a candidate. He had received a letter from Mr. Stratton, suggesting this course, and stating that for business reasons he would like to be relieved.

Hon. Mr. Stratton said he had noticed that the Conservatives had called a nominating convention, and he thought the Liberals should prepare for a contest. He had written Mr. Hartley to this effect and also added that he would like to be relieved. If Mr. Borden pursues his announced obstructive tactics when the House meets, an election will be forced. He had good reasons for his anxious desire to retire from politics. His associates in the several business concerns with which he was connected, thought and desired that he should retire from politics and give his attention to matters for which he was, as they were good enough to say, efficiently adapted; they felt reasonably enough, it must be admitted that a practical absence of six months eyery year, engaged in parliamentary and representative duties, was not compatible with the promotion of the business interests for which he was largely responsible. It was embarrassing to be in a position where, from political motives, every little thing was seized upon and made a charge, to the detriment of business interests. And though such attacks, as had been repeatedly proved, were unfounded, yet his business associates, in view of financial interests being sensitive to the influence of even unfounded political attacks, were not to be blamed in taking the position they did. He (Mr. Stratton) was not afraid of a contest. The Liberal party never had a better cause; the issue of reciprocity was a clean-cut one. He was neither an extreme free trader nor extreme protectionist. He was opposed to any further extension of the British Preference, or holding out the hand of fellowship to the United States any further than the reciprocity agreement involved. He felt sure the Liberal government would win in an appeal to the people, which would come soon if public business were blocked on the resumption of the session. It cost him some effort to urge them to consider his request to retire seriously. If ever a man in public life has been stood by loyally and faithfully in the past twenty-five years it had been himself, and he thanked all those who had so faithfully stood by him. However, under the circumstances, he felt he was not unreasonable in asking to be relieved.

Mr. D. O'Connel referred to the probability of an election soon, if Mr. Borden persisted in blocking supply, and to the necessity of this riding being prepared, and a good candidate selected—one that would afford good prospects of success. Mr. Stratton requested to be relieved for business reasons; that request was a great matter of regret, to the riding to which he had given such valuable service for the past twenty-five years, gaining strength every year. In this time hard battles had been fought and won on every conceivable issue—sectarian and racial cries had been raised. But Mr. Stratton won, because he had been always animated by the spirit of justcie and fair play to all creeds and classes. He had given splendid service as both representative and as provincial minister. When he retired from active politics we had evidence of his great personal strength—he had been elected term after term for twenty years with increasing majorities, and for the first time in twenty years, after his retirement, the Liberal party met defeat in an election. When Mr. Stratton's services were demanded for the wider sphere of Dominion politics, at great sacrifice he yielded to the pressure and they knew with what result. He not only won the riding, but in two years has done a great deal for it. During Mr. Hall's energetic representation, and Mr. Stratton's, much has been done for West Peterborough, in providing public conveniences. But there is much yet to be done, and its doing depends upon good and energetic representation. The Dominion government has large demands, and, if Peterborough is to get its share, we need a man of experience and ability to press our claims. We want a strong candidate for the coming election. After being out of power for fifteen years, the Conservatives will make a desperate fight to win. There is no man that possesses in larger degree the business ability and organizing capacity demanded for success than Mr. Stratton. He has great demands upon his time. If he represents the riding as he must represent it—effectively—his business interests must necessarily suffer. But he (Mr. O'Connell) felt that Mr. Stratton had sufficient public spirit to make the sacrifice demanded. Remembering the value of Mr. Stratton's services to this riding, whose interests he has always had at heart—to which he has brought every advantage possible, if the Liberals of West Peterborough insist upon Mr. Stratton remaining its representative, they will be doing the riding a good service.

Mr. R. R. Hall, fully endorsed all Mr. O'Connell had said. We needed a strong candidate, for there never had been an election in twenty-five years in which Conservatives were were making so desperate a fight. There was evidence that the party had more money behind it than at any other time. They had funds to make lavish expenditures to pay for arguments in hundreds of papers against reciprocity. This was a difficult riding and needed a candidate of the highest ability to put up a winning fight. And we could not find a man to fill the bill better than Mr. Stratton, if he could make the necessary sacrifice. Mr. Stratton had showed the ability to defeat the desperate efforts to down him in the form of the lavish purchase of perjured witnesses. We need a strong man like him, and we should put it plainly to him as a duty that he should accept nomination.

Mr. F. D. Kerr said Mr. Stratton's experience and abilities, made him the man the people want—the man who can carry the riding, if he can see his way clear to accept the candidature. He had, however, the strong belief that Mr. Hall, would be able to hold the constituency for the Liberals, if he were the candidate.

Similar remarks were made by several others present, referring to the value of Mr. Stratton's representative services. He had the true idea of a representative, and was as fair to his political opponents as to his supporters—he had represented the Conservatives of the riding better than any member of their own politics had ever done.

Mr. Stratton remarked that he was not afraid of an election, but his fellow directors of the many large concerns of which he was president and vice-president, wanted him to drop out of politics and not remain a political target for attacks. He himself was not afraid of these, but they tended to affect business relations and there had been strong pressure brought upon him to retire, and give his more undivided attention to his business duties. This placed him in an embarassing position—he did not wish to refuse the requests of his business associates, nor turn a deaf ear to the kind words and appeals of his West Peterborough friends. While he considered it wise that a candidate should be brought out in time, yet parliament resumed next week, and we should soon know as to the prospects of an election, and in the meantime, in view of what had been urged upon him that evening, he could again sound his business associates as to his remaining in public life. As things were at present, however, he still felt that he would like to retire.

Mr. O'Connell, with a view of giving Mr. Stratton further time to consider, and gain more definite information as to the prospects of an election, moved, seconded by Mr. R. H. Leary, that this meeting be adjourned till next Saturday night, in the same place.—Carried.

Mr. R. R. Hall, or His Worship the Mayor ,are spoken of as candidates in case Mr. Stratton declines to again seek election.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT
By Ruth Cameron

SHE is bright. She is pretty. She is an eminently likeable person in many ways, BUT she has one decided "out."

And the "out" is that she is always saying flat things.

Of course you know what I mean by that. For instance, we are discussing the difficulty of getting a seat on the trolley cars at rush hours, and she says, "Somehow I always seem to have a seat given me. I don't know why it is. I hope I don't look so old as all that." She attempts to appear most puzzled and ingenius as she says it. The attempt is a complete failure. We all know she thinks the reason is quite obvious.

Again she professes herself most indignant because "people are always staring at me. I think it's perfectly horrid."

Perhaps we foolishly assure her that she can't blame them, and thereby give her an incentive to say more flat things.

Perhaps we are sensible enough to maintain silence. In either case we are inwardly registering a doubt as to the sincerity of her indignation.

I met a most virulent example of this type of girl at an afternoon tea the other day. She was a bride and the tea was given in her honour.

Twice during the afternoon her husband called her up on the telephone. The instrument was in the hall, and by lowering her voice she could have talked without being heard. But that was evidently the last thing that she desired, for, instead of lowering her voice, she raised it, and fragments like this floated in to us: "Be patient, dear, only one hour longer." "Yes, dear, if you can't wait for me to come home you may come for me." "Well, you can look at my picture, then, darling."

The second time she came away from the 'phone she announced with a sweet simper, "Isn't he funny? He says he can't wait to see me. He says he's hungry."

Did you ever eat anything so cloyingly sweet that the sweetness choked you all up all of a sudden?

Well, that's the way my mind felt after that dose.

Of course everybody says flat things once in a while. But wise people try to make that once-in-a-while synonymous with seldom or hardly ever.

Also, of course, it's hard to tell when you are saying them. But here's a pretty good way to tell. Whenever you catch yourself planning to say something simply because you think it will impress people with your beauty or popularity or some other desirable quality, don't say it. Ten to one they will see right through you and it will sound flat.

The Home and "The Sovereign"

The heating apparatus is always the most important equipment in a home. A good boiler makes a home comfortable to live in during the Winter, and easy to sell at any time.

Houses that are heated by "Sovereign" boilers are always in more demand than houses that are not—any person who has lived in a "Sovereign" house always wants to go back to a "Sovereign" house again.

Let us send you the names of some of your neighbors who live in houses heated by the "Sovereign" hot water boiler—they will tell you how you may make yourself more comfortable indoors this next Winter.

By JACK LONDON

Even the women and the several pickaninnies of the plantation were linked up with the rest, two deep—a horde of naked savages a trifle under two hundred strong. In addition to their ornaments of beads and shell and bone their pierced ears and nostrils were burdened with safety pins, wire nails, metal hair pins, rusty iron handles of cooking utensils, and the patent keys for opening corned beef tins. Some wore penknives clasped on their kinky locks for safety. On the chest of one a china knob was suspended, on the chest of another the brass wheel of an alarm clock.

Facing them, clinging to the railing of the verandah, stood the sick white man. Any one of them could have knocked him over with the blow of a little finger. Despite his fire arms, the gang could have rushed him and delivered that blow, when his head and the plantation would have been theirs. Hatred and murder and lust for revenge they possessed to overflowing. But one thing they lacked, the thing that he possessed,—the flame of mastery that would not quench, that burned fiercely as ever in the diseased wasted body, and that was ready to flare forth and scorch and singe them with its ire.

"Narada! Billy!" Sheldon called sharply.

Two men slunk unwillingly forward and waited.

Sheldon gave the keys of the handcuffs to a house-boy who went under the house and loosed the prisoner.

"You fella Narada, you fella Billy, take up this fella boy along tree, and make fast, hands high up," was Sheldon's command.

While this was being done, slowly, amidst mutterings and restlessness on the part of the onlookers, one of the house-boys fetched a heavy-handled, heavy-lashed whip. Sheldon began a speech.

"This fella Arunga, me cross along him too much. I no steal this fellow Arunga. I no gammon. I say, 'All right, you come along me Berande, work three fella year.' He say, 'All right, me come along you work three fella year.' He come. He catch plenty good fella kai-kai (food) plenty good fellow money. What name he run away? Me too much cross along him. I knock what name outa him fella. I pay Seelee, big fella master along Balesuna, one case tobacco catch that fella Arunga. All right. Arunga pay that fella case tobacco. Six pounds that fella Arunga pay. Alle same one year more that fella Arunga work Berande. All right. Now he catch ten fella whip three times. You fella Billy catch whip, give that fella Arunga ten fella three times. All fella boys look see. All fella Marys (women) look see: bime bye they like run away ther think strong fella too much, no run away. Billy, strong fella too much ten fella three times."

The house-boy extended the whip to him, but Billy did not take it. Sheldon waited patiently. The eyes of all the cannibals were fixed upon him in doubt and fear and eagerness. It was the moment of test, whereby the lone white man was to live or be lost.

"Ten fella three times, Billy," Sheldon said encouragingly, though there was a certain metallic rasp in his voice.

Billy scowled, looked up and looked down, but did not move.

"Billy."

Sheldon's voice exploded like a pistol shot. The savage startled physically. Grins overspread the grotesque features of the audience, and there was a sound of tittering.

"S'pose you like too much lash that fella Arunga, you take him fella Tulagi," Billy said. "One fella government agent make plenty lash. That um fella law. Me savvee um fella law."

It was the law and Sheldon knew it. But he wanted to live this day and the next day, and not to die waiting for the law to operate the next week or the week after.

"Too much talk along you!" he cried angrily. "What name, eh? What name?"

"Me savvee law," the savage repeated stubbornly.

"Astor!"

Another man stepped forward in almost a sprightly way and glanced insolently up. Sheldon was selecting the worst characters for the lesson.

"You fella Astor, you fella Narada, tie up that fella Billy alongside other fella same fella way.

"Strong fella tie," he cautioned them.

"You fella Astor, take that fella whip. Plenty strong big fella too much ten fella three times. Savvee!"

"No," Astor grunted.

Sheldon picked up the rifle that had leaned against the rail, and cocked it.

"I know you, Astor," he said calmly. "You work along Queensland six years."

"Me fella missionary," the black interrupted with deliberate insolence. "Queensland you stop jail one fella year. White fella master damn fool no hang you. You too much bad fella. Queensland you stop jail six months two fella time. Two fella time you steal. All right, you missionary. You savvee one fella prayer?"

"Yes, me savvee prayer," was the reply.

"All right, then you pray now, short time little bit. You say one fella prayer damn quick, then me kill you."

Sheldon held the rifle on him and waited. The black glanced around at his elbows, but none moved to aid him. They were intent upon the coming spectacle, staring fascinated at the white man with death in his hans who stood alone on the great verandah. Sheldon had won, and he knew it. Astor changed his weight irresolutely from one foot to the other. He looked at the white man, and saw his eyes gleaming level along the sights.

"Astor," Sheldon said, seizing the psychological moment, "I count three fella time. Then I shoot you fella dead, good by, all finish you."

And Sheldon knew that when he had counted three he would drop him in his tracks. The black knew it, too. That was why Sheldon did not have to do it, for when he had counted one, Astor reached out his hand and took the whip. And right well Astor laid on the whip, augered at his fellows for not supporting him, and venting his anger with every stroke. From the verandah, Sheldon egged him on to strike with strength. All the two triced savages screamed and howled while the blood oozed down their backs. The lesson was being well written, in red.

When the last of the gang, including the two howling culprits, had passed out through the compound gate, Sheldon sank down half-fainting on his couch.

"You're a sick man," he groaned.

"A sick man."

"But you can sleep at ease to-night," he added, half an hour later.

CHAPTER III.

The Jessie.

Two days passed, and Sheldon felt that he could not grow any weaker and live, much less make his four daily rounds of the hospital. The deaths were averaging four a day, and there were more new cases than recoveries. The blacks were in a funk. Each one, when taken sick, seemed to make every effort to die. Once down on their backs they lacked the grit to make a struggle. They believed they were going to die, and they did their best to vindicate that belief. Even those that were well were sure that it was only a matter of days when the sickness would catch them and carry them off. And, yet, believeing this with absolute conviction, they somehow lacked the nerve to rush the frail wraith of a man with the white skin and escape from the charnel house by the whale boats. They chose the lingering death they were sure awaited them, rather than the immediate death they were very sure would pounce upon them if they went up against the master. That he never slept, they knew. That he could not be conjured to death, they were equally sure—they had tried it. And even the sickness that was sweeping them off could not kill him.

With the whipping in the compound, discipline had improved. They cringed under the iron hand of the white man. They gave their scowls or malignant looks with averted faces or, when his back was turned. They saved their mutterings for the barracks at night where he could not hear. And there were no more runaways and no more night prowlers on the verandah.

Dawn of the third day after the whipping brought the Jessies white sails in sight. Eight miles away, it was not till two in the afternoon that the light air-fans enabled her to drop anchor a quarter of a mile off the shore. The sight of her gave Sheldon fresh courage, and the tedious hours of waiting did not irk him. He gave his orders to the boss-boys, and made his regular trips to the hospital. Nothing mattered now. His troubles were at an end. He could lie down and take care of himself and proceed to get well. The Jessie had arrived. His partner was on board, vigorous and hearty from six weeks recruiting on Malaita. He could take charge now, and all would be well with Berande.

Sheldon lay in the steamer chair, and watched the Jessie's whale-boat pull in for the beach. He wondered why only three sweeps were pulling, and he wondered still more when, beached, there was so much delay in getting out of the boat. Then he understood. The three blacks, who had been pulling, started up the beach with a stretcher on their shoulders. A white man, whom he recognized as the Jessie's captain, walked in front and opened the gate, then dropped behind to close it. Sheldon knew that it was Hughie Drummond who lay in the stretcher, and a mist came before his eyes. He felt an overwhelming desire to die. The disappointment was too great. In his own state of terrible weakness he felt that it was impossible to go on with his task of holding Berande Plantation tight gripped in his fist. Then the will of him flamed up again, and he directed the blacks to lay the stretcher beside him on the floor. Hughie Drummond, whom he had last seen in health, was an emaciated skeleton. His closed eyes were deep sunken. The shrivelled lips had fallen away from the teeth, and the cheek-bones seemed bursting through the skin. Sheldon sent a house-boy for his thermometer and glanced questioningly at the Captain.

"Black-water-fever," the Captain said. "He's been like this for six days — unconscious. And we've got dysentry on board. What's the matter with you?"

"I'm burying four a day," Sheldon answered, as he bent over from the steamer chair and inserted the thermometer under his partner's tongue.

Captain Oleson swore blasphemously and sent a house-boy to bring whiskey and soda. Sheldon glanced at the thermometer.

"One hundred and seven," he said. "Poor Hughie."

Captain Oleson offered him some whiskey.

"Couldn't think of it—perforation, you know," Sheldon said.

He sent for a boss-boy and ordered a grave to be dug; also, some of the packing-cases to be knocked together into a coffin. The blacks did not get coffins. They were buried as they died, being carted on a sheet of galvanized iron, in their nakedness from the hospital to the hole in the ground. Having given the orders, Sheldon lay back in his chair with closed eyes.

The Air Is Germ Laden

Rich, Red Blood is the Greatest of Germicides—You Can Get the Blood Right by Using

DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD

When the blood is rich and red, when it is largely composed of red corpuscles, there is little chance for disease germs. They cannot thrive in the system which is filled with good blood.

But in the spring the blood is generally thin, weak and watery. It lacks the vitalizing red corpuscles and you become an easy prey to the germs of disease which seem to lurk everywhere at this time of year.

You can fortify yourself against the germs of disease by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. This great restorative treatment forms new, red corpuscles in the blood, makes the blood rich, red and healthy.

Weakness, tired feelings, stomach derangements and disorders of the nervous system soon disappear when Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is used.

This medicine cures by the building-up process, and for this reason its benefits are lasting. Nearly everybody needs something in the spring to enrich the blood and tone up the system, and it would be impossible to get a more satisfactory spring tonic than Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

A LARGE BARN

On Wednesday of last week a number of the villagers and farmers assembled at Mr. S. S. McCombs' lot 14, con. II of Rawden, to assist in erecting one of the largest barns in North Hastings, the dimensions of which are 50 x 100 and containing over 200 pieces of timber. Everything went together with great satisfaction, much to the credit of Mr. C. N. Reid.

After the completion of the structure the weary labourers retired to a sumptuous repast, provided by the good housewife and assisted by about twenty of the fairest ladies of Rawdon.

When all was over, all with one accord voiced their appreciation by wishing that a barn raising came every day.

LIQUOR CASE DISMISSED

Mr. Bruce Rickey, proprietor of the summer hotel at Bridgenorth, appeared before Magistrate Edmison this morning in the County Court on a charge of violating the Liquor License Act, and was alleged to have sold liquor to people of that neighbourhood. The defence was conducted by Mr. G. N. Gordon. The Magistrate dismissed the case on the promise that the defendant would keep the house clear of liquor, even for his own use. The case had come up several times and had been remanded, and Mr. Stewart, License Inspector, stated this morning that he had a lot of witnesses, who were still unable to appear. He also stated that his star witness had gone to parts unknown, owing to a charge of alleged theft from R. Gibbs' livery, but said that he had evidence from reputable citizens that they had bought whiskey from the accused.

Mr. Gordon asked that the case be dismissed, as a charge of that kind hanging over a man was very injurious to his business. He also stated that some of the talk that had been circulated had been proven true by himself. The case was then dismissed.

TIRED-OUT KIDNEYS

Kidney troubles are so frightfully common because the kidneys are so easily upset by overwork or excesses of eating and drinking. Cure is effected not by whipping them on to renewed effort, but by awakening the action of liver and bowels by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This rests the kidneys and makes them well. Backache and urinary disorders then disappear.

RICHARD HALL & SON

PETERBORO BOYS GIVE GRAPHIC DESCRIPTION

strained mothers waited around through the dreary night anxious for the news of a son or perhaps two or three of their boys who had gone North in quest of a greater fortune since the April snows had melted from the ground. Many of these had their infants in their arms and seemed to be glad when their little ones became uneasy for their hushing lullabie afforded some relief in their painful suspense.

Hundreds of sad-eyed fathers just looked, remarking that "it was terrible—awful", and prayed in their minds that God had watched over all their boys in the midst of danger. Others had daughters employed in the little shack restaurants of Porcupine, which always create the bulwark of a mushroom town. No need to conjecture as to what their thoughts and feelings must have been. "Have you seen our father," asked two bright little lads of two well-known French trappers, who had that day arrived in town after escaping hours before from the outskirts of the fire belt. "He was with us yesterday morning when he left Kelso, and mother is anxious." And the old fellows shook their heads while the little ones turned away with but a glimmer of hope in their hearts. Another group I noticed, consisted of a mother, her two sons, a nephew and two daughters. They were eager for news of "father and uncle." It was reported at first that these two were dead, but since a telegram has reached the family that both are safe, and there is much rejoicing in one little home. A similar experience happened to another lady in Cobalt who, on first report heard that her father, a carpenter, was among the dead in the shaft at the West Dome. When, however, the first train came and the father appeared on the platform, the meeting between father and daughter was touching. The tales told by the bulletin boards were the first to break the news to many of the bereaved. Two little girls, the daughters of Captain George Dunbar, started out from home to glean if possible some tidings of their father. The large crowd, however, in front of the bulleting board which announced his death among that of fifty others, obstructed their view and hoping for the best, they went on their way to visit some of their companions. The news did not reach them till some well meaning friend a few hours afterwards, started to sympathize with them in the loss they had sustained. Like experiences happened to several among the twelfth of July crowd that came from New Liskeard, where the Orange celebration was held. Many of the celebrators in fact, who had holidayed in other parts, were not aware that the bush fires had grown into a disaster and it was curious to see scores around the station assisting at the straitus commemorating the triumph of the Prince of Orange, little knowing that the charred remains of their dearest friends on earth were all that was mortal of them.

The first train did not bring many sufferers to the Red Cross, or, as it is known now, the Mines Hospital. The first fellow some of us took care of was a Swede employed at the Philadelphia mine. His hands and head were bandaged. When we showed him to the ambulance, he said he could walk to the hospital as his limbs were sound. And walk he did, but we fear with much difficulty, as the smoke and fumes that got into his lungs interfered with his breathing. Two of us held him up on either side and my companion asked him, "Are you burned? From what I can see of your face there are no marks." "I'm not burned," said Ole in his Scandinavian dialect, "I ben cooked—that place up there ben like hell" and he looked it, poor fellow, for what we could see of his flesh was boiled. The next man we conducted to the hospital, while not in a critical condition, was badly burned and scarred about the head face, neck and arms and he had both eyes bandaged, as they suffered terribly from smoke. "Had Dante been up there he would have put his inferno in the archives of his memory," said the poor chap jocularly. Although he suffered pain, he felt good to be out of it and he was something of a hero at the fire. It was not till some time afterwards that I knew him as my whiltom friend. Earnest P. Ashore, M.E., although to the best of my recollection. Earnie never looked like that before. Many bodies of the burned and drowned were likewise brought down and are being interred according to the best possible arrangements. Coffins are waiting here to-day for twenty-five, and the same number are expected down to-morrow. Apartner of one James Welsh was about to board yesterday's regular north bound train to meet him at Liskeard by previous appointment and draw up papers relative to mining business, but a south bound train which pulled in brought down the bodies of Welsh and two others who were suffocated yesterday afternoon at Pottsville. There is universal sorrow felt for poor "Billy" Moore who, after making such a heroic fight against the flames in South Porcupine, lost his life in the lake after giving assistance to Jack McMurrick. "Billy" was known to everyone in the mining country from the Quebec boundary to Lake Superior, the most popular and best liked chap that was ever in the district. In the early days of Cobalt he made his stamping grounds here and visited Peterborough many times on business.

J. D. O'BRIEN.

GARNET RANKIN'S ESCAPE.

Garnet Rankin, who attended the Collegiate Institute here for the last three years, and who for the past few months has been a member of a surveying party on the T. and N. O. Railway in the Porcupine district, had a thrilling escape from death, and in a letter to his father, gives a fascinating story of his adventures. His description is as follows:

Dear Father.— Back to Matheson this morning. Am just about all in (5.50 p.m.) We have just rested up this afternoon. On July 4th we left here 4 1-2 hours late, arriving at Iroquois Falls at 12.30 July 5th. About 1 o'clock we caught the Porcupine train, three cookies and the rest freight. We arrived at Golden City about 2.20 and packed our stuff over a mile to residency No. 3 on the shore of Porcupine lake, to bed at 4.30, up at 7 and packed out to camp No. 9, a tramp of seven miles along the right of way. That afternoon we started for the Holinger mine and proceeded to locate for the new road. We chain of measure, and every 100 feet drive a stake. The man running the transit sets the line. We had three axmen to clear the way, and behind us were two other fellows with the rod and level to get the elevation of the land that we chained. I must cut short all about our work, but we did this every day, over the muskeg and through burnt timber. The heat and mosquitoes were terrible. There are a great many criminals sentenced to work out here. We pass them every day. We always had dinner at the Holinger mine, but breakfast (at 6.00 a.m.. and supper at Camp No. 9. This camp is the farthest past the end of steel. They are all of rough logs, and abound with Pollocks Russians, etc. Rotten grub, or rather a rotten cook at Camp 9, but all right at the Holinger. A great fire swept over and destroyed the Holinger two weeks ago, but they have it built up now. We slept in a log shack at Camp 9 on the floor. We had a little hay under us, but the logs were pretty hard. In bed at 9 or 9.30 every night. We usually went in swimming each night at Pearl Lake. Sunday I was in seven different times all day. In diving off a raft I struck bottom with my stomach and chest, and they were ripped up a little—bled for two hours. A little stiff and sore yet.

Now for the big news. Of course there were small fires all over the district and the men were always fighting the flames from the mines, and the whole country was covered with smoke, but they never swept the whole region, as the wind was usually light. Well, Tuesday, the 11th, we were working north of the Minto mine, or had set out for there at 10 minutes to 7 a.m., and had reached the Holinger, and everything was all right. A little smoke, as usual. As some plans had to go down to Porcupine to the Residency No. 3, nine miles below, I offered to go. Our packs, including two blankets, etc., were packed and a team was to take them down to Camp 7 for us, as we were to leave for Camp 6 that night. It was a long, weary tramp through bush and over corduroy roads. When I arrived at Camp 7 the packs had not arrived, so I went on. Halfway to Camp 6 about 10.30 a.m., a heavy wind sprang up and I noticed several fires on the other side of the lake, the flames about 200 feet high. Then fires sprang up all around me, probably from sparks, and I had to run for it. It was terribly hot and the sparks and smoke almost did for me. I was running over a new road, and the ties were far apart and no gravel under them in the centre, and I fell when trying to run fast, as the smoke was so thick and the ties passing rapidly made me a little dissy. There was a fellow with a team of horses alongside the right of way and they were crazy. He later gave up trying to save them and had to take to the lake. I reached Camp 6 at last and warned them, and then I went on to the Residency No. 3, arriving there at 11.10. The smoke was so thick one could hardly see across the lake, 2 1-2 miles. There was an awful wind and it was next to impossible to stand up against it, and this is no exaggeration. At 12 o'clock Mr. Cement, the Chief Engineer, came in with Mr. Keys, chief of the new road to Porcupine and we had dinner. Then we went down to Camp 5. The smoke was thick and suffocating and had blotted out the sun. By this time thick clouds of it, black and full of ashes was sweeping over the whole country. The only signs of fire we could see was at South Porcupine—called South End—and we thought we might escape. There was just the cook and a fellow who had cut his foot with an axe and myself at this time at the house. About 1 o'clock Mr. Keyes came back, but they could not say how far the fire was from the camp on account of the smoke.

At 1.30 we had to keep close to the ground to breathe, although at times the smoke would lift, and sometimes we could see the sun, a red ball of fire, and crimson clouds of smoke. It was a terrible and awful sight. Then sparks started a fire behind the house; almost at the same time one started in the forest at the side, and then one in the wood pile, sending sparks over and around the house. It was build of wood with tar paper on the roof and heavy paper on the sides. All this time we were working to get the stuff, blankets plans and everything out of the house. It was on fire before we were half through. This was at 2.20. Five minutes later Camp 6 went up in flames. We had rolled all we could down the bluff to the lake and threw wet blankets on them. A car of 14 tons of dynamite blew up at South End, and a few minutes later 10 tons only 200 yards from us. We were all knocked flat on the ground. Then the smoke lifted a moment and we saw all of South Porcupine in flames and Camp 6, 200 yards from us, also burning and all the forest between. Then we saw a roof of a house boat 100 feet from us lift in the air two feet and come down again. Mr. Keyes and I ran over to it and got a woman out, and went back for some of her stuff, with the fellow who was living with her, when the whole roof lifted right up and over. It missed us by two feet. Then a canoe half full of water with two men half unconscious in it, drifted towards shore from across the lake and we waded out to our waists to get them in. A few minutes later another boat drifted in bottom up. Some one had been drowned. The two men said there were about 500 people up to their necks in the lake off the shore from South End. The waves were awful, but some launches were taking the women to Golden City. One launch was driven up on our beach and we waded out again to save it from the all, probably 100 lost their lives, cry and my eyes were almost closed from the heat and smoke. My face was black and I had not been shaved for a week. Mr. Keyes was as bad. One would never take him for Division Engineer here.

Had to Go Into Lake.

Later we all had to go into the lake to get away from the heat. We could not escape the smoke as that came from across the lake. Then Pottsville, near Golden City, caught fire and was demolished. It burned until 9 that night. Then prospectors and men from the camps began to come along the shore as the fire began to pass from the lake, and they said all the camps had been burned. Packs belonging to four of us had been left at Camp 7. Your bag, shirt, pajamas and my coat sweater, comb, brushes, tooth brushes, etc., underwear, socks, cap, blankets, tennis shoes, etc., were destroyed. Hundreds lost homes and all, probably 100 lost their lives. Very little was saved. We may be paid for our stuff, but I don't know. It was awful. Just one instance: There was a party of seven in the bush, three were brothers. They got caught, the fire starting all around them. Then and there they had to stand, three in one gang and four in the other. The first group managed to remain conscious and escaped through the flames, the other four were roasted, one of them being one of the brothers. The other brothers saw him burn but could not help him. They were an awful sight when they came out to us. Many were drowned in the lake, others smothered and burned. Hundreds of dead rabbits and many horses litter the right of way. About 7 o'clock we managed to get to Golden City which had not burned and had supper at the Murphy House. Then we went back, got some blankets and our instruments out and spent the night on the floor of the station. We left Golden City at 6 this a.m. Breakfast at 12.00. The woods about here are smouldering yet. Ashes from Porcupine 40 miles away. The people here were all packed up. I was nearly frozen, as it turned cold, and all I had left was shoes (wet), socks (wet), pants (partly wet), a thin under shirt and a light yellow shirt. I have not caught cold yet, although I was cold all night. You would not have known me this morning. Whiskers 1-4 inch long, face black, eyes swollen and bloodshot, shivering, nose peeling. I was a pretty tough sight. Train just in from North Bay—finish later.

No mail for me. Got your letter this a.m. and one from Roy. Read all the paper about the fire and you'll see I don't exaggerate. Cochrane is also burned. Hundreds are without shelter or food.

Write soon.
With love,
GARNET.

CURED OF CONSTIPATON

Mr. Andrews praises Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

Mr. George Andrews of Halifax, N.S., writes:

"For many years I have been troubled with chronic Constipation. This ailment never comes single-handed, and I have been a victim to the many illnesses that constipation brings in its train. Doctoring after doctrine I have taken in order to find relief, but one and all left me in the same hopeless condition. It seemed that nothing would expel from me the evil ailment that caused so much trouble, yet at last I read about these Indian Root Pills.

That was indeed a lucky day for me, for I was so impressed with the statements made that I determined to give them a fair trial.

They have regulated my stomach and bowels. I am cured of constipation, and I claim they have no equal as a medicine."

For over half a century Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills have been curing constipation and clogged, inactive kidneys, with all the ailments which result from them. They cleanse the whole system and purify the blood. Sold everywhere at 25c. a box.

The Park By-law.

On the 26th day of July one of the most important by-laws submitted to the ratepayers for some years will be voted upon. The city has almost doubled in population during the past ten years, and if we develop as rapidly as we should, and as we expect, the breathing spaces that this by-law is submitted to provide for will be needed. These can be purchased at the present time at small expenditure, and as the city grows these small parks will increase in value and will be worth much more, even as a speculation than the money would be if invested at the present time. Besides, the children of the residents will be provided with play-grounds here and there, that are absolutely essential to keep them off the street and give them an opportunity of enjoying themselves without the risk that attends their playing on the streets. It is hoped that no ratepayer will have the heart to go out and vote against this by-law, which will provide a park in the east, one in the south and two in other places not definitely decided upon. A healthy city must have healthy surroundings. Every ratepayer will see, without unduly enlarging upon the subject, the benefit of these small playgrounds.

Lock Company By-law.

The City Council will submit to the ratepayers on Friday, July 28th, two by-laws, fixing the assessment of the Peterborough Lock M'f'g Co., at $25,000 for ten years, from 1st of January, 1911. During the past year this company expended in buildings and machinery about $45,000, in equipping the company for a larger business. Recently the City of St. Catharines has given a competing company from the United States a free site and exemption from taxation on their building equivalent to a bonus of $50,000.

If in the keen competition which exists in Canada for the obtaining of new industries, several cities are prepared to liberally assist foreign capitalists, it certainly seems only fair that a local institution with entirely local capital and local management should be favoured by Peterborough. If we pursue a liberal policy of attracting and assisting industrial establishment we certainly cannot afford to overlook the claims of those already in existence and subjected to the keenest kind of competition, which leaves a narrow margin of profit and renders assistance of any kind all the more welcome. The ratepayers will be advancing their own interests and that of the city at large, as well as doing the fair thing to the Company in approving of the fixed assessment at $25,000.

Ackerman Co. By-law.

Another by-law that will be before the ratepayers for their approval will be that of Messrs. B. F. Ackerman & Son, passed on the 6th day of June, 1910, providing for giving them a fixed assessment, providing there is expended the sum of $8,000 in the enlargement of their factory and to enable them to employ from 50 to 75 additional employees.

If the improvements and extensions and increased employ of labour are dependent, as is provided in the by-law, this is a very strong claim for the request of the Company being endorsed. Under the terms of the by-law the Company enlarged their premises and have stipulated the extensions required of them, and no doubt the ratepayers will keep good faith with the City Council and Mr. Ackerman, by approving of this by-law with the others.

BAD SCALPS

What Parisian Sage Will Do

A bad scalp is no credit to anyone especially when it can be remedied by consistent use of Parisian Sage, the great scalp and hair tonic.

The cause of dandruff is a germ. Parisian Sage will kill these pests in a few days and thereby remove the cause of baldness.

Falling hair is caused by the dandruff germ. By killing these Parisian Sage at once restores vitality to the hair roots and commences a vigorous growth.

If the roots are not gone, Parisian Sage will grow hair. It strengthens thin, scraggy hair and makes it healthy and luxuriant. Stops itching scalp, after one or two applications, in fact is guaranteed by Wm. Madill to do this or your money back. Fifty cents a large bottle.

"INDIAN" FINED

Local Man Pays $10 For a Three Parts Full Flask

A local man was arraigned in the Police Court this morning on a charge of being drunk while on the black list. He was fined $10.00. He said he was not drunk, but did not deny having had a few drinks. When asked where he got his liquor he stated that he found a bottle in Babb's Lane on Friday night and brought it home. He said it was a 50 cent flask with a white label and was three parts full. He denied having given any person money to purchase it for him. The money had to be paid forth with, and he wanted to compromise but this was refused. He was arrested by an officer late last night.

Another local man was charged with being drunk and disorderly, but was allowed to go on the promise that he would get out of the city at once. He said that it was his first offence, and he hoped it would be his last time in court. He promised to get out at once and was allowed to go.

Another drunk was in the cells, but was too much intoxicated to appear.

TIME TABLE IN FOLDER FORM

The Grand Trunk Railway have just issued the first edition of a reconstructed compilation of their complete time-table in folder form. After careful thought and much labour this work has been turned out so that the travelling public may, wit has little trouble as possible, readily turn to any information they desire concerning this extensive railway system.

The time-tables not only include all lines of the Grand Trunk Railway System, but a complete time-table of the lines of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway.

The index is so arranged that the name of any station can be readily turned to as the time-tables have all been numbered, and the number of the station in which the time-table appears is given in the index opposite such station.

Information for travellers regarding sleeping car tickets, stop-overs, exchange of tickets, free side trips, etc., is given, and complete information as to baggage arrangements.

A series of condensed time-tables are included in the folder over which is inserted an outline map of the route between the points in these time-tables.

A new map has also been included which shows the Dominion of Canada and a portion of the United States from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and on which is shown the line of the Grand Trunk Railway System, the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway and their connections.

A page is devoted to sleeping and parlour car tariffs, and another to the cab tariffs of the cities of Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, Hamilton, London and Chicago.

As much information as possible has been embodied in this publication, and the information has been so arranged as to make the contents as plain as possibly can be done with a railroad folder.

IT SPEAKS FOR ITSELF

To show the great and growing demand for Tiger, the new domesticated Hand Cleaner, one contract was made recently for seven hundred and fifty gross—one hundred and eight thousand tins—to be shipped to the lower provinces. Nothing succeeds like success, and Tiger certainly has been a great success, as everybody uses it. Tiger is sold in Peterborough by all the local dealers. You can procure a large tin at ten cents, if you wish to try it.

ANOTHER OLD RESIDENT OF PETERBORO DEAD

On Sunday at 3.15 p.m., at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Chas. Bishor, 168 London street, Mr. George Schneider, an old resident of Peterborough, died of heart trouble, after an illness of about a week's duration. Mr. Schneider was born in Niederroedern, Alsace Loraine, Germany, Jan. 15th, 1835. Deceased came over to America, at the age of 18 years, sailing from the Port of Havre, France, Alsace, at that time, being a French province. The voyage was made in a sailing vessel and it took five weeks to make the trip to New York. From thence he proceeded to Rochester, where he resided two years. During the early years of his residence he had been associated with various industries, but for the last 25 years the deceased has not been engaged in active business. Mr. Schneider never lost his love for his native land, though he took an active interest in the affairs in this country and about four years ago he visited Germany.

The deceased was a member of the Board of Health for several years. He was also a member of Peterborough Lodge of Oddfellows for over a quarter of a century and an attendant of George Street Methodist church.

The deceased is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Chas. Bishor, of this city, and two sons, George F., and Frank S., who are in business in Peterborough, and also three sisters and two brothers, in Germany.

The funeral will take place on Tuesday at 2.30 p.m., to the Little Lake cemetery, from 168 London St.

Every Piano Pupil Passed

Successful Issue At Conservatory

The results of the annual examination of the Junior piano and elementary piano of the Peterborough Conservatory of Music, are hereunder given. The teachers are Miss McKee and Miss Beatrice Starke. The examination this year was conducted by Prof. McNally of the Toronto Conservatory of Music, in the Y. M. C. A. here, and the result was a very gratifying one indeed, and showed very efficient work on the part of the above mentioned teachers, as well as talent on the part of the pupils. Every pupil passed, showing a most successful issue for a season's work and the teachers are to be congratulated upon the success attained by those in their charge. It is also one more evidence of the efficient teaching, and successful work done by the Conservatory teachers, and every year the success adds to the popularity of the institution.

The following are the successful pupils:

Junior Piano—Marion Pinchin, Nellie Read,

Elementary Piano — Isabel Baird, honours; Wilhelmine Gaskin, Margaret Connal, Betty Smith, Jean Carruthers, Otto Gliddon.

Another New Ship Is Added To G. T. P. Fleet

The Grand Trunk Pacific Coast Steamship Company, operated by the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, has added another handsome ship to its fleet, designed to operate in the Prince Rupert-Queen Charlotte Islands and Portland Canal route.

This steamer will be named the "Prince John" — the fourth prince steamer of the line. The Prince Rupert and Prince George, being the largest and finest vessels in the north coast trade from Seattle, Victoria and Vancouver, and the Prince Albert operating locally out of Prince Rupert.

The Prince John was constructed in Port Glasgow, Scotland, and is now somewhere off the coast of South America on her way to Vancouver, where she will arrive about the end of next month.

The steamer is 185 feet long, 30 feet bear, and 13 feet 3 inches moulded depth, built of steel and classed 100 A1 with star at Lloyds. She has seven water-tight bulkheads with double bottom, affording ample ballast and fresh water, storage, large bunkers, two multitubular Scotch boilers, triple expansion engines, capable of a speed of 12 knots under full loaded conditions, on an ordinary moderate fuel consumption. The vessel has been modelled to stand the heaviest weather, and is a remarkable sea boat.

In addition to a large and well arranged steerage accommodation for 150, she has good first-class accommodation; a very neat and comfortable smoking room done in fumed oak with leather upholstery and buffet in connection. This is accessible only from first class quarters. The dining saloon seating 44, is done in mahogany with crimson upholstery and drapings, and is situated on the shelter deck, and attached to it is a large pantry and gallery, conveniently laid out and fitted with all modern equipment necessary to a first-class service. The chief steward's offices and men's wash rooms are located also on this deck.

The dining room is reached by a mahogany stairway leading from the lounge on the shade deck, into a well proportioned and airy vestibule, also mahogany panelled and decorated. The principal stateroom accommodation is situated on the shelter deck and consists of 18 two berth state rooms of large size, well ventilated, all having outside windows. These rooms are furnished with folding lavatories, spring berths, hair mattresses and the standard linens of the company.

Forward of this is a very neat semi-circular observation room, with large plate glass window, done in white and gold, furnished with wicker chairs. This room will be the most attractive feature of the steamer. Above this is the pilot house, and texas for the officers' quarters.

On the after part of the lower deck there is ample promenading space for steerage passengers, and on the shade and upper decks there is ample shelter and lodge space for the first-class passengers.

This ship has a cargo capacity of 450 tons, in addition to her bunkers, and altogether it is expected that she will be a very convenient and comfortable ship, well adapted for the purpose for which she is intended. It is expected she will arrive on the coast some time in the latter part of July, and will, as soon as possible thereafter, be placed in commission on the "Prince Rupert-Queen Charlotte Islands route, relieving the S. S. "Prince Albert" for other purposes.

CHURCH AT WARSAW WAS REOPENED

Rev. H. J. Keith of the Knox Presbyterian church, conducted the reopening services in connection with the Warsaw Presbyterian church yesterday, preaching to large congregations both morning and evening. The exterior of the church has been thoroughly reconstructed, the church having been closed for some time to permit of this being done. The work has effected a great improvement in the appearance of the church.

To-night a garden party will be held at the residence of Mr. Edward Hawthorne.

Mr. H. M. Gilchrist, the secretary of the Y.M.C.A., occupied the pulpit at Knox Church, in the absence of Rev. Mr. Keith.

NEW POWER LINE

Material is being delivered at Fraserville, Millbrook and other places in the vicinity for the new power line which is being put through from Healey Falls via Millbrook to Port Hope. This line will supply Millbrook and the other places which it touches with power. The work is being done by the Midland Construction Co.

MANY VISITORS POURING INTO STONEY LAKE FROM ACROSS THE LINE

Unusually Large Crowd on Board the Saturday Night Steamer---First Impression of the Lake Was a Favourable One

Special Staff Correspondence.

STONEY LAKE, JULY 17. —The Stoney Lake season is now in full swing, with nearly every cottage occupied and the different hotels and boarding houses containing a large number of guests. Another week will see their accommodation taxed to the utmost, judging by the way in which visitors are pouring in. The afternoon and night boats on Saturday brought the biggest crowds of the season, the Empress in the afternoon having a very large number of calls, while the Stoney Lake in the evening had the biggest Saturday night crowd of the year.

A feature of the Saturday night trip was the presence on board the steamer of so many strangers—the majority of the visitors from the land of Uncle Sam, who were making their first visit to the bright lands and happy waters of the gem of the Kawartha chain. Over half the crowd were coming to Stoney Lake for the first time and they apparently enjoyed the first glimpse they had of its beauties if one could judge by the complimentary remarks overheard from the different groups on the steamer's deck. They took a keen interest in everything and there was a rush to the side every time the steamer made a landing.

The influx of so many visitors is an indication of the fact that the fame of the Kawartha Lakes is fast spreading everywhere.

In Saturday's crowd there were tourists from New York, Buffalo, Cleveland, Pittsburg and even California and they were delighted with Stoney Lake. The only disagreeable feature of the trip was between Peterborough and Lakefield, the train being so crowded that many people had to stand, the two coaches failing to provide the necessary accommodation. An extra car or two on the Saturday trip would be appreciated. It is bad enough for Peterborough people, but when tourists, after travelling all day, have to stand up to finish their journey, it is apt to leave a bad impression.

The usual week-end "hop" was held on Juniper Island pavilion on Saturday evening with a large crowd in attendance.

Fishing is said to be good everywhere on the lake and some good catches are reported

There was a large attendance at the church service in the pavilion at Juniper Island yesterday.

Mr. A. B. Mitchell and family, of Toronto, arrived on Friday and opened "Sunny Side" for the season.

Mr. Ben Shortley, of Peterborough, spent the week end at his cottage.

Mr. D. Moore of the Review was a week-end visitor at Stoney Lake.

Dr. J. A. Morgan came up on Saturday to spend the week at "Bon Repos" with his family.

Mr. Roy Wilson of Peterborough, was a guest at 'Sunnyside' over Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Gladman and family are the guests of Mr. D. J. Lundy.

Mr. Harry Fitzgerald, of Lakefield, came up to his cottage at Sandy Point on Saturday night.

There is a merry party at South Beach, Clear Lake.

Mr. Allan Munro was one of the Saturday night contingent.

Mr. Walter Stocker was among the week-end visitors, as was Mr. E. B. Clegg.

ECZEMA IS CURABLE

In Every Case Where Our Remedy Fails It is Supplied Free of all Cost

In making this statement we back it up with our promise that if our remedy does not substantiate our claim in every particular, we will without question or quibble return every cent you paid us for it. We take all the risk—you take none.

We strongly recommend Rexall Eczema Ointment, which possesses remarkable cleansing, antiseptic, germicidal soothing and healing qualities. It is a grayish-white emollient, with a pleasant odour, and very cleanly for use. The first application produces a refreshing sense of relief, and it quickly subsides and overcomes the inflammation, irritation and discharge when present.

It is intended to be applied with a piece of muslin or linen, or it may be applied and allowed to dry in. It affords very prompt relief for pimples, blotches, discolourations, ringworm, acne, tetter, barbers' itch, ulcers, insect bites, nettle rash, hives, sores and wounds.

Rexall Eczema Ointment relieves itching and irritation of the feet. It is ideal for the treatment of children who are tormented with itching, burning and disfiguring skin diseases. Try a box at our risk. Two sizes, 50c. and $1.00. Remember, it is only sold at our store.—The Rexall Store, McDermid and Jury.

IMPROVEMENTS ARE TO BE MADE

Yesterday afternoon at the T. A. S. meeting the report of the finance committee was read which showed a profit of over $1,000 at the last picnic which was held at the T. A. S. Park Several recommendations were made dealing with improvements to the grounds in respect to wells, levelling etc. Several new members were taken on the strength of the society, the membership of which is now over one thousand.

TO STAND NO NONSENSE

London, July 17.—Official announcement was made on Saturday that Field Marshal Lord Kitchener has been appointed British Agent in Egypt in succession to Sir Eldon Gorst, who died on July 12.

The command of the British troops on the Mediterranean, heretofore held by a general at Malta, will be transferred to Lord Kitchener.

The Nation says: "Lord Kitchener will go as the nominee of the critics of Sir Eldon Gorst. He will be hailed by them as a rough man who will stand no nonsense, and the Egyptians will receive his nomination as a challenge.

"What must follow is easy to foresee—the checking of such confidence in our good faith as Sir Eldon Gorst had begun to establish, the outbreak of reckless discontent, and a ruthless period of repression carried out by a soldier who gave no quarter at Omdurman and signalized himself by ghoulish barbarity in beheading the Mahdi's corpse."

Since 1909, when he returned to England from India, where he had been in command for six years, Lord Kitchener has been popularly known as the "Man out of a job." He was offered the Mediterranean command, which he declined to accept, and now has come his appointment to a position of the greatest responsibility, and which he will be eminently qualified to fill.

Kitchener had been spoken of freely as a possible successor to Earl Cromer, which appointment has, however, been reserved for him until now. It is said there is no living Englishman who has a better, more intimate knowledge of Egypt, its people, and its affairs than Kitchener.

Roasted to Death.

Toronto, July 17.—Samuel Kaymen, 178 Greenwood ave[illegible] was [illegible]ously burned to death at the [illegible] works at Eastern and Booth avenues Saturday morning. Workmen found the body lying on [illegible] one of the retorts. They were attracted by the odor of burning flesh.

The authorities at first [illegible] told the police that they could not [illegible] how the man came [illegible] retort-room, as his [illegible] would not call him there [illegible] he had no right to be [illegible] his position it is [illegible] he must have been [illegible] above the retort and [illegible] the flesh was literally roasted [illegible] was loose upon the bones [illegible] body was found. It was removed to the [illegible] and the chief coroner [illegible]. An inquest will be held.

Didn't Know It Was Loaded.

Canso, N.S., July [illegible]. What may prove a fatal shooting accident happened here yesterday. A number of boys were swimming near the fish store of William Shrider, when one of them named Willie Horn, about ten years of age, went into the store and finding a gun lying on a table, picked it up and pointed it out of the door at the boys cooning out of the water. It went off, discharging the whole load in the face of Jason Smith, shattering the chin and lower jaw and passing through his neck. Horn did not know that the gun was loaded. The gun was left in the store by William Shrider on his return from gunning because he could not extract a shell that had got jammed. There are small hopes of the boy's recovery.

Trampled to Death.

Charlottetown, P.E.I., July 17.—At Portage road, five miles from Charlottetown, Saturday afternoon, James Casford, a man of 69 years, and unmarried, was trampled to death. Mr. Casford was in the yard of his brother, Mr. Stead, with the latter's mare and a stallion. He was knocked down by the mare, a quick-tempered animal, and while lying on his back on the ground the stallion trampled on him, placing his left foot heavily on the right side of his chest, pressing the lung almost flat, breaking his collar-bone, and inflicting other fearful injuries. Mr. Casford died in half an hour.

Carried Sewer Bylaw.

Berlin, July 17.—Ratepayers on Saturday carried the bylaw by 294 majority to abolish the sewer commission, the work to come under the direct management of the Town Council. The submission of the bylaw came as the result of the commission refusing to dismiss Foreman Reckerman, who had admitted certain irregularities following an investigation.

ORDER IS RESTORED

Fire Sufferers Are Well Cared For —Dead Will Not Go Over a Hundred in Porcupine Disaster

FOOD RUSHED IN

Toronto, July 17.—Reassuring reports from the fire-swept region in Northern Ontario reached Toronto yesterday. Every communication arriving in the city since Saturday indicated beyond a doubt that the worst is over and that order is developing out of chaos. The fires have abated and the people are recovering to some extent from their days and nights of anxiety and alarm. Nothing like comfort is yet obtainable in Porcupine or Cochrane, but the necessities of life—food and shelter—have arrived in quantities sufficient for the needs of everybody in distress.

To such an extent has reassurance found its way into the devastated regions that the destitute people are already beginning to send thanks to the citizens of older Ontario for the generous way in which money and supplies were sent to the scene of the holocaust.

The relief committee are working energetically to provide for the wants of all, and latest reports bring the assurance that no hungry or shelterless people are now to be found in any of the centres of population where the relief committee are sending their supplies.

A detachment of troops under command of Majors Hallett and Henderson left the city on Saturday night with 500 military tents and 4,000 blankets. Major Henderson and some of the soldiers detrained at Matheson with part of the military supplies. The other detachment proceeded on to Cochrane under command of Maj. Hallett, who will oversee the distribution of his consignment of tents and blankets. The supply train arrived in Matheson at 6.15 last night, and Maj. Hallett's party reached Cochrane a little over two hours later, and in plenty of time to get the tents pitched for the homeless people before the night was far advanced. The tents, [illegible] is of sufficient capacity to provide sleeping accommodation for twelve soldiers it is apparent that a family of eight or nine persons can be tolerably well protected in each of the tents. The total consignment of tents will thus house upwards of 3,000 people, if necessary, and the supply of blankets is also sufficient for the need of all.

In addition, a carload of mixed groceries was also despatched from Toronto on Saturday night, and will have arrived in Cochrane by this time, along with the tents and bedding. Part of these stores will be distributed at intermediate points between Matheson and Cochrane, according to where there is need for them.

In response to an appeal by Rev. Dr. MacKay, envelopes were distributed in all the Presbyterian churches yesterday for contributions to assist the pastors and their congregations in the burned districts of Porcupine in rebuilding the churches and refurnishing the libraries of the ministers.

"Just how we will distribute the money is yet to be decided," said Dr. MacKay to a reporter last evening. "I received telegrams from two of our ministers, Rev. Mr. McClennan, South Porcupine, and Rev. Mr. Sinclair of Cochrane asking for assistance. I replied saying that the people in Ontario would do all they could for them, and that help would probably follow within a few days.

"The people as a whole, I think, have been supplied already with eatables and clothing, and what is needed mostly is money to rebuild the churches and assist the missionary. A pastor's library costs a lot of money, and it is beyond the finances of these men to buy the necessary books when they have all their other expenses to meet at the same time."

The postal situation is being attended to by Supt. George Ross, under special instructions from the Postmaster-General, Hon. Mr. Lemieux, and Dr. Coulter, Deputy Postmaster-General.

The postoffice that formerly was at Porcupine has been transferred to Golden City. The amount of mail matter coming out now exceeds any previous big rush. The postal supplies were all saved at Cochrane, and were soon disposed of.

Doing Good Work.

North Bay, July 17.—T. & N. O. Railway Superintendent J. H. Black and General Passenger Agent Parr returned from Porcupine and Cochrane yesterday and report that the relief committee are doing good work. There is a splendid organization at Cochrane, where everybody is being fed and sheltered. A lunch counter has been opened at Cochrane station. Building operations have already started at Cochrane, and 40 small structures are under way with what lumber could be secured nearby.

The official list of dead is now given, as the missing ones have been located. The death list is not expected now to reach over 100.

Fortune Telling

The woman who neglects her health is neglecting the very foundation of all good fortune. For without health love loses its lustre and gold is but dross.

Womanly health when lost or impaired may generally be regained by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

This Prescription has, for over 40 years, been curing delicate, weak, pain-wracked women, by the hundreds of thousands and this too in the privacy of their homes without their having to submit to indelicate questionings and offensively repugnant examinations.

Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter free. All correspondence held as sacredly confidential. Address World's Dispensary Medical Association, R. V. Pierce, M. D., President, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Great Family Doctor Book, The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser, newly revised up-to-date edition—1000 pages, answers in Plain English hosts of delicate questions which every woman, single or married, ought to know about. OBITUARY

MRS. JOHN BROWNE.

One of Peterborough's pioneer residents passed away this morning in the person of Margaret Bradshaw, relict of the late John Browne, 625 George street. Her last illness, though of short duration, has really been of long standing. She has been failing for the past six years. She died surrounded by her family and relatives, after lingering in a state of coma for 130 hours. Always a Christian mother, her last days were spent in prayer and supplications to the Lord, she tried to serve so well for those she was leaving behind. Mrs. Browne was the mother of nine children, six boys and three girls, eight of whom survive her. They are, Mrs. C. J. Seymour, Mrs. Robert McGill Hood, Miss Jennie Browne, John G. Browne, A. D. Browne, Robert Browne, James Browne and Fred Browne, all of whom are residents of Peterborough except A. D. Browne, who resides in Chicago, Ill.

For fifty years or more the deceased has been a faithful adherent of the doctrines of the church of England and St. John's church has had in her a loyal and faithful worker.

The funeral will take place from the family residence, 625 George street, on Wednesday at 3.30, and the interment will be at the Little Lake cemetery in the [illegible]. Rev. Canon Davidson will conduct the service.

A. E. MOSLEY.

The deceased, who was 48 years of age, was an English gentleman of independent means, hailing from Derbyshire, England. He came to Canada and located in Peterborough 25 years ago. Previous to his embarkation for Canada he was the owner of an orange plantation in Florida. He came to this city with a number of young Englishmen of whom he is the last survivor here.

Although [illegible] a very quiet, retiring life, he was very highly esteemed by the large number of people who were fortunate enough to know him, and had the affection of those with whom he was on terms of intimate friendship.

He is survived by three brothers, Godfrey Mosely, a solicitor and under Sheriff for the County of Derby, Major Arthur Mosley of the Inniskillen Dragoons, now residing in London, England, and a third who is an architect of Derby, and four sisters.

The funeral will take place at 2 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon from the house of Mr. W. F. Johnston, of Downie street, to the Little Lake cemetery.

SAMUEL THOMPSON.

After a lingering illness of over a year Samuel Thompson, aged 57 years, died in the Nicholls Hospital last night.

The deceased was born in Smith, and was taken with his family, soon after to Douro. He eventually purchased the Kinkade farm in Monaghan, carrying on the farming industry for a period of 20 years. Up to the date of his demise he had lived in the city about four years.

He is survived by one sister, Mrs. Wm. R. King, 605 Rubidge street, and two brothers, William G., and David, both of this city.

The funeral will take place on Wednesday after noon at 2.30 to the Little Lake cemetery.

A GRAND SHOWING

The piano pupils of Mrs. W. A. Greenshade, 400 King street, have made a remarkable showing in the examinations at the Toronto College of Music, the results of which were announced on Saturday. Eight out of nine of her pupils who tried passed with first class honours, all being well up in their respective classes. The list of her successful pupils is as follows:

Senior Second Year, 1st class honours—Miss Alberta Rehill.

SPLENDID WORK

Miss Bessie Eloome of the Conservatory staff is to be congratulated upon the success her pupils have attained in the recent Toronto College of Music examinations, Dr. F. H. Torrington being the examiner. The results are as follows:

Primary Piano—Ethel Buckham, honours; Jessie Mervin, pass; Carrie Crookshanks, pass; Frieda Jobe, pass.

First Piano—Lizzie Webber, honours.

Second Piano—Hilda Bonner, honours.

McRAE FOR TRIAL

Cornwall, July 17.—At the conclusion of the Police Court enquiry into the Bridge End tragedy on Saturday, F. D. McRae, reeve of Lancaster Township, was committed to jail to stand his trial for the murder of William Shaw of Cary on July 1. Police Magistrate Dana, in making known this decision, said that he would have liked to have changed the charge to manslaughter if the crown would consent. There was no doubt but that Shaw had been killed by McRae's bullet, but the conduct of Dr. Magee's party in invading the McRae homestead had been most shameful and insulting, and had the McRae's resorted to arms at that time he believed they might have been somewhat justified.

The evidence given at the trial was much the same as at the inquest. A new feature, however, was the production of a pair of handcuffs by Constable Uren, who claimed that thes were what has been mistaken for a revolver. He had taken them along to handcuff D. C. McRae, if necessary, while Dr. Magee searched the premises. The McRaes mistook the handcuffs for a revolver and he did not enlighten them. At the inquest he had made no mention of the handcuffs when charged with drawing a gun. Uren is an Englishman, 35 years of age. He came out from the Farningham Home in Kent, England, about twenty years ago. On June 4 he and Dr. Magee had driven to the McRae homestead on a scouting expedition.

D. C. McRae did not see his brother—F. D. McRae—shoot, but he heard the report, and the auto was then over the knoll of the hill, 200 odd feet. Magee's party, on June 4, and his subsequent letters, the family, particularly the women, had lived in terror. On the occasion that his daughter had left her husband in his company, not the last time, it was not at his solicitation, as he did not interfere, and Dr. Magee sent her trunk to the depot.

Bail for Mr. McRae will be asked from a high court judge. The amount is immaterial, as the man's character and standing is such that any amount asked will be promptly covered.

DEPARTMENT OF THE NAVAL SERVICE.

SEALED TENDERS, addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for the Erection of Wireless Telegraph Station at Tobermory, Ontario," will be received at this office until noon, on July Twenty-fifth, 1911.

BELLEVILLE BEAT PETES 4 TO 3 IN TEN INNINGS BATTLE ON SATURDAY

One of the Best Games Seen Here in Many Moons was Thrown Away by Errors in the Ninth and Tenth After Peterboro Had Apparently Won the Engagement by Scoring in the Eighth---A Close Hard Fight all the Way

After having won Saturday afternoon's baseball game with the crack Grand Trunk team of Belleville, the Peterborough Midland League team threw it away again and Belleville won out in the tenth innings, after one of the most exciting and hardest fought games ever seen here. It was a nip-and-tuck game, with honours even, and the result was always in doubt until the last man was out in the last half of the tenth. With Ashton, the Eastern League try-out working for Belleville, and Quinlan pitching for Peterborough, it was a pitcher's battle all through, the twirlers having something on the batters all the way when it came to a question of a hit when it was needed. Both were successful in keeping the hits well scattered, and as they were aided by snappy fielding the game was bitterly fought all the way. The Petes gave Quinlan snappy support for the most part, pulling out of several bad corners by three fast double-plays.

Each team scored one in the first, and added another in the third. The score remained at 2-2 for the next five innings, until the eighth, when Peterborough got a run across. It was, apparently, enough to win the game, but baseball, like horse-racing, is some uncertain pastime. It was a "friend from the old Home town" too, that gave us the awful jolt, in the person of George Minorgan, who used to shortstop with distinction for Jack Oldham's West Ends, last year. He led off in Belleville's half of the ninth with a two-bagger over McFadden's head, which eventually blossomed into the tying run, and it was 3-3 when the Petes went to bat in the ninth. It looked promising when Quinlan slammed a beautiful two-bagger against the left-field fence There was no one out, but Ashton was master of the situation and retired the side, leaving the Peterborough manager stranded.

Belleville won the game in the tenth, on errors, by Rahmel, and Quinlan, the latter making a wild heave to first.

The Petes had another chance in the tenth, but once again the necessary hit was not forthcoming. With one out Jimmy O'Hearne pickled one of Ashton's slants for a double to right field, but was left there when M. O'Brien flew out to Minorgan.

The throwing of both catchers was a feature of the game.

Mr. Dan McCabe umpired satisfactorily.

First Inning.

Coyne, first up for Belleville, singled and stole second; Geroux fanning. Minorgan's third strike was dropped, and the play to get Coyne at third fizzled. In attempting to get Minorgan off the first bag, Quinlan threw to the stand, Coyne scored and "66" took third, but he was caught off the plate on a fielder's choice, which Connelly drove at O'Hearn. Connelly took second on a balk. O'Neill missed three.—One run, one hit.

Murphy played Ashton for a walk and stole second. Shaw neatly sacrificed him to third, and he was hit to the plate by O'Brien, after O'Hearn had failed to connect. Quinlan's single sent Mike around to third, but Gonter ended on a grounder to short.—One run, two hits.

Second Inning.

Brennan was an easy out to first; Smith's line drive was pulled in by O'Brien, and Gonter had to throw Brown out at first.—No runs, no hits.

McFadden connected for a base, and was thrown out trying to annex second. Craig biffed an out to third and Rahmal fell before Minorgan.

Third Innings.

Ashton doubled to right, and was sacrificed by Coyne and scored on a passed ball, Geroux skying out to McFadden, and Minorgan fanning.—One run, one hit.

Murphy hit between first and second, and was forced at second by Shaw, who stole the next two bags. O'Hearn missed connections again, and when O'Brien dropped one in front of the plate, Brown threw over Geroux's head and Shaw counted. O'Brien took third, Quinlan was thrown out, third to first.—One run, one hit.

Fourth Innings.

Both sides were retired in order, each twirler getting two strikeouts.

Fifth Innings.

Smith sent a high one to Craig, in right; Brown singled to left, and was doubled at first, when Craig made a quick return to O'Brien, after stabbing a hard clout from Ashton.

Rahmal grounded out, but Murphy's liner was too hot for Smith, and it went on through. A bad peg by Geroux gave the runner third sack, but he was out at the plate, when Ashton took the throw from Brown on a passed ball. Shaw lined out at first.—No runs, one hit.

Sixth Innings.

Coyne hit over second and Geroux singled with a biff to left. Minorgan sent up a fly to Gonter, who doubled Coyne at second. Connely grounded Murphy to first.—No runs, two hits.

O'Hearn walked and Shaw, running for him, was caught between first and second. O'Brien and Quinlan fanned.—No runs, no hits.

Seventh Innings.

O'Neil fanned on three pitched balls. Brennan was safe at first when Murphy sent an aviator to O'Brien. Smith singled, but Rahmel took Brown's fly and doubled Brennan.—No runs, one hit.

Gonter out, second to first, but Coyne's slip on McFadden's grounder gave Doc. the bag, to which he proceeded to become glued to such an extent that when Craig wafted one to right, he was caught a mile off second on the throw from O'Neil. Craig made the third out, getting copped on the catcher's peg.

Eighth Innings.

Ashton sent an easy one to the pitcher, Coyne skied to Rahmal and Geroux fanned.

The locals went ahead in their half Rahmal getting on when Geroux made a failure of a one-handed stab on the throw from Minorgan. He was sacrificed by Murphy. Shaw took one in the slats, and Jimmie O'Hearn came along with a sacrifice fly which Minorgan grabbed after a hard chase. Rahmal scoring when Minorgan threw over the catcher. Shaw went around to third and O'Brien ended with a fly to third.—One run, no hits.

Ninth Innings.

With three hits and a wild throw by Quinlan, the visitors evened up. Minorgan leading off with a double. On a play to get him, as he led off Quinlan threw into centre field and the runner took third and tallied on Connely's sigle. Connely was out at second. O'Neil fanned and with Smith at bat, Gonter got Brennan at the middle cushion, after he had hit into left.—One run, three hits.

It was up to Manager Quinlan to redeem himself and he clouted to the fence for two bags. Gonter popped to the pitcher and McFadden was hit. A passed ball advanced both runners, but Craig was out for bunting the third strike. Rahmal grounded out, Minorgan to first.—No runs one hit.

Tenth Innings.

Smith was safe when Rahmel became bewildered on a grounder. He stole second and was hit to third by Brown. With Ashton giving him an easy one, Quinlan uncorked another wild heave and Smith romped home. Brown getting around to third. Coyne struck out and with Geroux at bat. Brown tried to squeeze in but was nailed by Gonter and Geroux was out for interference on the play. — One run one hit.

Murphy fanned, Shaw missed three but had to be retired at first. O'Hearn smashed out a two-bagger, but it was wasted, for after working Ashton every old way. O'Brien sent up a fly to Minorgan and the excitement was over.

PROSPECTS BRIGHT FOR HAT FACTORY

A very successful meeting was held by the gentlemen interested in the proposed new hat factory on Saturday afternoon at Messrs. O'Connell and Gordon's office, when many influential business men and prominent men connected with the city's affairs, were present.

The outlook of the business after having been placed before and explained to the assembly, was discussed, and met with general approval.

During the meeting statements were brought out showing that since the two practical hat manufacturers who are interested in the proposition have come to Toronto, hats have been made by them that are far superior to any others previously made in the Dominion.

Arrangements will shortly be made with regard to the necessary buildings, stockholders, etc., when a further announcement will be made.

The committee have several properties in view but up to the present nothing definite in this matter has been decided upon.

Peterborough offers many inducements to an industry of this or any other description owing chiefly to its central location and railway facilities.

The 35 per cent. present rate on hats would probably be eliminated by this new industry.

SALVATION ARMY BAND CONCERT

By request of a large number of citizens the Salvation Army Silver Band will give their concert on Friday night of this week instead of Tuesday night. The band will put on a special programme for the occasion which is known in Army circles as an All-Nation's Musical Festival, and this will include marches and songs of the leading countries of the world, the whole arrangement being compiled by the Salvation Army Musical Board in London, Eng. The programme will include the Canadian march; and marches of other countries; also songs of Scotland, Irish melodies, and several other selections, the full programme of which will be published before Friday night. The programme will finish up with the National Anthems of all countries.

This will certainly prove an interesting musical evening to all. Bandmaster Pervey and his men will be glad to see their Tuesday evening audience ans well as those who attend the Friday night concert. Full programme later.

Trent Canal Guide Book.

—Just issued from the Examiner presses, a most comprehensive and artistic reference and guide book of the Trent Canal, containing a host of valuable and hitherto unpublished information concerning the waterway, compiled by Mr. E. S. Clarry. This book gives precisely the information about the Canal that is so much in demand Containing as it does, charts of the lakes throughout the system from Orillia and Barrie on Lake Simcoe to Healey's Falls on the Trent, with the main steamer channel clearly indicated it will be of invaluable assistance to the owners of power boats. The maps and charts which the guide book contains are alone worth many times the price of the publication, and they will be appreciated by all navigators in the district. The book is beautifully illustrated by artistic photographs of many points of interest along the system and will be much in demand, if only for souvenir purposes. It is now on sale at Trebilcock Bros. Peterborough Book Store.

WEDDING BELLS

ROBERTSON-MASON

A very quiet, but fashionable wedding took place last evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Mason, Victoria avenue, when their only daughter, Marion Isabel, was united in the bonds of matrimony to Mr. Alexander Robertson, of the Traders Bank, Toronto. Precisely at seven o'clock, the bride entered the drawing room, on the arm of her father to the strains of Mendelshon's wedding march, played by Mr. W. F. Robertson, brother of the groom. The ceremony was performed in front of a magnicfient bank of ferns and palms, by Rev. Dr. Dickie, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church. The bride was attired in a wedding dress of white satin veiled in Chantilly lace, and the regulation veil caught with a wreath of orange blossoms. She carried bridal roses. The bridesmaid, Miss Tot McKay, of Toronto, wore a very pretty gown of white ehny lace with touches of pink. She carried pink roses. H. D. Paterson of Toronto assisted the groom. During the ceremony Mr. R. W. Angus sang "Because," and "Beloved, It Is Morn." Miss Danielda Foreman, organist of First Church, presiding at the piano.

The wedding presents were very costly and numerous, testifying to the great esteem in which both the bride and groom are held. The bride, who formerly resided in Woodstock, has been a very popular girl during her residence here, especially in musical circles, she having been the soprano soloist in the First Presbyterian Church. The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. James Robertson, of Teeswater, and is connected with the head office of the Traders Bank in Toronto. Many telegrams of congratulations were received. The happy couple left on the nine o'clock C. P. R. for Detroit, Buffalo and Atlantic City, and will arrive back in Toronto near the end of the month. They will reside in Toronto. The bride's going-away gown was smart blue, tailormade travelling suit with hat to match. The groom's gift to the ride was a beautiful ring set with diamonds and sapphires, to the bridesmaid a coral necklace, to the best man and Mr. Angus handsome silver-mounted canes and to Miss Foreman a silver purse. The guests from a distance were Mrs. C. H. Moore and daughter Miss Estelle Knox, of Peterborough; Mrs. Robertson of Peterborough, mother of the groom; Mr. and Mrs. Jack Comstock of Peterborough; Miss May McKay of Toronto, H. D. Paterson of Toronto and W. F. Robertson of Minneapolis.—Chatham Planet.

SHANNON—BROWN.

A quiet wedding was solemnized at St. Peter's Cathedral at 6 o'clock this morning when Mr. Leo Shannon, of Peterborough, was united in marriage to Miss Irene Brown, also of this city. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father McCarthy. Mr. and Mrs. Shannon left to spend their honeymoon in Toronto. On their return they will take up their residence in Toronto.

ROLAND JOHNSTON IS SAFE AT GOLDEN CITY

Mrs. Johnston, 316 Dublin street, has received the welcome news from Porcupine that her son Roland, who was at Golden City at the time of the fire, weathered the catastrophe all right. She has received the following letter from him:

ROLAND JOHNSTON, 316 Dublin St
Golden City, July 13, 1911.

My Dear Mother:

Just a line to inform you that I am still living and have had a terrible experience here with the fire, the worst that has ever been known in these parts. I escaped without injury except sore eyes from smoke and ashes. There is nothing but skeletons wherever you look. Porcupine and South Porcupine are both wiped out and some twenty-five or thirty lives lost. Garden City was partly destroyed, but we saved the greater part of it owing to a desperate struggle. We have the dead and injured all around the mines and are going to the bush to look for the prospectors. It will be a week at least before they are all found, but there are some that will never be found. The dead number about two hundred. I estimate. There were about twenty men, three women and one child found in one shaft at the Foster mine.

Well, mother, I must be off. We are all right now, only tired and weary. I think the people are discouraged with Northern Ontario after this.

Your loving son,
ROLAND.

THE TOTAL NUMBER OF DEAD SO FAR IS 62

THE PEERS MAY REJECT THE VETO BILL

3 Men Are Blown 100 Feet In The Air

RELIEF COMMITTEE IN THE NORTH ARE REDUCING THE SUFFERING

Death List May Not go Above Seventy—The Total so Far is Sixty Two of Which Eight Were Drowned

HOMELESS HOUSED

Porcupine, July 18.—The death list goes down this morning, not up, although it is feared that three missing men at the Powell mine are dead. Two prospectors in Shaw have not been located and they may have left the country by way of Night Hawk Lake. The names of Mike Johnson, who committed suicide at Night Hawk Lake Saturday, W. H. Wilson, and a foreigner called Diepo are reported dead from New Liskeard hospital. Wilson was burned at South Porcupine, and Diepo at the Dome. They had already been counted. The name of John Taylor of Toronto should be struck off the list.

The missing list dwindles as men return from the outside. No dead bodies have been found as far out as Flying Post. Prospectors returning from the south report fires, but no loss of life. Not a body has come to the surface of Porcupine Lake since Thursday, and as dead horses came up on Sunday, it is believed there are no more dead in the lake. The water is very warm and explosives have been used. The total drowned are: Porcupine Lake 7, Pearl Lake 1.

Stories from refugees who left the camp early, that the roads are strewn with bodies are mere exaggerations. The relief committee is composed of reliable men, and as no money has yet been received by them, nothing could have been misused as stated on the outside in another wild rumor. A carload of food, tents and clothing came Sunday night, and the committee have the homeless comfortably housed by this time. Help to get back on to their feet is needed by the poor.

Relief has been received all the way from Montana, Idaho and Minnesota.

The Weiss family were buried on Edward's Point on Sunday, while others from West Dome were shipped out. The situation clears rapidly and road building to the mines is under way. Work will start on some of the burned mines about the middle of the week. Hundreds here ask the reporters to say they are alive. Relatives should not worry because they have not heard from those in the camp.

The first bodies to be found during the last seventy hours were picked up at noon in the southeast corner of Tisdale, and are Marshall Morrison of Haileybury and Fred. Herbert of England (No detailed address known). This raises the list of dead to sixty-two, with sixty identified. The bodies were unrecognizable when found in the camp. One body was picked up at the United Porcupine Mines, and the other has not been found, although it is supposed to be in a shaft at the Dome. The man ran from the West Dome over to the Dome property when the wall of fire swept past, and has not been seen since. He may be alive and may have left camp with other refugees who did not report.

The relief committee issues a statement to the effect that the death list may not go above seventy and that it may be several days before more bodies are found, if any, in isolated portions of the camp. Returning search parties have found nothing whatever along the trails far out. Many put on the lost list are showing up every hour. Some of them were not out of the immediate camp. No. 2 detachment of 8 men from the Canadian Army Service Corps, arrived in charge of Major Hallock of Ottawa. All the sick have been sent to the outside.

Found Alive and at Work.

Porcupine, July 18.—Searching parties returned from Delora, Shaw, Eldorado and Langmuir Townships, and not a body was found. They report many men alive and at work. Graphic descriptions of the work of fire and wind through a belt six miles wide, beginning at the middle line of Delora and Shaw and north to the Dome, and thence east into Langmuir, are given. The country is all black, with no sighs of animal or human life. South of this line the fire ran in belts, jumping around swamps, which gave men a chance to escape. Hundreds of bodies of dead moose were found, in some cases within 50 feet of lakes.

Veto Bill May Be Absolutely Rejected

Crisis in the Situation Comes on Thursday—The Extremist Members of the House of Lords Number 50 to 80 and They May Get Big Enough Following to Vote Down Any Compromise

London, July 18.—An entirely unexpected contingency confronts the career of the veto bill to-day. It is a possibility that the House of Lords, instead of passing the third reading of the bill with their amendments on Thursday, thus sending it back to the House of Commons, for consideration, may reject it, even with amendments, lock, stock and barrel. In that event Premier Asquith is fully expected to announce, as he probably would, that he had advised the King to create a large block of new peers.

The Liberal party is no more anxious for an inflated peerage than the Lords themselves are, but will not balk at the creation of peers if the necessity is forced upon it. The Parliamentary program of the Liberals is, as the Rt. Hon. Walter Runciman, President of the Board of Education, said in a speech on Saturday, "the bill, the whole bill and nothing but the bill."

Two moves in the Lords game yesterday excited great speculation. One was a conference of the Conservative leaders, the Marquis of Lansdowne, the Earl of Selborne, Baron Middleton, the Marquis of Salisbury and others. The second was a strong appeal by Lord Morley of Blackburn to the Liberal followers in the House of Lords. Lord Morley in a circular letter said: "It is possible that a certain number of Opposition peers may force division on the third reading of the Parliamentary bill. The momentous results at stake both immediate and in the future make it in the highest degree desirable that no supporter of the bill should be absent from his place. I earnestly trust therefore that your lordship will not fail to give His Majesty's Government the advantage of your presence on what may prove so truly critical an occasion."

The rejection of the bill has never been part of the program of the Conservative leaders. The report went around yesterday, however, that they would assume the attitude that the bill, even with the amendments, was so dangerous and revolutionary that they would refuse to have any hand in its passage, but would compel the Liberal lords to take all the responsibility for voting its third reading.

That aroused the fear that sufficient insurgent peers might be found to carry a motion to kill the bill outright instead as Lord Lansdowne desires, of permitting the bill to go to its third reading as amended.

A group of extremist peers, estimated at from between 50 to 80, are sworn to fight to the last ditch and if it came to a fight between them and the Liberals the former would have a chance of winning. The best opinion late last night is that the Lords will return the amended bill to the House on Thursday and give Premier Asquith an opportunity to show his hand when the House takes it up on Monday, and that the Premier will announce that the Government refuses to accept the amendments and will, if necessary, call on the King to create new peers.

Then a final struggle will come between the two factions of the Conservative lords—the standpatters and those who believe that the lesser of the evils will be to swallow the bill with the expressed declaration that the Conservatives will repeal it when they return to power. By accepting the bill they can starve off home rule for two years; by rejecting it they put the Liberals in a position to adopt all the extremist schemes of legislation without delay.

In the meantime there is no doubt that the Government has made up its list of possible peers, the number of them according to the latest belief being 350.

Halton Farmers' Flee.

Toronto, July 18.—That several Farmers' Bank shareholders of Halton County have fled to the west with their goods and chattels and money, to escape the double liability, is a surprise which has been sprung on the curator. It has been found, too, that the fleeing farmers have been acting expert advice, knowing that if they invested their money in western homestead the law would protect them.

Fully a dozen are said to have departed for other regions, and it is probable that many more are planning the same exit. Not one has gone to the States, as the law would be able to recover the money from them there. Evasion of the law, according to legal advice, can only be made on Canadian territory.

King George And Queen Mary Are In Scotland Receive Grand Welcome

Edinburgh, Scotland, July 17.—King George and Queen Mary arrived in the Scottish capital yesterday and received a rousing welcome. The city was bright with color, the decorations being the most elaborate that the present generation of Scotchmen has seen. The way from the railway station to Holyrood Palace was lined profusely with obelisks columns and Venetian masts with magnificent triumphal arches at all vantage points.

On the station platform the Lord Provost presented the King with the keys of the city, made of silver in 1838 for presentation to Charles I. Subsequently the procession was formed and Their Majesties traversed streets hedged with cheering Scots to the eighth century old palace, which has been rejuvenated in the interior in anticipation of the royal visit. The old apartments of state, used by Mary Queen of Scots, have been redecorated, and the historic home of the Stuarts will see a revival of Imperial pomp during the five days' stay of King George and Queen Mary.

Holyrood Palace has been only occasionally used as a royal residence since the time of James I., who, as well as his predecessors, resided almost constantly there. Charles I., Charles II., James II., George IV., Queen Victoria and Edward VII. all paid short visits to the venerable edifice.

The royal apartments occupied to-day by the King are comparatively modern and without historical interest. That part of the palace where some of the most dramatic scenes and some of the strangest passages in the life of the unfortunate Mary Stuart, who suffered so many sorrows within its walls, were enacted, lies in the old wing, which is never used for residential purposes. Here every board in the flooring and every tapestry on the walls has its story. Plots and crimes which often changed the country's history occurred in this portion of the palace, and these are brought vividly to mind by the preservation of many of the rooms in their original condition.

Amid these surroundings the King's famous Scottish bodyguard, the Royal Company of Archers, commanded by the Duke of Buccleuch, have taken up their posts, and will remain on duty during his Maesty's stay. They are soon to receive new colors at the King's hands.

visit to the grim old castle, where the Scottish crown jewels are kept, and to-morrow he will attend St. Giles Cathedral for the dedication of the chapel of the Order of the Thistle.

ONE PARLIAMENT.

Sir Edward Morris Discusses an Ideal Empire.

London, July 18.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Sir Edward Morris, interviewed on board the Pretorian at Liverpool Saturday, discussing the conference, said considerable advance had been made as regards the extensions of the relations of the dominions to the Mother Country. The colonies had been admitted, so to speak, to full partnership to the British Empire Co., Unlimited. What must happen in the future was that all the dominions and England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales would then have their own separate Parliaments, while there would probably be a separate Imperial Parliament sitting in London dealing only with Imperial questions. He expected great things of Newfoundland in the near future. Her industries were developing by leaps and bounds, although she badly wanted capital.

Work of Incendiary.

Amherst, N.S., July 18.—A terrible forest fire has been raging in the western portion of this county for the last week. The fire originated on the lumber property owned by Messrs. Cochrane and Soley at Fox River. They claim that the fire was plainly the work of an incendiary, and that fires were set in three different places on their property and on portions of it not visited by either hunters of fishermen. So far the fire has run through valuable lumber lands for eighteen miles, and has turned a swath from six to eight miles wide.

From one hundred to two hundred men employed by the different lumbermen in this section of the country have been fighting the fire for the past six or eight days, but with little success. To-day the conflagration is raging as fiercely as ever, and clouds of smoke overhang all the valleys along the Bay of Fundy coast and through the River Herbert Valley.

A Narrow Escape.

Oakville, July 18.—Goldwin Gregory, son of W. D. Gregory, barrister, while out sailing in a canoe yesterday was upset about three-quarters of a mile from shore. Some people on the wharf witnessed the accident and M. H. Williams, proprietor of the Murray House, ran out in his motor boat to the rescue.

Mr. Gregory had a very close call, as the water was extremely cold, and it is not likely he would have held on much longer.

Two young men, Messrs. Snowball and White, deserve great credit for the way in which they went to the rescue in a rowboat.

To Fight Cholera.

Washington, D.C., July 18.—The entire public health machinery of the Government has been put in motion to fight off the cholera invasion from Europe. All consular reports from Europe are being fully studied by officials here, and the public health officer at Naples has been instructed to cable a report every five days as to developments in the epidemic that is ravaging in Italy.

All ships are being watched here and abroad, and special instructions have been issued throughout the service to safeguard this country from the disease.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

Capt. Wolfenden of Armstrong, B.C., was second in the competition for the Wimbledon Cup at Bisley.

While it was cold Saturday all over the west, the freezing point was not reached, and the wheat is safe.

A commission in New York finds no justification for the raising of the price of ice during the hot weather.

Aylmer Wilson of Port Robinson, a young man 21 years of age, was drowned in the harbor at Port Colborne, last night.

A new case of smallpox has been discovered in Montreal, the victim being a sailor named Maloney, 19 years of age, a native of Port Colborne Ont.

The Australian commissioner, Sir George Reid, was severely injured in a motor-car accident at London Sunday. His arm was broken in two places.

W. H. Shawn, Carrollton, Ga., who was suddenly robbed of his senses while in the Cave of the Winds, Niagara Falls, recovered yesterday. His case has baffled frontier physicians.

Hon. Robert Rogers of Manitoba is in Ottawa establishing a labor bureau for the Manitoba Government. He says his province will require twenty thousand men to help with the harvest.

The murder of four German subjects during the rioting at Puebla, Mexico has attracted general attention in Germany to the ominous conditions in Mexico. The Government is investigating.

Crop reports from the outlying districts of the Ottawa Valley are of a most rosy character. An enormous hay crop is being harvested and the conditions of the grain is said to be excellent.

The steamer Barcelona which arrived in Montreal Sunday evening from Hamburg, Bremen and Rotterdam, brought amongst her cargo for that port some two hundred tons of loose grain.

Everet Taylor, a brakeman on the G.T.R., had his right arm severed, by falling from a ladder on the side of a box car, underneath the wheels at Lindsay yesterday. He had a miraculous escape from death.

The sudden death of Jas. Pearson, at four o'clock yesterday afternoon at Toronto was reported to the authorities. It was said he was just entering 303 Robert street when he fell and expired. He formerly lived in Picton.

Knew About the "Jackpot."

Washington, D.C., July 18.—The $100,000 legislative "jackpot," about which revolves charges affecting the election of Senator Lorimer, figured in the testimony at the opening of yesterday's hearing before the Senate Lorimer committee.

William Burgess, manager and treasurer of an electrical company at Duluth, Minn., testified before the Helm investigating committee of the Illinois Senate that on a train running out of Duluth, about March, 1911, C. F. Wiehe, who is associated in business with Edward Hines, declared to him that "there was a jack pot raised to elect Mr. Lorimer; I know what I am talking about because I subscribed $16,000 to it myself."

Mr. Burgess testified yesterday about this conversation.

Broke the News.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., July 18.—Yesterday morning Uriah McFadden, counsel for Mrs. Napolitano, broke the news to her that the sentence of death pronounced on her had been commuted to life imprisonment. Despite the fact that the press had stated that the woman had heard the news on Saturday, this was not the case. It had been said that the woman preferred death to a life sentence, but Mr. McFadden states that she was greatly relieved when the news was broken to her yesterday morning. "Her face brightened up," said McFadden; "she seemed to have been relieved from a heavy burden when assured that the death penalty would not be inflicted. It is expected that her child will be born about July 20.

People's Railway Meeting.

Berlin, Ont., July 18.—When the People's Railway meeting was adjourned for lunch at one o'clock, it was announced that progress had been slow, and it was said it was likely no decision would be arrived at to-day. Mr. Rosf, K.C., of Toronto, representing the Lachman Construction Co., was present.

After a rather stormy session, however, the shareholders elected a new board of directors, and the new board will probably immediately open negotiations for the sale of the road to Mackenzie and Mann. A representative of the C.N.R. was here yesterday, but was not in a position to place any definite proposition before the directors.

Tokio, July 18.—The newspapers here continue to discuss the revised Anglo-Japanese treaty, and while the majority of the papers favor the new alliance, still there are a few which strongly condemn it.

The new situation, some of the papers state, practically amounts to a triple alliance between Great Britain, Japan and the United States.

The minority press, on the other hand, severely criticises the agreement as being one-sided and thus weakening the position of Japan.

The isolation of Japan, say this section of the papers, is complete, and the United States has greatly secured its position in international politics.

Westinghouse Mix-Up.

New York, July 18.—An active campaign against the present conduct of the affairs of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. has been commenced by Charles J. Canda, a large shareholder of the company, who yesterday had addressed letters to all the stockholders asking them to send their proxies to George Westinghouse of Pittsburg.

Mr. Canda assets that the company is earning sufficient sums to pay dividends and that they should not be withheld from the stockholders.

Four new directors to the board are to be chosen at an election on July 20.

THE Cost of Glasses

When you think of having your eyes examined and of the possibility of wearing glasses, the matter of cost naturally arises.

As in everything else, good work, careful skilful work, is apt to cost more than work less good.

There is nothing you buy for your personal use that you ought to be more careful about, that you can afford to have the best of, than these glasses that you are going to depend on to preserve and assist your eyesight.

The reason we have succeeded so well and our business has grown so satisfactorily is that the best work is given in every case and a reasonable price is charged.

All Work including the Lens Grinding is done on the Premises and Fully Guaranteed.

"It's ben fair hell, sir," Captain Oleson began, then broke off to help himself to more whiskey. "It's ben fair hell, Mr. Sheldon, I tell you. Contrary winds and calms. We've ben driftin' all about the shop for ten days. There's ten thousand sharks following us for the tucker we've ben throwin' over to them. They was snappin' at the oars when we started to come ashore. I wisht to God a nor'wester'd come along an' blow the Solomons clean to hell.

"We got it from the water—water from Owga Creek. Filled my casks with it. How was we to know? I've filled there before an' it was all right. We had sixty recruits—full up and my crew of fifteen. We've ben buryin' them day an' night! They die out of spite. Only three of my crew left on its legs. Five more down. Seven dead. Oh, hell! What's the good of talkin'?"

Sheldon sighed.

"That means another addition to the hospital. We've got to get them ashore somehow. Viaburi! Hey, you Viaburi, ring big fella bell strong fella too much."

The hands, called in from the fields at that unwonted hour, were split into detachments. Some were sent into the woods to cut timber for house beams, others to cutting cane grass for thatching, and forty of them lifted a whale-boat above their heads, and carried it down to the sea. Sheldon had gritted his teeth, pulled his collapsing soul together, had taken Berande Plantation into his fist once more.

"No," Sheldon answered. "Is it down?"

"It's going down."

"Then you'd better sleep aboard tonight," was Sheldon's judgment. "Never mind the funeral. I'll see to poor Hughie."

"A nigger was kicking the bucket when I dropped anchor."

The captain made the statement as a simple fact, but obviously waited for a suggestion. The other felt a sudden wave of irritation rush through him.

"Dump him over," he cried. "Great God, man! don't you think I've got enough graves ashore?"

"I just wanted to know, that was all," the captain answered, in nowise offended.

Sheldon regretted his childishness. "Oh, Captain Oleson," he called. "If you can see your way to it, come ashore to-morrow and lend me a hand. If you can't, send the mate."

"Right O. I'll come myself. Mr. Johnson's dead, sir. I forgot to tell you—three days ago."

Sheldon watched the Jessie's captain go down the path, with waving arms and loud curses calling upon God to sink the Solomons. Next, Sheldon noted the Jessie, rolling lazily on the glassy swell, and beyond, in the northwest, high over Florida Island, an alpine chain of dark-massed clouds. Then he turned to his partner, calling for boys to carry him into the house. But Hughie Drummond had reached the end. His breathing was imperceptible. By mere touch, Sheldon could ascertain that the dying man's temperature was going down. It must have been going down when the thermometer registered one hundred and seven. He had burned out. Sheldon knelt beside him, the house-boys grouped around, their white singlets and loincloths peculiarly at variance with their dark skins and savage countenances, their huge ear-plugs and carved and glistening nose-rings. Sheldon tottered to his feet at last, and half-fell into the steamer chair. Oppressive as the heat had been, it was now even more oppressive. It was difficult to breathe. He panted for air. The faces and naked arms of the house-boys were beaded with sweat.

Sheldon nodded his head, but did not look. Much as he had loved Hughie Drummond, his death, and the funeral it entailed, seemed an intolerable burden to add to what he was already sinking under. He had a feeling—nay, it was a certitude—that all he had to do was to shut his eyes and let go, and that he would die, sink into immensity of rest. He knew it. It wa very simple. All he had to do was close his eyes and let go; for he had reached the stage where he lived by will alone. His weary body seemed torn by the oncoming pangs of dissolution. He was a fool to hang on. He had died a score of deaths already, and what was the use of prolonging it to two score deaths before he really died? Not only was he not afraid to die, but he desired to die. His weary flesh and weary spirit desired it, and why should the flame of him not go utterly out?

But his mind that could will life or death still pulsed on. He saw the two whale-boats land on the beach, and the sick, on stretchers or pick-a-back, groaning and wailing, go by in lugubrious procession. He saw the wind making on the clouded horizon and thought of the sick in the hospital. Here was something waiting for his hand, to be done, and it was not in his nature to lie down and sleep, or die, when any task remained undone.

The hose-boys were called and given their orders to rope down the hospital with its two additions. He remembered the spare anchor-chain, new and black-painted, that hung under the house suspended from the floor beams, and ordered it to be used on the hospital as well. Other boys brought the coffin, a grotesque patchwork of packing-cases, and under his directions they laid Hughie Drummond in it. Half a dozen boys carried it down the beach, while he rode on the back of another, his arms around the black's neck, one hand clutching a prayer-book.

While he read the service, the blacks gased apprehensively at the dark line on the water, above which rolled and tumbled the racing clouds. The first breath of the wind, faint and silken, tonic with life, fanned through his dry-baked body as he finished reading. Then came the second breath of the wind, an angry gust, as the shovels worked rapidly, filling in the sand. So heavy was the gust that Sheldon, still on his feet, seized hold of his man-horse to escape being blown away. The Jessie was blotted out, and a strange ominous sound arose as multitudinawavelets struck foaming on the beach It was like the bubbling of some colossal caldron. From all about could be heard the dull thudding of falling cocoanuts. The tall, delicate-trunked trees twisted and snapped about like whip-lashes. The air seemed filled with their flying leaves, any one of which, stem-on, could brain a man. Then came the rain, a deluge a straight horizontal sheet that poured along like a river, defying gravitation. The black, with Sheldon mounted on him, plunged ahead into the thick of it, stooping far forward and low to the ground to avoid being toppled over backward.

"'He's sleeping out and far tonight.'" Sheldon quoted, as he thought of the dead man in the sand, and the rainwater trickling down upon the cold clay.

So they fought their way back up the beach. The other blacks caught hold of the man-horse and pulled, and tugged. There were among them those whose fondest desire was to drag the rider in the sand and spring upon him and mash him into repulsive nothingness. But the automatic pistol in his belt with its rattling, quick-dealing death, and the automatic, death-defying spirit in the man himself, made them refrain and buckle down to the task of hauling him to safety through the storm.

Wet through and exhausted, he was nevertheless surprised at the ease with which he got into a change of clothing. Though he was fearfully weak, he found himself actually feeling better. The disease had spent itself, and the mend had begun.

"Now, if I don't get the fever," he said aloud, and at the same moment resolved to go to taking quinine as soon as he was strong enough to dare

He crawled out on the veranda. The rain had ceased, but the wind, which had dwindled to a half gale, was increasing. A big sea had sprung up, and the mile-long breakers, curling up to the overfall two hundred yards from shore, were crashing on the beach. The Jessie was plunging madly to two anchors, and every second or third sea broke clear over her bow. Two flags were stiffly undulating from the halyards like squares of flexible sheet-iron. One was blue, the other red. He knew their meaning in the Berande private code—"What are your instructions? Shall I attempt to land boat." Tacked on the wall, between the signal locker and the billiard rules, was the code itself, by which he verified the signal before making answer. On the flagstaff aaft a boy hoisted a white flag over a red, which stood for: "Run to Neal Island for shelter."

That Captain Oleson had been expecting this signal was apparent by the celerity with which the shackles were knocked out of both anchor-chains. He slipped his anchors, leaving them buoyed to be picked up in better weather. The Jessie swung off under her full staysail, then the foresail, double-reefed, was run up. She was away like a race-horse, clearing Baleauna Shoal with half a cable length to spare. Just before she rounded the point she was swallowed up in a terrific squall that far outblew the first.

All that night, while squall after squall smote Berande, uprooting trees overthrowing opra-sheds, and rocking the house on its tall piles, Sheldon slept. He was unaware of the commotion. He never wakened. Nor did he change his position or dream. He awoke, a new man. Furthermore, he was hungry. It was over a week since food had passed his lips. He drank a glass of condensed cream, thinned with water, and by ten o'clock he dared to take a cup of beef-tea. He was cheered, also, by the situation in the hospital. Despite the storm there had been but one death and there was only one fresh case, while half a dozen boys crawled weakly away to the barracks. He wondered if it was the wind that was blowing the disease away and cleansing the pestilential land.

By eleven a messenger arrived from Baleauna village, despatched by Seelee. The Jessie had gone ashore halfway between the village and Neal Island. It was not till nightfall that two of the crew arrived, reporting the drowning of Captain Oleson and of the one remaining boy. As for the Jessie, from what they told him, Sheldon could not but conclude that she was a total loss. Further to hearten him, he was taken by a shivering fit. In half an hour he was burning up. And he knew that at least another day must pass before he could undertake even the smallest dose of quinine. He crawled under a heap of blankets, and a little later found himself laughing aloud. He had surely reached the limit of disaster. Barring earthquake or tidal wave, the worst had already befallen him. The Flibberty-Gibbet was certainly safe in Mboli Pass. Since nothing worse could happen, things simply had to mend. So it was, shivering under his blankets, that he laughed, until the house-boys, with heads together, marvelled at the devils that were in him.

Spring Finds the Human System

Loaded With Impurities Which Cause Pains, Aches and Feelings of Fatigue

When the Liver and Kidneys Are Overworked and Break Down Get Them Right by Using

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

In the spring the human system is loaded with poisons which has accumulated as a result of artificial winte rlife. There has been too much breathing of poisoned indoor air, too little outdoor exercise, too much eating of heavy, indigestible food, especially too much meat and too little fruit.

The liver and kidneys struggle to overcome this condition, but the task is too great for them and they get sluggish and torpid, fail in their work and often become diseased themselves.

given them by the use of Dr. Chase's

They must have help, such as is Kidney-Liver Pills. There is no great mystery of how these pills purify the blood and take away the acuse of tired, spring feelings, backaches, headaches, bodily pains or derangements of the digestive system.

If the blood is to be purified the liver and kidneys must do it. And they will if you awaken their action by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

It will not take long to get these blood filters into working order if you us this treatment. A few hours will bring improvement and you will learn how to keep these organs healthy and active. One pills a dose, 25c. a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co.

IDOL OF THE BELGIANS

Queen Elizabeth Is Not Yet Quite Restored to Health

Queen Elizabeth, the idol of the Belgian people and the fond mother of three most interesting children, is not yet quite restored to health. Her arduous charity work, combined with the social exactions of her position after she became Queen, brought on, last winter, a violent attack of typhoid fever, which left her in an enfeebled condition. Her lungs and throat were so affected that as soon as she was able to be moved she was taken to the Riviera. Not being much benefited there, she sought the still milder climate of Egypt. Now she is at home again, but she is still too delicate to undergo an operation which ought to be performed for an ear trouble. It was her custom to drive out daily with her children, but since her return she has not been permitted to continue this.

ROYALTY AND LITERATURE

Writings in Manuscript and Print by the Bavarian Royal Family

The Bavarian Royal Family is the most literary in Europe, and an exhibition of their writings in manuscript and print has been opened at Munich. The exhibition embraces no fewer than 573 works of different classes. Some are books on politics and religion; others translations of moral writings; and others highly frivolous. Among the latter is a work entitled "A Receipt Against Mothers-in-Law," by King Ludwig I., the ruler whose love affair with the artiste Lola Montes led to his enforced abdication. Another Bavarian King wrote poetry in German, English, French, Italian, Latin and Greek, and translated from Spanish. Four Bavarian Kings have left behind them poetry in different languages. The verses of Ludwig I. are set to music by himself. Among the exhibits are compositions of King Ludwig II., the friend and patron of Wagner, who murdered his physician and drowned himself in Starnberg Lake in 1886.

THE CLIMBING ROSE

Points to be Observed in the Cultivation of This Flower

There are climbing roses that will bloom continuously from June until the end of October. But it is just the past score years that have witnessed this remarkable development of climbing roses. Before that, the varieties most common were not at all hardy, their flowers were not nearly so large nor so beautiful as those of to-day. But twenty years ago someone introduced the memorial rose, and about the same time the crimson rambler, a hardy, showy, climbing rose, with flowers in clusters, came over from China and aroused great interest among horticulturists. The question arose whether it could not be combined with the memorial, for the crimson rambler, though strong and bearing beautiful flowers, had nevertheless many defects which were absent in the memorial. The grafting was done and successfully. New hybrids were produced, which combined hardiness, abundance of bloom, rapid growth and grace of form, with great resistance to disease and insects. It was the beginning of a new era in climbing roses. The new roses spread everywhere, and rose-growers were enthusiastic over the results of the experiment. Other combinations were attempted with success, and we have the results to-day in the multiplicity of lovely climbing rose vines that make beautiful so many gardens.

There are three groups of the climbing roses: the multiflora, which bloom early in June only; the prairie roses, heavy in flower and with grey-green foliage, and, most important of all, the memorial group, which flowers all summer and often until the frost has come. Nearly everyone knows one variety of the memorial group, the Dorothy Perkins. It is much like the crimson rambler, save that its flowers are pink: its foliage is thick and glossy, and it is altogether a very desirable variety to cultivate.

In growing climbing roses the secret of success is simply good soil. The earth can hardly be too rich nor the trench too deep. If strong plants are bought at the outset, and they are planted in good soil and well watered, success is almost absolutely certain. The only harm possible might come from insects, but these may be guarded against by judicious spraying.

At the back of men's unjust judgments lie two evil tendencies—a readiness to believe the worst and an eagerness to hear the worst.—Rev. H. F. B. Mackay.

BABYLONIAN SURGEON'S FEES

The French newspapers contain interesting references to the discovery of a Babylonian stone which shows the fees that were paid to surgeons some four thousand centuries ago. The fees, considering the risk, were extremely moderate; and they were fees literally with a vengeance, and not honorariums, in those far-away days. An operation to the neck, we learn, cost about five francs. Setting a broken leg is, we are informed, put down at $3. Dentistry was paid for at a better rate, seeing that the tariff for removing a tooth was $1.25. This seems a very stiff sum relatively, but there is a reverse to this beautiful medal. If the operation turned out badly, and the patient died, then the unfortunate practitioner had both his hands cut off.

SAYINGS OF THE WISE

It is better to save lives than to save rates.—Alderman Fildes.

TRAITS OF ANIMALS

Leading Traits of the Common Animals

Some one who was interested in animals studied their characters a short time ago, and read a great deal about them, says the Scrap Book.

His estimate of their leading traits was:

Ant, prudence.
Ass, stupidity.
Bear, ill temper.
Bee, industry.

WORLD'S SEVEN BIBLES

The Great Sacred Books That Are Known to the World

There are seven great sacred books known to the world. The word "Bible" means simply "book," and is here used to denote a great standard moral work which has come to be regarded as sacred. The seven bibles are:

The Holy Scriptures, or Holy Bible of the Christians.
The Koran, of the Mohammedans.
The Tripitka, of the Buddhists.
The Five Kings, of the Chinese
The Zendavesta, of the Parsees.
The Three Vedas, of the Hindus.
The Eddas, of the Scandinavians.

The Koran is a comparatively modern work, dating from the seventh century. It contains many quotations from the Holy Scriptures, and, in common with most of the Sacred Books of the world, teaches much the same moral lessons as our own Bible, though differently expressed. The Five Kings, the Three Vedas, and the Zendavesta, all date from about the eleventh century before Christ, as nearly as can be ascertained, and so are of great antiquity. With regard to the Five Kings, the word "King" here signifies a warp, or piece of cloth with which a book is bound, and has no reference to monarchs.

"Zendavesta" means "Living Word written in the Zend language." It is the sacred book of the followers of Zoroaster, an ancient philosopher.

Cockles and Live Shells

Undeterred by the explanation of the commandant of the School of Gunnery that it is dangerous to collect cockles on the sands of Shoeburyness owing to the many unexploded shells lying there, the fishermen of the district have resolved to send a deputation to Lord Haldane asking permission to collect cockles when firing is not taking place.

BELATED WEDDING PRESENT

Massive Silver Table Service for the German Crown Prince

The Crown Prince and Princess of Germany are about to receive a truly magnificent wedding present. It is true that it reaches them about five years after their marriage, but in point of beauty and value the gift is said to be one which any ordinary young couple would be cheerfully willing to wait for. It is a massive silver table service for use on state occasions, and comprises a variety of decorative pieces, including huge candelabra a meter high, heavy punch-bowls, and a set of sculptured figures representing the seasons. The gift is presented by the cities of Prussia, which ordered it at the time of the Crown Prince's wedding. For five years some of the best artists, sculptors and silversmiths of Germany have been at work upon it, and the individual pieces, when completed, have been stowed away in the vaults of the Reichsbank. The service will be presented in August.

DIVORCES IN BAVARIA

Divorce cases having increased in Bavaria, which is a Catholic country, an official order was promulgated some months ago to the effect that whenever citations are applied for in the divorce courts the priests of the parish in which the parties are living shall be informed of the differences between the parties in order that they may bring their pastoral influence to bear in bringing about a reconciliation. The latest statistics show that the new order has had no appreciable effect in checking the rapid increase in the number of cases brought before the courts.

KIT'S COLUMN

Ireland has of late years been given a chance to show whether she is disloyal, or dissatisfied, and I think she has pretty well proved that while she is neither she is not a little independent. It is not in the Irish nature to be inhospitable. Irishmen laugh at the cautiousness of England in fear for Britain's royalty when it visits the old sod. They well know there is no cause for fear. Victoria the Good paid few visits to Erin by the advice of her ministers. She could have come often and would have been welcome. Ireland had no grievance against her though it had against her uncomprehending government. It was the pleasure of King Edward to drive about Dublin without a military or police escort at the time he visited the Dublin exhibition. I saw him drive down Grafton street in his motor without display of any kind. The people adored him for his fearlessness. They waited in humorous and respectful crowds till he came out of the shop he had stopped at, and then they drew closer about him and cheered and blessed him. And the king showed that he liked it. He was always smiling in Dublin, but everybody laughs in Ireland, save the Irish. When King George, then Duke of York, visited the Horse Show in Dublin, he passed to his seat through the best natured crowd in the world. "Come again, prince," said a big man who stood at my elbow, and the cry went through the crowd: "Come again. Come often!"

The prince looked grave and slightly astonished. Were these the "Irish savages" who shot from behind hedges and stabbed men in the broad moontide—these sunny-faced men who welcomed him and his duchess so warmly, but took extreme care to fly the old flag (God bless it) with its lone harp, side by side with the Jack which much Irish blood had helped to colour? Perhaps had royalty seen as I saw when a child, the little family evicted in the rain and the wind, the miserable cabin burned before their eyes, and their rack-rented land taken from them; had royalty seen the old mother dying in the ditch, the unfortunate wife shivering in her rags, as she herded her little family about her, it might have understood the despair and hate that work in the human heart towrds murder; it might remember that a nation's wrongs are the cradle hymns of her children and that hate sucked in with the mother's milk is hard indeed to uproot.

But all that is finished, I hope. The winter of Ireland's discontent is nearly over. As ever independent, she flings her green banners to the wind. She clamours her needs in the ear of royalty. "You are welcome, O king. God bless you—" "But—We want home rule."

And it looks as though Erin will get it. Liberty, sun-rimmed, is rising on the horizon of the most beloved island in the world—she who holds the hearts of her children across the seas and the hills with cords of love. Never are those golden cords loosened. The eye of the exile often yearns for sight of "the green hills of Ireland;" the heart remains always warm with the love of her. Memory refreshes the soul with thoughts of the kindliness, the word of welcome or blessing, the merry greeting and laugh of the saddest race on the earth, and never, as long as life and memory last will Ireland and her story be forgotten by an Irish heart. The better days are coming but it will take many of them to chase the shadow of grief from the soul of a race oppressed and misunderstood, maybe, but never, thank God! beaten.

The most delightful note of the coronation was the Spirit of Youth, which pervaded it. The crowning of King Edward was a subdued ceremonial. The king had late in life come into his own. His son and heir was almost a middle-aged man. His own health was precarious. It had been a long time between crownings and much of the ceremonial had been forgotten. There was a great digging up of ancient rites and customs, and the performance did not run as smoothly as it might have. The short interval between the coronation of King Edward and that of our present monarch allowed for no lapse of memory on the part of the lord marshal of England or the high dignitaries of the church. They had modern precedents before them, and, as was expected, the coronation passed without a hitch. King George was young enough to feel the importance, as well as the responsibility, of his great position. Queen Mary was young enough to enjoy the splendour of her golden dress and purple train. She had planned every detail of her habiliment to the last golden leaf of embroidery and the last diamond in her crown, with the anxious eagerness of the most youthful bride over her trousseau, and you may be sure little Princess Mary adored herself in her first train just as much as any Canadian girl in her first ballgown. It was difficult for her to keep an unsmiling face as she bowed to her brother in passing and received his salutation, and she laughed outright when the young Prince was seriously reviewing the colonial troops at Chelsea. Imagine, too, the joy of the Prince of Wales, when his three young brothers had to bow decorously to him in the abbey. "Ah, ha! you fellows'll have to kow-tow to me to-morrow" you can hear him say to brothers Albert and Henry, and little Prince John. "Bow to Sardines! What a jolly lark" Prince Henry—the gayest of the boys—might well remark. Small Prince John peered out at the crowd, fear and delight on his face, as the carriage containing the royal children pursued its way to and from the abbey. The Prince of Wales sat, his tall feathered garter hat in his lap—with his sister Mary—while the three boys squeezed together on the opposite seat. How the elder ones must have talked and arranged matters! But the face of Baby John in the clear photograph, which lies beside me, is the dearest of all—the most youthful note in the coronation—that eager little face unsmiling, wondering. What does Fate hold in her mysterious wallet for the prince to whom the processions, and horses, and bands, and rattle was only one grand, long exquisite circus?

Thackeray's centenary has just passed but Becky Sharp and old Colonel Newcome and all the other shadows—save still except that foolish Irish Sketch book are with us, nor are they likely to diminish. Nor could we wish to lose the company of anyone of them save, perhaps Amelia Sedley. I have no patience with Amelia. Thackeray himself said that he grew to hate and fear her. She was his Frankenstein. He had made her perfect, the best and meekest of women in contrast to the rather hurid but decidedly fascinating Becky with a view of making his readers turn with delight to the good, the pure, the charming, the domestic type. Alas! poor humanity, as ever, was attracted by the diablerie of Becky of the green eyes, and left Amelia to mope by herself. We skipped pages on our first reading of Vanity Fair, and then we went back and read every line about her, because we could not afford to miss a word of the great book. But we never met her that we did not feel a desire to shake her till her teeth clashed. Thackeray "sweated blood to make her interesting and attractive," says Lord Rosebery. And Thackeray only succeeded in making her a horrid little prig, a dreary, weeping, ineffectual woman, a living "prunes and prism and potatoes." You wonder what Dobbin saw in her. Good old Dobbin! far too fine a fellow to go spooning over an Amelia Sedley. If ever Cupid was sightless it was when he led Dobbin by the ear to the feet of that good, meek, amiable bromide, Amelia. She had infected the very name of robbed it of a strength o character which you might otherwise have attached to it. And what greater compliment than that can be paid to his genius who immortalised such evil characters as Rebecca Sharp and the Marquis of Steyne, and put the world in good humour with his delightful Snobs and lovable old colonel.

Some of the circulars sent out by our various good medical health officers in regard to hot weather precautions make amusing reading. As though we did not know enough to discard extra clothing and indulge in cooling drinks. Perhaps the worst advice is to go hungry. No matter what the weather is doing the human machine needs coaxing up when that engineer, the stomach, calls for fuel. To persist in resting then, is to weaken the constitution and put it in very bad shape to resist any knocks the weather or anything else may hand out to it. Naturally there is little appetite for hot roasts and corn beef and cabbage when the mercury is flying up among the late nineties—no need to warn sane people against roast pork and beefsteak with onions. The engineer aforementioned sees to all that—but the appetite can be well satisfied with lighter food, such as fresh fish, salads, cold ham, and all the good fruit and lemonade and ice cream one cares to indulge in. To fast when you are hungry is to do a very harmful thing; to gorge oneself with unfitting foods is to do a dangerous thing. But there is always a happy medium.

One medical health officer has gone so far as to issue a circular called "The cry of the children to the mothers of Ottawa." It is very funny. The composer evidently is not without a sense of merriment else Ottawa must be a place benighted —rather savagein fact. And we all know how far it is from being anything like that. Baby entreats to be fed and bathed every day, to be out of doors in his "pram," to be allowed to sleep in a cot by himself—all things done every day and all the time for baby by every sort of mother with a grain of common sense, unless she is so poor that she can afford neither a cot or a "pram." A long string of directions follows. The mothers of Ottawa are certainly being educated in how to teach the young idea the proper way to shoot. However, the babies have to take their chances, and while these may not the same for the poor as for the rich, baby often thrives in his three-in-the-bed, and his "lick and a promise" for a bath, while he fades — poor little flower!—in his exquisite hot-house, where fare is daintiest and his care is of the best.

BITS FROM THE NEW BOOKS

Knowledge is the source of all goodness; ignorance the source of all evil. —"Britishers in Britain."

As long as the world is what it is, as long as men and girls are what they are, attractive women will receive attentions from men as of right. —"Laidlaw's Wife."

Proverbs have been termed the "nob-nailed truths of the people," and they certainly are merciless in treading on tender points which ordinary language is inclined to avoid.—"At the Back of Things."

The true genius can no more help exercising his special capacity than a bird can resist flying.—"Oh, for th Angel!"

When we envy a rich man we call him a financier; when we despise a poor one we call him a fool. It is as difficult to admire success heartily as it is to pity failure sincerely.—"A Kingdom of Dreams."

If the poor man falls it is never to hope again.—"The Open Window."

GRANDMOTHERS USED SAGE TEA

To Darken the Hair and Restore Gray and Faded Hair to Its Natural Color.

It is easier to preserve the color of the hair than to restore it, although it is possible to do both. Our grandmothers understood the secret. They made a "sage tea," and their dark, glossy hair hung after middle life was due to this fact. Our mothers have gray hairs before they are fifty, but they are beginning to appreciate the value of our grandmothers in using "sage tea" for their hair and are fast following suit.

The present generation has the advantage of the past in that it can get a ready-to-use preparation called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy. As a scalp tonic and color restorer this preparation is vastly superior to the ordinary "sage tea" made by our grandmothers.

This remedy is sold under guarantee that the money will be refunded if it fails to do exactly as represented.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists.

MARKET REPORTS.

Cheapest and Cheapest Wheat Pictured Close Higher—Live Stock—

Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, July 17.—Apparently small unthusiastic reports of frost in Manitoba helped the wheat market to-day in spots, notwithstanding a sharp break in prices for coarse grains. Wheat closed a shade to ¼c net higher, but corn was off 1¼c to 1¾c, and oats at a decline of ⅝c to 1¼c. Lateat trading left provisions less unfavorable by 5c to 12c. During the session September wheat ranged from 97¾c to 99½c and closed at 98, a net gain of a shade.

The Liverpool market closed to-day 1d to 1¼d higher than Saturday on wheat, and 1¼d to 1¾d higher on corn. Berlin wheat closed ¼c lower.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, July 17.—Outside of sales of a few loads of Manitoba samples wheat for export account, business over the cable to all hours was quiet. The tone of the local market was steady for cash, in spite of the decline in prices in Winnipeg, but the demand was limited. A fair local trade was done in flour, but the demand from foreign buyers was quiet. The market for rolled oats, cornmeal and all kinds of millfeed is fairly active.

Oats—Canadian Western, No. 2, 47½c to 48c; do., No. 3, 46½c to 47c; extra No. 1 feed, 47c to 47½c; No. 2 C.W., 46c to 46½c.

Flour—Manitoba spring wheat patents, firsts, $5.30; seconds, $4.80; strong bakers', $4.60; winter patents, choice, $4.50 to $4.70; straights, $4.30 to $4.40; in bags, $2.15 to $2.25.

Corn—American, No. 2 yellow, 70c.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Union Stock Yards.

TORONTO, July 17.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Stock Yards were 56 carloads, consisting of 1700 cattle, 200 hogs, 600 sheep and lambs, 34 calves and 17 horses.

Butchers.

Best and picked butchers sold at $6.75 to $6.85; medium, $6.50 to $6.65; common, $5 to $6.25; cows, $5 to $6.50; bulls, $4 to $6.50.

Milkers and Springers.

A moderate supply sold at $50 to $80 each, and one choice cow was reported sold at $75.

Veal Calves.

Veal calves sold from $4 to $8.75 per cwt., 2 choice calves bringing the latter price.

Sheep and Lambs.

Sheep ewes sold at $5.50 to $6; lambs, prices $8 per cwt. lower than last week, selling at $7 to $8 per cwt.

Hogs.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, July 17.—At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market the receipts of live stock for the week ending July 15 were 3500 cattle, 1725 sheep and lambs, 1250 hogs and 450 calves, while the offerings on the market this morning for sale were 650 cattle, 800 sheep and lambs, 350 hogs and 250 calves.

There was no actual change in prices for cattle since this day week, but, considering the quality of the stock offered, which was inferior to that of a week ago, the undertone to the market was stiffer, in spite of the continued warm weather and the weaker cable advices received from Liverpool. These noted a further decline of 1c per pound on account of the extreme heat and the limited demand for beef.

The gathering of buyers was fairly large, and the demand from butchers was good for small lots, but owing to the inferior quality and high prices demanded for the same some of the large packing concerns were not disposed to operate, claiming that they could do better in the western market. However, trade, on the other hand, was fairly active, and, in addition to the demand for local consumption, there was some buying for Quebec account, which resulted in several carloads being taken for shipments to that point.

Choice steers sold at 6½c; good at 6¼c to 6¾c; fairly good at 5¾c to 6¼c; fair at 5½c to 5¾c, and common at 4½c to 4¾c per pound. There were a number of cows among the offerings, which brought from 3½c to 5½c, and bulls from 3½c to 5½c per pound, as to quality.

The strong feeling which has characterized the market for hogs for the last two weeks still continues to be the main feature of this branch of the trade, and prices to-day scored a further advance of 1c to 15c per 100 pounds. The strength is attributed to the limited supplies coming forward, on account of the extreme heat of late and the keen demand from packers for supplies, in consequence of an active trade done, and sale selected lots were made at $7.75 to $8 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars.

A feature of the small-meat trade was the strength in the market for lambs, and prices advanced 50c to $1 per head, which was due to the keen demand from local buyers and the limited offerings, and sales were made at $4 to $8 each. The trade in sheep was quiet, and prices were unchanged, at from $3.50 to $4 each. The demand for calves was good at prices ranging from $3 to $6 each, as to size and quality.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, July 17.—Cattle—Receipts, 1200 head; market slow, 10c to 15c lower; prime steers, $6.40 to $6.50; butcher grades, $5.50 to $6.

Calves—Receipts, 1200; market slow, 50c lower; cull to choice, $5 to $8.75.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 3000 head; market slow, 25c lower; wooled lambs, $7.60 to $7.80; cull to fair, $5 to $7.25; yearlings, $5 to $6.75; sheep, $3 to $4.75.

Hogs—Receipts, 11,200; market active and firm; yorkers, $7.15; pigs, $6.85 to $6.90; mixed, $7.10 to $7.15; heavy, $7.10 to $7.15; roughs, $5 to $5.50; stags, $3 to $5.50.

Chicago Live Stock.

CHICAGO, July 17.—Hogs—Receipts, 35,000; market steady to higher; mixed and butchers, $6.30 to $6.65; good, heavy, $6.40 to $6.55; rough, heavy, $6.15 to $6.30; light, $6.40 to $6.55; pigs, $6.30 to $6.65.

Cattle—Receipts, 15,000; market steady; beeves, $4.35 to $7; cows and heifers, $2.35 to $5.75; stockers and feeders, $3 to $5.10; Texans, $4.60 to $5.10; calves, $5 to $7.25.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 25,000; market steady; native, $3.60 to $4.85; western, $3 to $4.75; lambs, $4 to $7.10; western, $5.10 to $7.

Sermon by CHARLES T. RUSSELL Pastor Brooklyn Tabernacle.

Gehenna Fire a Figure of Speech

Toronto, Can., July 16.—Pastor Russell delivered three addresses here today under the auspices of the International Bible Students Association. By request two of his addresses were more particularly to the Hebrews, on "Zionism in Prophecy." Another was specially to Bible Students, and it we report. His text was, "Where their worm dieth not and the fire is not quenched" Mark ix, 44). The speaker said:—

There are other and much more beautiful topics than the one I have chosen for this occasion. Nevertheless, "Handsome is that handsome does." This text has stood in the way of God's people for centuries, and still continues in the way of many of them. To such it proves the Almighty Creator to be a most unkind one, a most un-Fatherly one, view the matter as we will. Some say, lovelessly and illogically, that God provided from before the foundation of the world a great gehenna of fire, torture, suffering, and that all mankind were doomed on account of father Adam's transgression, but that through Jesus' death arrangement was made by which the small number who walk in His footsteps in the "narrow way" may escape this awful eternity.

Others say, not so; God is love, and these unquenchable fires and immortal worms are matters of necessity which His love cannot overcome, because, by some slip of unwisdom in the beginning, or by some lack of power since, the Almighty is unable to do better than to save the mere handful and to allow the great mass of mankind to suffer endless torture in the fire that never shall be quenched, and where the worm will never die.

These words from the lips of our Master, the Great Teacher, have been grievously misunderstood. The teaching of our Protestant childhood was to the effect that only the saintly elect would go to heaven and that others would not only lose heaven, but gain an eternal life in torment. Thus our text was understood to portray what practically the whole world of mankind would be compelled to endure.

This hell was pictured to our childhood minds from outside the Bible as heated to a white heat. If we expressed wonder or surprise that any creature could endure such conditions so long the answer was that God would exercise his omnipotent power to make us fire-proof and pain-insensitive.

Some theologians of the Thomas a Kempis school of thought went so far as to picture the poor creatures in their sufferings and to show that the heat would form a kind of an asbestos covering which would shield them from a measure of its intensity. But those deluded theologians proceeded to explain that these outer coverings would crack and shell off every little while, leaving the poor victim freshly tender that his suffering might be the more intense.

Of course, these theologians of the past had their difficulty in dealing with the worms. They could imagine devils who would oversee the torture as being made immune to pain by the chief torturer, the Almighty God. But just how to imagine the worms getting along in so great a heat and how they would in any wise increase the torture of the poor sufferers was to many a perplexity. But patient thoughtfulness along these cruel and devilish lines enabled some to formulate the theory that the worms would be fiery ones, living in fire, delighting in fire — worms that would bore through the incrustations and add still further to the horrible sufferings of the world of mankind.

Did the Great Teacher intend that such conclusions should be drawn from His language? And did He stop short of the description from reasons of sympathy or modesty or shame? Is this the general teaching of God's Word or has a great and terrible mistake been made? And have we mistaken a figure of speech and treated it as literal? We erred. We misunderstood.

The Great Teacher who rebuked His disciples, James and John, when they desired to call fire from heaven upon the City of Samaria, because the people thereof refused to sell them food for the Master—the sympathetic One who said to them, "Ye know not what manner of spirit ye are of; the Son of man came not to destroy men's lives, but to save them"—could that Son of man in any wise intend to tell us that our great Heavenly Father had less of the spirit of love and righteousness than the two impetuous disciples?

Did he mean to intimate that while the disciples might impetuously have been willing to destroy the earthly life of the Samaritans, the Heavenly Father, of still more demoniacal disposition, would treat practically all mankind ten million times worse than that and use Divine Power to all eternity to perpetuate the sufferings of His earthly creatures, which His own Word declares were born in sin, shapen in iniquity, in sin did their mothers conceive them—earthly creatures, too, whose environment was unfavorable and whose Adversary, the Devil, God neither destroyed nor bound?

As we have heretofore seen, the only Hebrew word translated hell, from Genesis to Malachi, is sheol, which is indiscriminately translated grave, pit and hell in our Common Version of the English Bible—the greater number of times grave — its proper translation. Its Greek equivalent in the New Testament, we have seen, is hades, which likewise is indiscriminately translated grave and hell, but should always be rendered grave. We repeat again that no scholar in the world will claim that there is the slightest thought of life or suffering or joy connected with these words.

The Scriptures distinctly declare that "there is neither wisdom, nor device, nor knowledge in sheol"—to which all, both good and bad, go at death, and where they remain until the resurrection. In the New Testament the word tartarus occurs once only and is mistranslated hell, whereas it should be rendered our earth's atmosphere. It has no reference to humanity in any way, but to the fallen angels. The Apostle says that as a punishment "God cast them down to tartarus" and they are "reserved in chains of darkness until the judgment of the great Day."

But to-day we will examine the fourth and last word translated hell in our common English Bible. This word in the Greek is gehenna. It occurs but twelve times, as follows: Matthew v, 22, 29, 30; x, 28; xviii, 9; xxiii 15, 33. Mark ix, 43, 45, 47; Luke xii, 5; James iii, 6. One of the occurrences is in connection with our text to-day. The question is, To what does this word gehenna refer? Is it a name for Purgatory? Or a name for a still worse place of unending torture, as our Protestant creeds declare? We answer, No. It is a figure of speech used to symbolize the Second Death—the death from which there will be no resurrection, no reawakening—the everlasting destruction mentioned by St. Paul, and of which St. Peter says that they which experience it perish like the brute beast (II. Thessalonians i, 9; II. Peter ii, 12). This is very plainly stated in Revelation xx, 14, where of this "lake of fire" it is declared, "this is the Second Death."

The Greek word gehenna is the synonym for the Hebrew word Ge-hinnom, which means "The valley of Hinnom." This valley is repeatedly mentioned in the Bible. It was owned by a family named Hinnom. The first reference to it is in Joshua xv, 8. Looking at any Bible map of the city of Jerusalem, the valley will be seen to the southwest of the city wall. At a time when the Israelites became sadly involved in idolatry, this valley was used as a sacred place. An image of the heathen god, Moloch, made of brass, and hollow, was erected. It was so constructed that the chair, which was a part of the image, constituted a furnace fired from the rear, and the head of the image was the top of a flue.

The image held out its arms as though to receive something and, heated red hot by the fire, was a receptacle in which deluded Israelites placed their children as sacrifices, while trumpets were blown, drums beaten and the people shouted, stifling the cries of the tortured infants (II. Kings xxiii, 10). When the good King Josiah came to the throne all this idolatry was abolished and the proper worship of God in the temple was resumed. Then, lest the people should ever again resort to such atrocious customs, the valley was desecrated. It became a valley of abomination. It was used as a dumping place for the filth of Jerusalem. Dead dogs and dead cats were thrown there, and it is claimed that some of the vile criminals, after execution, were thrown therein instead of given burial — to typically illustrate that there is no future life for such obnoxious beings—that they will be refuse.

The valley of Hinnom is now filled up and an orchard grows there; but originally it was quite deep. The carcasses of animals were thrown there intended for destruction, the worms feeding upon them. No one sought to hinder the worms from making a complete destruction. In the bottom of the valley fires were kindled for the consumption of the waste debris, and brimstone was added that the fumes of it might destroy any germs of disease. No one thought of quenching that fire; it was one that was desired. This was the gehenna of our Lord's day. He used it in a figurative or pictorial sense as illustrating the Second Death, which will be the portion of all wilful sinners. He used it also symbolically, in connection with other symbols, in the book of Revelation, where as already seen He explains it to mean the Second Death.

The worms of that valley were no more immortal than any other creatures or things and the fires distinguishing there are not burning now. This expression, "Where their worm dieth not and the fire is not quenched," merely signifies that the destruction of the class represented would be complete, that nothing would interfere to save them from destruction. Adamic death will be destroyed, as the Scriptures declare. Christ died that it might have the rightful authority to destroy Adamic death and uplift all of Adam's race who will accept His favor back to all that was lost in Adam, and redeemed at Calvary. But the Second Death is a friend to God and to all who love righteousness, since it will utterly and forever destroy such as have love or sympathy for sin and refuse to be obedient to the Divine will after full enlightenment.

As the earthly Jerusalem was a figure of the Jerusalem from above, the heavenly Jerusalem, the Kingdom of God that is to be established in all the earth, so gehenna and its "fire" and "worms" prefigured the destruction of the Second Death upon every wilful sinner, during or shortly after the termination of Christ's Mediatorial Kingdom and reign and the delivery of the Kingdom back to God, with righteousness fully established.

As the New Jerusalem will not be a literal city, with literal streets of gold and gates of pearls and walls of jewels, neither the valley of Hinnom nor the lake of fire outside the city of Jerusalem will be literal—both are symbolical. The one represents harmony with God, the Divine blessing and everlasting life; the other represents separation from God, everlasting destruction, the Second Death.

Fire is never used as a symbol of preservation, far from it. It is always a symbol of destruction. The addition of brimstone intensifies the figure, because burning brimstone is one of the most deadly influences known in the world. It is not only deadly to humanity and the larger animals but also to insects and microbes and everything that has life.

This same lesson of the destruction of wilful transgressors, as represented in the destructiveness of the valley of Hinnom (Gehenna), is furnished by the Prophet Isaiah (lxvi, 22-24). A familiar sight in Isaiah's day was the literal valley of Hinnom, used as a figure by the Holy Spirit speaking through him, pointing to the antitype and telling of the New Heavens and New Earth—the new religious and secular organizations of mankind which will be accomplished by Messiah's reign—and that then evil doers shall not escape but shall be completely, utterly destroyed. "They shall go forth and look upon the carcasses of the men who have transgressed against Me, for their worm shall not die, neither shall their fire be quenched; and they shall be an abhorrence unto all flesh." Nothing is said about looking at living beings suffering torture, nor is this the thought. God never approved of torture, but always condemned it. A carcass is a dead body.

How glad we should be to realize that God's great Plan will not include a great torture chamber containing countless myriads of His creatures but, as the Scriptures declare, "Every creature in heaven and in earth and under the earth will be heard saying, Praise and glory and honor and dominion and might be unto Him that sitteth upon the throne and unto the Lamb forever."

Having demonstrated that neither the Bible nor reason offers the slightest support to the doctrine that eternal torment is the penalty for sin, we note the fact that the various church creeds, and confessions, and hymnbooks, and theological treatises, are its only supports; and that under the increasing light of our day, and the consequent examination of reason, belief in this horrible, fiendish doctrine of the Dark Ages is fast dying out. But alas! this is not because Christian people generally are zealous for the truth of God's Word and for its character, and willing to destroy their grim creed-idols. Ah no! they still bow before their admitted falsities; they still pledge themselves to their defence, and spend time and money for their support, though at heart ashamed of them, and privately denying them.

The general influence of all this is to cause the honest-hearted of the world to despise Christianity and the Bible; and to make hypocrites and semi-infidels of nominal Christians. Because the nominal church clings to this old blasphemy, and falsely presents its own error as the teaching of the Bible, the Word of God, though still nominally reverenced, is being practically repudiated. Thus the Bible, the great anchor of truth and liberty, is being cut loose from by the very ones who, if not deceived regarding its teachings, would be held and blessed by it.

The general effect, not far distant, will be, first open infidelity, then anarchy. For much, very much of this lukewarm Christians, both in pulpits and pews, who know better, are responsible. Many such are willing to compromise the truth, to slander God's character, and to stultify and deceive themselves, for the sake of peace, or ease, or present earthly advantage. And any minister, who, by uttering a word for an unpopular truth, will risk the loss of his stipend and his reputation for being "established" in the bog of error, is considered a bold man, even though he ignominiously withhold his name from his published protests.

If professed Christians would be honest with themselves and true to God, they would soon learn that "their fear toward God is taught by the precepts of men" (Isaiah xxix, 13). If all would decide to let God be true, though it should prove every man a liar (Romans iii, 4), and show all human creeds to be imperfect and misleading, there would be a great creed-smashing work done very shortly. Then the Bible would be studied and appreciated as never before; and its testimony that the wages of sin is death (extinction), would be recognized as a "just recompense of reward."

"My oldest son, five years old, got very bad with cholera infantum; two days after my next son took it, and the third day my little girl also took it. I doctored with all kinds of things, but they kept on getting worse and the doctors could do them no good. I then started the Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, and after two or three days could see a difference, so kept on with the treatment, but they were so bad it took about two weeks to complete the cure. Different people have asked me how I saved my children's lives that time, and I always say it was Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. I am now never without it in the house."

London "Graft" Enquiry.

London, July 18.—Evidence for the defence was taken yesterday when the civic graft enquiry into the alleged misappropriation of gravel and falsifying of pay sheets by Ward Foreman Mulhall was resumed, at the City Hall before Judge MacBeth.

The features of the hearing was the sworn statement of contractors, who testified to having sold Mulhall enough gravel to do all the cement work about the place.

An adjournment was taken until Friday, when the hearing of the cases against Mulhall will conclude, and that against Ald. Tenoseh, chairman of last year's Board of Works, will open.

Six Leaped Overboard.

Detroit, July 18.—Panic on board a launch on the Detroit River last night, following a trivial explosion, resulted in the death of one person and the narrow escape from drowning of five others. A small quantity of gasoline which had escaped from the engine became ignited and the sudden flash of fire so frightened the six occupants of the little craft that they all leaped overboard.

Miss Mabel Mason, aged 19, whose home is in Woodstock, Ont., sank before assistance could reach the struggling party. The others were rescued.

Round World in Forty Days.

Paris, July 18.—Jager Schmidt, a reporter on the newspaper Excelsior, started at 1.45 o'clock yesterday afternoon in an attempt to break the record for a trip around the world.

He will go from Paris to Moscow, and thence via the Trans-Siberian railroad to Vladivostok. Thence he will proceed to Yokohama, and will return by way of Vancouver, B.C., Quebec, and Liverpool.

Theoretically he is due back in Paris in forty days. That is eight days under the record made by Willis Sayre of Seattle about eight years ago.

Mourned as Dead Five Years.

Woodstock, July 18—After an absence of over thirty years, and after having been mourned for as dead for five years past, Amos Carter, son of Amos Carter, of Innerkip, returned to his home a few days ago. He came in unexpectedly and was not recognised by his father for some time. When Mr. Amos finally became convinced that the stranger was his long lost son he broke down and nearly collapsed.

Campaign Expenses Limited.

Washington, July 18.—The revised House campaign publicity bill unanimously passed the Senate yesterday. It prohibits a Senatorial candidate spending more than $10,000, a Congressional candidate $5,000, requires publicity before election of all campaign pledges, all primary campaign expenditures, and all general election expenditures.

Blown a Hundred Feet.

Denver, Colo., July 18.—Fragments of human flesh found within a radius of 200 yards, give evidence that three men were killed early yesterday, when 5,000 pounds of nitro-glycerine exploded, destroying the neutralizing plant and storehouse of the Dupont Powder Co., fifteen miles south of Denver.

The force of the blast was almost entirely upward. Men in the vicinity saw the two buildings rise in a cloud of black smoke, with a circle of flame at its base. When the buildings had reached a height of 100 feet they collapsed and fell in a shower of fragments.

Died by Fall From Hay Load.

Listowel, July 18.—The death occurred on Sunday of John McKnight, a well-known and highly-respected resident of Howick. The deceased sustained a severe fall from a load of hay on Friday evening last, which injured his spine and hurt his head internally.

Again in Custody.

Niagara Falls, Ont., July 18.—After twice breaking jail at Woodstock within a month, Earl Webb, aged 15, is again in custody of the provincial police here, having been arrested in Stevensville. He is wanted at Watford for the alleged theft of $70.

House Opens To-day.

Ottawa, July 18.—The House of Commons reassembles this afternoon, with reciprocity as the first item on the order paper to be considered, and with the deadlock situation practically unchanged from what it was at the time of the coronation adjournment, two months ago. Both majority and minority come back to again lock horns on the issue, and with neither side prepared to beat one step in retreat.

Diaz Goes to Paris.

Bad-Nauheim, Germany, July 18.—General Porfirio Diaz, the former President of Mexico, is preparing to leave for Paris. Being visited by a consulting physician here he was advised not to take the waters on account of his age. His health, however, appears excellent. From Paris Diaz will go to Switzerland, where he will remain throughout the summer.

Cyclone Destroyed Hamlet.

Port Deposit, Md., July 18.—A cyclone yesterday practically destroyed Richardsmen, a hamlet eight miles north of here, and swept everything from its path to Octoraro Valley. A flour mill built to make flour for Washington's army, which was still in operation was demolished. The total damage is estimated at $40,000.

Wreck Dead Number Twelve.

Mulheim, Germany, July 18.—Last night it was found that the dead numbered 12, of whom nine have not been identified.

Most of the injured were from Basel and Weisenthal.

So far as can be ascertained there were no Canadians or Americans injured.

A Long Time to Wait.

When corn and pigs begin to fall
And every robin wears a fez
The people who make profits by Maintaining public nuisances
May have the common decency
Or be so overcome by shame
That they will voluntarily
Refuse to operate the same.

GEORGE HOPE COMMITS SUICIDE IN POLICE STATION CELL BY CUTTING THROAT WITH POCKET KNIFE

Was Arrested Yesterday Morning For Being Drunk and Had Been in the Cell Waiting For Trial—Found Dead This Morning

AN INQUEST HELD

A shocking tragedy occurred some time this morning early at the police station, when George Hope, who resided with his mother at 184 London street, committed suicide by cutting his throat with a steel pocket knife. He was found dead in the cell about 5.15 this morning by Sergeant Adams. The officer was passing the cell and his attention was attracted by seeing spots of blood on the cell floor near the door. He looked in and saw the deceased in a sitting position in the corner with his head resting on the bench. He immediately summoned the Coroner and Dr. McPherson, both of whom arrived on the scene a little while later, and pronounced the man dead. There was a clot of blood over his eye and a knife wound in his throat, which undoubtedly caused death.

This morning a jury, composed of the following was sworn in by the Coroner Dr. Greer: John White, Wm. Loch, E. Payne, W. Higgins, Chief Howard, Ed. Elliott, Geo. Evans, E. F. Mason, Art. Johnston, W. Foster, John McCleland and Art. Mitchell.

At 10 o'clock the jury met in the City Council Chambers, the Coroner presiding and Mr. A. Wood present in the interests of the Crown.

Det. Newhall was the first witness called. He stated that he knew nothing of the circumstances of the death. He said that last night about 11 o'clock the deceased asked him to let him out and give him a drink of ice water. He further stated that he had known the man for some time and that he had been up on a charge of drunkenness four times within the last three weeks, and that he was drunk nearly all the time.

Chief Thompson was called. He said that the deceased was arrested by P. C. Middleton yesterday morning about 9 o'clock and lodged in the cells. He was too drunk to appear in court yesterday morning, and the Chief intended having him appear this morning. He could not say whether the constable searched him or not. He said he was speaking to him about 5.45, last night, and he was pretty well sobered up then. The Chief said it was the duty of the officers to search all prisoners before lodging them in the cells. The deceased and another man were the only prisoners in the cells and their cells were about six feet apart.

Sergeant Adams was next examined. He said that he was talking to the prisoner between 9.30 and 11 o'clock last night and that time he was all right. About 11 the other prisoner rattled at his cell door, and the deceased asked what he wanted and he asked to get out. After that, the officer heard no noise from either party. The witness then stated that he found the body this morning about 5.15, his attention being attracted by seeing blood on the floor of the cell as he passed. He left the body there and phoned for the doctors, who found that the deceased had cut his throat with a knife, which was found sticking in the jam of the door.

Jas. Middleton, the constable who arrested the deceased was next examined. He said he arrested the prisoner about 9.15 yesterday morning. He was walking down George street and saw the man fall on his head at the corner of George and Charlotte streets, and gathered him in. When putting him in the cells, he stated that he rubbed his hands down over the deceased and asked him if he had a knife, and he replied that he had not.

He said that he had seen him last about 8.45 last night and at that time he was quite sober. When he saw him, after the suicide, he was in a sitting position in the corner of the cell. The knife was sticking in the jam of the door, and there was blood all over the cell. The deceased had told him once before that he never carried a knife.

Detective Newhall was then recalled. He said that he saw the deceased last about 11 o'clock last night. When asked regarding the probability of the knife being hidden in the cell, he stated that he and Policeman Meharry had found hidden stuff in the cells that had been there for a year or more. Knives, watch chains, cartridges, and such like, had been found. He further stated that he thought he recollected the prisoner using the words: "Couldn't you let me out, I'll get it this time," once, when he passed his cell last night.

John Meharry, constable, was called. He said that he was at the Police Station last night between 12 and 1 o'clock, and he heard the prisoners talking to each other, but could not hear what they said. When he saw him this morning first, he thought he was sleeping, and went out and told Sergeant Adams, who was in the station, that the "prisoner was dead to the world," inferring that he was sleeping very soundly, and it was a

HIS NINETY-NINTH BIRTHDAY

Mr. Robert Hope of Villiers, Otonabee, to-day reached the high-water mark of ninety-nine years. In honour of the occasion his friends at Villiers assembled at his home and presented him with a fine rocking chair.

Mr. Hope is undoubtdely the oldest man in Otonabee. His long residence in the Township makes him familiar with the incidents of pioneer life. He is still in good health for a man of his remarkable years. He has seen Otonabee from a wilderness to its present flourishing condition.

He has been a loyal subject, under six British sovereigns, and has won the respect of all by his strictly honest life. It is to be hoped that he may be blessed with good health the remainder of his years.

ASSISTANCE APPRECIATED BY WIDOW

Mrs. MacNamee Whose Husband Was Drowned in the Otonabee Has Received Subscription Sent Her From Here

SENDS HER THANKS

Word has been received from Mrs. MacNamee of Manchester, Eng., the widow of the unfortunate Canadian General football player, who was drowned in the Otonabee several months ago, that she has received the funds subscribed for her benefit by the deceased's fellow employees in the Canadian General Electric Works, and expressing her heartfelt appreciation of the assistance. She wishes to express her sincere thanks to those who were instrumental in taking up the subscription and to the many people who so generously donated to the fund.

ACROSS THE ATLANTIC IN 25 FOOT YAWL

Special to The Examiner:

GIBRALTAR, JULY 18.—The 25-foot yawl in which Thomas Day sailed from New York on June 10th, arrived here safely with a party of three. They report a pleasant trip across the Atlantic.

If all were to consult our competitors as to our merits there would soon be no Moon College at 282-286 Yonge street, Toronto.

DIED ON EVE OF EXECUTION

Special to The Examiner.

BEAVER, PA., JULY 18.—Chas. Hickman who was to have been hung to-day, for the murder of his wife, in February last, collapsed in his cell during the night and died this morning. He had escaped from jail twice after his conviction and attempted suicide once.

CHIEF RABBI DEAD AT LONDON

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, JULY 18.—Herman Adler, Chief Rabbi of the United Hebrew congregations of the British Empire, died to-day.

CHARGED WITH MURDER

Special to The Examiner.

GRAND JCT., COL., JULY 18.—Two girls, aged 17 and 14, and two boys, aged 15 and 17, are charged with drowning Clark Wolikill, a rich ranchman, on whose ranch they were camping. Two thousand dollars disappeared, and later the man's body was found on the bank of the river.

WAS IN THE FIRE

Roland Sanderson Was Another Peterboro Boy Who Was in the Burned Territory

TELLS HIS EXPERIENCE

Yet another Peterborough resident, in the person of Mr. Roland Sanderson, of Robinson street, has survived the great northern conflagration, and gives the Examiner his experience.

He, with others, was camping in the bush some distance from Porcupine when a teamster, driving a team of horses passed by and told them in a few husky words to "get out" and go to Porcupine, as the fire was close at hand. They did so, but only to be driven out of Porcupine some time later, when the fire reached that place. They then boarded a yacht and came across to Pottsville, making a beeline for home.

Mr. Sanderson saw many sights during his sojourn in that vicinity. Frequently corpses could be seen floating on the lake, while every day a number of dead bodies were brought to the wharf from the woods where numerous coffins awaited them. Gangs of men were sent out for that purpose. No less than 24 canoes were found on the lake with their bottoms to the surface. A carload of dynamite which was situated about a mile from the wharf exploded, and those standing on the wharf were struck to the earth, stunned, while the flames shot up a hundred feet into the air. The fire at this time was said to be about 10 miles long and a darkness blacker than night existed over that distance on account of the smoke.

Mr. Sanderson's cousin, Mr. Walter Rigg, was forced to run two miles through the wood with the fire not a great distance behind him, but he is now safe.

On being asked a question as to food and shelter for the sufferers Mr. Sanderson replied that the government were sending out food, blankets and other supplies. Those who have no money are supplied with tickets in exchange for which they are supplied with food or other necessaries.

DRANK CARBOLIC ACID IN MISTAKE

(Lindsay Post)

What might have been a fatal poisoning accident was averted just in time yesterday afternoon, when the young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Griffis, William street, drank carbolic acid. The poison had been left standing in a window, and when it fell to the floor, the young child, aged one and a half years, picked it up and drank a spoonful and a half. Dr. White was at once summoned, and succeeded in saving the young life after a hard fight, and the child is to-day out of danger.

RENDERED FIRST AID TO INJURED

The presence of mind of Mrs. John McGee of Omemee, at Cobourg, on July 12th, when Mr. Harry Mitchell, the Peterborough man who fell off the train and sustained serious injuries, is noteworthy. Mrs. McGee, seeing he was injured, pushed her way through the crowd, which had quickly gathered and making everyone stand back she used her pocket handkerchief to bind up his wounds. When she saw that the kerchief was not large enough, she took her underskirt and tore it into strips to be used as bandages. When the doctor arrived the patient was ready to be removed to the hospital.

WORK IS NOT GOING AHEAD VERY FAST

Complaint is Being Made at the Rate of Progress Made by the Contractor on the Post Office Addition

SHOULD DO BETTER

The public of Peterborough is watching with a great deal of interest the progress made by the contractors for the addition to the Peterborough post office. If the same rate of progress is made with the balance of the work as has been made with the work since its commencement, and the appropriation has been made by parliament, it is a mathematical problem as to whether it will be completed before the streets of Peterborough are paved or not. The architect in charge should see that no further delay is permitted. The post office work is being done at a disadvantage and the streets are blockaded for a much longer period than there should be any necessity for. The contractors must get a hustle on or give up the contract.

ARE HELD BY GRAND JURY

Special to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, JULY 18—Ethel Conrad and Lillian Graham were held by the Grand Jury on a charge of the attempted murder of W. E. D. Stokes, a millionaire, whom they shot when he was visiting their apartments.

JOHN TAYLOR IS NOT DEAD

Special to The Examiner.

TORONTO, JULY 18.—J. S. Taylor, of White Horse, Yukon, reported dead in the Porcupine fire, is still living. He is in the hospital at New Liskeard.

DON'T BUY BOTTLED PROMISES

Newbro's Herpicide is Bottled Results—Results Are What You Want.

A feeling of uncertainty, a dread of possible disappointment always goes with an "off brand" hair preparation. That is part of the purchase, just as much so as the label on the bottle.

You don't get this with a bottle of Newbro's Herpicide. It is not an experiment. You number among your acquaintances and friends hundreds who have used Herpicide with satisfaction, and you know that you can do the same. The results are always positive, always right.

Any druggist will sell you a one dollar size bottle under an absolute guarantee.

THREE MORE BODIES ARE FOUND IN THE NORTH

PORCUPINE, JULY 18.—The skeleton of Cripple Creek Bennett, a well known character around here, was found on the site of the Empire Theatre, South Porcupine, and was identified by his watch. The only thing left of the theatre was the piano keyboard. Two more bodies were found this morning near the Frederick House, river and the railway.

TORONTO, JULY 18.—A private wire reports the Sull mines, 4 miles north west of Porcupine burned out. John Storer, the manager, left there Sunday, after the big disaster, and his mine was right then. It shows that the fires swept an area larger than was thought.

TORONTO, JULY 18.—The Porcupine relief fund now totals $43,522

OPENED THE REICHRATH

VIENNE, AUSTRIA, JULY 18.—Emperor Francis Joseph opened the Reichrath to-day showing no trace of his recent illness. In his speech from the throne he emphasized the necessity for reorganization of the army to keep pace with the development of other countries.

KING IS INDISPOSED

EDINBURGH, JULY 18.—The king is suffering from a severe sore throat caused by the many speeches which he has made recently and combined with a bad cold caught while travelling. He has, however, filled a number of engagements to-day, including the levee.

NARROW ESCAPE

Gordon (Pete) Campbell Was Caught in the Porcupine Fire But Saved Himself by Seeking Shelter in a Muskeg

A LONG SIEGE

PORCUPINE, JULY 17. — Peter Campbell, of Toronto University Rugby team and Peterborough, was at Camp 5 1-2 on the T. N. O. construction where he is employed by the government as fire ranger. He, with 40 Russians, the French cook and the French cookee, and the French clerk, Le Pointe, took refuge in a sink hole one hundred yards from the camp. No solid bottom has been found for the road there, and a loop in the line has been found necessary. It is a circular muskeg swamp of muck and water about 25 yards in radius, and will bear the weight of logs. Here Campbell and the construction gang covered themselves with wet blankets, availing themselves of the water in the muck. They were imprisoned from three in the afternoon until 11 at night when the fire passed, and they proceeded to camp 5, seven miles down the line.

A NARROW ESCAPE

On Saturday afternoon two boys, carrying a rifle, and accompanied by a dog, proceeded to the outskirts of the town on a little hunting expedition. Having shot a few sparrows and one or two other articles of game, a halt was called under the shade of a large tree. The rifle, which was loaded, was laid on the ground and a jackknife was given a similar position a short distance away. Suddenly the dog, which had been reclining under the tree was attracted by the movements of an object a short distance away. He began to eliminate the daylight which intervened between himself and the object in question, and in so doing stepped on the trigger of the gun, with the result that the gun went off, shattering the knife which was sticking in the ground a short distance away and barely missing one of the boys who was standing nearby.

The Craving For Drink Destroyed.

No more terrible affliction can come to any home than the craving for strong drink of husband and father. We appeal to wives, mothers and sisters to save the husband and father or the brother with Orrine, a scientific treatment.

ORRINE is prepared in two forms, No. 1 secret treatment, a powder, absolutely tasteless and odourless, given secretly in food or drink. ORRINE No. 2, in pill form, is for those who desire to take voluntary treatment. ORRINE costs only $1.00 a box. Write for Free Orrine Booklet (mailed in plain sealed envelope) to ORRINE Co., Orrine Building, Washington, D. C. ORRINE is recommended and is for sale in this city by Wm. Madill.

ON TRIAL TO-DAY

Detective Scott, of the G.T.R., who is investigating the shooting which took place in Hastings on Saturday, during which a G.T.R. section man was shot in the leg by Fred Slade, was in the city to-day.

The Peterborough youth, who was arrested with Slade, was charged with trespassing on the G.T.R. property. He was fined $2 and costs $6.60 in all.

EXCURSIGN A SUCCESS

The annual moonlight excursion of the 57th Regimental Bugle Band was held last night, when a most enjoyable time was spent. The steamer Stoney Lake took the excursionists down the river about nine miles. There were about three hundred on board, and several were left behind, owing to lack of room. There was also a large number at the Street Railway wharf, who wanted to go, but the boat was already crowded, and did not call. There was dancing, splendid music being supplied by Devey's Orchestra. Mr. Archie Moore was floor manager, carrying out his duties very acceptably. The excursion was one of the most successful ones of the season, and the coolness of the evening did not mar the pleasures of the occasion. The Buglers turned out in full strength and contributed their share of the music.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unparalleled."

TUESDAY, JULY 18, 1911

TWO TYPES OF IMPERIALISM.

By the passing, sudden and untimely, of Mr. Robert Meighen, Montreal loses one of the best citizens she has ever had. Coming to Canada young from the north of Ireland, he became a thorough Canadian—able, enterprising, genial, public spirited, and progressive. He was quick to see the possibilities of the St. Lawrence as an artery of commerce, and by acting on his vision he greatly promoted his own remarkable prosperity. Closely related to Sir George Stephen, now Lord Mount Stephen, he naturally became a sharer in the risks and the advantages of the Canadian Pacific railway. Sought after by financial corporations on account of his practical sagacity, he became prominent in the direction of one of our larger banks. Interested early in the west he became the leading spirit in one of the greatest flour mills in the world. Needless to say he was always an advocate of the improvement of the St. Lawrence river for navigation, and also an advocate of the construction of the Georgian Bay canal.

There is a curious parallelism between the sucessful business career of Mr. Meighen and the successful political career of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. Not far apart in age they belonged to the same city and were well known to each other. They were on opposite sides of party politics, but they wrought earnestly, intelligently and persistently to promote the same great end: the prosperity and development of Canada. In one respect they very closely resembled one another; each was in a very except ional sense, the architect of his own fortunes, and in each case success was due quite as much to moral character as it was to business capacity.

There was one marked difference between these two eminent Canadians; they belonged to quite variant types of British imperialism. Mr. Meighen being a Conservative in party politics, was naturally caught by Joseph Chamberlain's idea of uniting Canada to Great Britain by formal ties, both economic and political. It seems quite inexplicable how so clear a thinker, living in the midst of a French-Canadian population, failed to see that such a plan as Chamberlain's would not work, but would produce a crop of French Nationalist demagogues of the Bourassa type; men who have always been in evidence in the Province of Quebec, and who always will be in evidence so long as the Ontario Conservatives encourage their movement for party purposes.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, on the other hand—perhaps because he knew from the inside, the dangerous potentiality of French Nationalism—has always been an advocate of reducing the bond between Canada and the Empire as far as possible, to one of sympathy and unity. It has been his ideal to leave Canada free to manage her own affairs, free also to contribute as best suited herself to the defence of the Empire. Past experience and present indications alike foreshadow complete Canadian solidarity along the Laurier line; the Chamberlain plan would produce constant friction and tend to the ultimate severance of Canada from the Empire.

So much for imperialism as viewed from the Canadian side; Mr. Meighen's attitude was quite as untenable from the British side. He knew well the whole history of the development of free trade in Great Britain; he should have known more than he did of the strength of the free trade tendency. So successful a man of affairs should have been able to comprehend the absolute necessity of permanent freedom of trade to Great Britain. Her present pre-eminence is quite as much financial as it is commercial or industrial. She is the great creditor nation, as she is the great carrier nation. Her accumulated capital fosters industrial enterprise all over the world and her ships carry one-half of all the mercantile cargoes of the world. She earns immense profits on her investments, and equally immense profits on her transportation business. The adoption of a protective system would tend to impair her pre-eminence on both sides and would ultimately put her in the position of a second rate power without cooperating Dominions to help her. Fortunately for both Great Britain and Canada it is the man with the clearer vision who is at the helm of affairs here, and who had a chance at the recent Imperial Conference to make his influence felt at the heart of the Empire.

A Clever Deaf Mute.

Walter Gelkie, painter and engraver, was a deaf mute. He demonstrated such skill in the portraiture of Scotch lowly life that he was known as the Teniers of Scotland. He was born in 1795 and died in 1837.

Dancing.

Among the fine arts dancing is the oldest and most universal.

December and May.

Marriage announcement of Alexander Mitchell, aged 109 years, to Miss Jane Hammond, sixteen years old, both of Virginia, was published Dec. 25, 1797.

Our First Yacht Club.

The first yacht club of the United States was founded in 1844. Its boathouse was erected in 1845 on the North river near Hoboken. In the same year the first regatta was held in New York bay.

Abused the Bachelors.

At certain ancient feasts bachelors were exposed to public scorn and were led round the market places amid the derisive shouts of the populace.

The Cotillion.

Taxed the Bachelors.

Augustus, Roman emperor, compelled bachelors to pay extra and special taxes, and they were made incapable of acquiring legacies and devises of real estate by will, except from their nearest kinsfolk.

The Stars and Stripes.

The original Continental flag was adopted Jan. 2, 1776. It had thirteen stripes and the union of the crosses of St. George and St. Andrew. The birth of the United States flag occurred on June 14, 1777, congress then resolving "that the flag of the thirteen united colonies be thirteen stripes, alternating red and white, and the union be thirteen stars, white in a blue field, representing a new constellation."

First Ocean Steamer.

The first ocean steamer was the Savannah, which began its initial voyage across the Atlantic from Savannah, Ga., to Liverpool, England, on May 24, 1819. Both steam and sails were used.

Witches and Magpies.

Witches like the shapes of magpies best in Russia. Rustics there often gibbet a dead magpie to scare away witches from stables and cow sheds.

Armenian Girls.

When an Armenian girl attains the age of seventeen and is not engaged to be married she has to undergo a strange punishment for her lack of attractions. For three days she has to fast, and then for twenty-four hours her food consists of salt fish, and she is allowed nothing to quench her thirst.

Bearded Presidents.

Lincoln was the first president to wear a full beard.

The Cuckoo's Oracles.

The cuckoo's oracles were believed by the ancient Poles to be actually given by the great god Zywie, the life giver, who transformed himself into that bird with the object of giving his oracular utterances.

Library Foundation.

The first library foundation in America was in 1621 at Henrico college, which was organized by the colonists of Jamestown, Va.

Marriage in Korea.

In Korea marriage is even more important and essential for a man than it is for a woman, as until a man be wed he is a being of no account. If a father has not selected wives for his sons ere they reach the age of twenty he is considered worthless and neglectful.

Birth of Hawaii.

Hawaiians believed that their island was created by the bursting of an egg which had been laid on the surface of the ocean by a bird of great size.

Bread Pudding.

When preparing an old fashioned bread pudding beat the yolks and whites separately, adding the whites last of all just before baking. Fold them through the pudding. This makes it light and more spongy than usual and gives a more attractive crust.

Ancient Glass Beads.

Necklaces of glass beads, imitating precious gems in color and beauty, have been found on mummies more than 3,000 years old.

Glass Eyes.

Glass eyes are made principally in Lauscha, a German town twenty miles from Coburg. The trade is a flourishing one, with constant improvements of value, though in minor details. As in many occupations in Europe, the artisans hand down their acquired knowledge and skill to younger members of the same family.

THE CORONATION REVIEW.

Their Majesties Will Inspect a Record Fleet at Spithead.

The fleet which will assemble at Spithead for the coronation naval review on June 24 will establish a record. The number of British warships present will be 173 or 174, made up as follows:—

Battleships	36
Armored cruisers	35
Protected cruisers	7
Destroyers	64
Torpedo-boats	12
Submarines	8
Attached ships	11 or 12

For Queen Victoria's Diamond Jubilee Review 165 warships of all classes were assembled; on July 31, 1909, King Edward reviewed 150 ships at Spithead.

In point of fighting power the fleet which the King will inspect next month will, of course, far outweigh anything ever before seen. There will be eight battleships, and four cruisers of the Dreadnought type, varying in displacement from 17,250 to 19,900 tons each.

The fleet will not be "instantly ready" as regards all its units. A large number of ships will be drawn from the Third Division of the Home Fleet, which is in reserve, but it is expected that these ships will have their crews brought up to full complement for the review and the manoeuvres which are to follow.

The senior naval officer will be Admiral Sir Arthur Moore, commander-in-chief at Portsmouth, who will take the Dreadnought as his flagship. Admiral Sir Francis Bridgeman, commander-in-chief of the Home Fleet, will fly his flag in the Neptune, and other prominent officers present will be Vice-Admiral Sir G. A. Callaghan, commanding the Second Division of the Home Fleet (King Edward VII.), Vice-Admiral Prince Louis of Battenberg, commanding the Third Division (Africa), Vice-Admiral Sir J. R. Jellicoe, commanding the Atlantic Fleet (Prince of Wales), Rear-Admiral Lewis Bayly, First Cruiser Squadron (Indomitable), and Rear-Admiral Sir George Warrender, Second Cruiser Squadron (Shannon).

About twenty foreign ships will be present.

If the arrangements that were made for the 1902 review be followed the British armored ships will be moored in two long lines. On the onshore side there will be two or perhaps three lines of smaller craft—destroyers, torpedo-boats, and submarines—and on the Isle of Wight side the foreign vessels will be moored in a single line with the royal yacht in the centre.

Won Bride In Africa.

That the Marchioness of Winchester recently launched at Portsmouth the greatest and most powerful battleship in the world, the Orion, will be news still green in the memory of many readers; but perhaps the appended interesting particulars concerning the marchioness and her husband are not generally known. Eighteen years have passed since the premier marquis of England made the handsome young widow of Mr. Samuel Garnett his bride. "Tim," as his lordship is affectionately known to his friends, went to South Africa to shoot big game, and it was there he secured the triumph he did not expect—the heart of Mrs. Garnett, who happened to be in Africa at the time. Both the marquis and marchioness are passionately fond of sport. They ride well to hounds, and, by the way, it was Lady Wincheater who, when in Ireland, set the fashion of scarlet hunting jackets. In addition to being England's premier marquis, Lord Winchester is hereditary bearer of the Cup of Maintenance and Lord-Lieutenant of Hampshire. To the management of his estate in this county he is particularly devoted, and is especially keen on the subject of tree planting.

A Princess' Charity.

The Princess Louise, Duchess of Argyll, has issued an appeal on behalf of the Maternity Charity and District Nurses' Home, Howard's Road, Plaistow. The work of the charity, which extends over the borough of West Ham, East Ham and Barking, is twofold. It provides nursing in the people's own homes and trains women of every class in the various branches of nursing. The neighborhood, which is the centre of Dock labor, is extremely poor, and very unhealthy, most of it being below the level of high water. In addition to their ordinary duties, the nurses endeavor to bring some measure of comfort into the homes of these poor people, and instil into their minds the necessity for cleanliness. In this appeal, the sum of two thousand five hundred pounds is asked for, to put the finances of the charity straight, and if this is not speedily forthcoming, the work will have to be curtailed, which would be a great calamity for the district.

The King's Oldest Subject.

Mrs. Mary King, of Louth, Lincolnshire, claims to be the oldest subject of King George. She is in her 105th year, and is the oldest old age pensioner. Her son and her son's wife are also old age pensioners, and the three reside in the same house. The old lady retains her faculties remarkably well, and, says The Leader, when she is wheeled about the streets converses with her many friends. She is proud to possess a congratulatory telegram from the late King.

Thirty Pound Nugget.

At Ballarat, Australia, has been found a nugget of gold weighing a little less than thirty pounds, and experts say it will turn out at least fifteen pounds of pure gold.

Its Size.

Little Fred was telling his father about a peculiar stone he had found while at play in the back yard.

"How big was it?" asked his father.

Doomed to Single State.

There are now about 1,250,000 more females than males in England and Wales.

The Rainbow.

Bohemian peasants hold it to be unlucky to walk under a rainbow because the rain that descends through the bow blights all it falls upon.

The Bowery.

New York's celebrated Bowery was in the olden days known as the Bouwerie lane, running between bouweries, or farms.

Jerusalem's Wall.

Islands of the World.

The islands of the world have a total length of more than seventeen times the circumference of the earth at the equator.

Carborundum.

Transparent carborundum crystals are now made of high luster and refractive power. Although they resemble diamonds in general appearance, they are so brittle that they cannot be cut and polished. If that defect is overcome there is said to be no reason why the carborundum gem should not make its appearance.

Golf in Scotland.

It is uncertain when golf, which originated in Scotland, was first practiced in that country, but the game was played by all classes there to a considerable extent in 1425.

Mexico and the United States.

Treaty of peace between the United States and Mexico was signed Feb. 2, 1848. By its terms all the territory north of the Rio Grande and New Mexico and California were ceded to this country for $15,000,000. Debts due from Mexico to American citizens were assumed by the United States.

Bread in Austria.

Avon Rivers.

There are the Upper Avon, known as the Warwickshire or Shakespeare Avon; the Lower or Bristol Avon, on which is Bath, and the East or Hampshire Avon, on which is Salisbury. The first two flow into the Severn, the last into the English channel at Christchurch harbor.

The Silver Dollar.

In 1785 the federal congress adopted the silver dollar as our currency basis on a decimal system, as exemplified in the Spanish milled dollar or piece of eight shillings.

Copper Money.

Norway and Sweden.

The cultivated area of Norway is only about 2,750,000 acres, or 2.4 per cent of the total surface of the country, while the cultured area of Sweden is 12,500,000 acres.

Church Edifices.

Christian church edifices were first erected early in the third century. Previous to that period Christians worshiped in private houses and sequestered places.

Spitting For Luck.

Spitting for luck's sake was of considerable importance among the ancients. Greeks spit three times into their bosoms at the sight of a madman or one troubled with epileptic fits in order to ward off such maladies.

Built of Grindstones.

Pilgrims and Puritans.

The pilgrims were a body of English nonconformists who emigrated from Holland and settled Plymouth colony in 1620. The Puritans were a body of nonseparatist religious reformers from England who in 1629-30 founded and settled the Massachusetts Bay Colony. The two bodies united in 1692 under the name of Massachusetts.

Olympia Games.

Olympic games were inaugurated 1453 B. C.

Women in Trousers.

The women of Champery, the well known health resort in Switzerland, have from time immemorial worn honest masculine trousers. They wear them not to attract attention to themselves, but simply for the sake of convenience, for they have to perform tasks which need freedom of the nether limbs.

Banks of Deposit.

Banks for the deposit of money were in existence in the year 86.

Odometers.

Odometers, instruments for determining distances passed over in traveling, were employed by the Romans on their vehicles as early as 90 B. C.

Rare Ornithological Curios.

The catalogue of the Museum Tradescantianum, or Tradescant's museum, published in England in the year 1656, makes mention of many rare ornithological curios owned or left on deposit in that institution. Among the dozens listed three are especially interesting—viz, "two feathers from the tayle of a phoenix," "Master egg laid by a mayle barayard fowle" and "the claw of the bird rec, whe, as authors report, is able to trusse an elephant."

No Worse Than Usual.

Belshazzar read, "Mene, mene, tekel upharsin."

"Probably my stenographer's translation of 'Your favor of even date received,'" he cried.

Herewith he continued the feast.—New York Times.

The wife remarked that she at last
Was strong for conservation.
The husband said, "Remember that When making conversation."

Clean Streets.

Clean streets and healthy people usually are found in the same city.—Fort Wayne News.

Pile high the rubbish for the clean-up man and you will lessen the number of flies this summer.—Scranton Tribune.

Above all, a city must be clean. If streets and alleyways are not cared for properly all efforts to beautify a city will be in vain.—Boston Globe.

Congressional Cuts.

It is feared that voters will not find the garden seeds distributed by new members any more reliable than those sent around by the old timers.—Washington Star.

Our idea of carrying optimism too far is to hope that your representative in congress will accomplish all he says he's going to when he takes the train for Washington.—Ohio State Journal.

German Gleanings.

The latest fashion prevailing among the women of the Berlin aristocracy is to have their portraits painted while they are asleep.

The servant girls of Berlin are aggrieved by the new tax on amusements, for it makes them pay a higher price of admission at the dance halls.

The German war authorities have duplicates of all bridges in France. If, in case of war, any of these bridges were destroyed, they could be replaced by the German army in six hours.

A Costly Pauper.

After being an inmate of the workhouse seventy-four years, a man who died recently at Steyning at the age of seventy-six had cost the guardians $5,500.

FAST BOWMANVILLE TEAM HERE ON SATURDAY FOR MIDLAND LEAGUE GAME

There is another treat for Peterborough baseball fans on Saturday when the Bowmanville and Peterborough teams will clash at Riverside Park in a Midland League game. The last two games between these two teams have been worth going miles to see. Peterborough beat Bowmanville here on Coronation Day by 6 to 5, and in the return game at Bowmanville the Goodyear team were given the verdict by a 7 to 5 score, so that the teams are even on the series. Each is dead anxious to win Saturday's game, and it should be a battle royal from the drop of the hat. The Rubber men will have Beith on the slab again Saturday and the Petes say they have got the big fellow's number now and will make things interesting for him. At that he has had the jump on Peterborough in both games and may come back for the third. Bowmanville will have their strongest team in action and will work their heads off to land the big end of the score. It is the last home appearance of the Petes for several weeks, so that the fans should not miss this contest, which should be as cause and exciting as Saturday's hard fight with Belleville. Gonter will likely catch on Saturday, with Craig playing second in place of Jimmy O'Hearne, who is away on his vacation.

The Local Tennis Players Visited Omemee Saturday

On Saturday afternoon six members of the City Lawn Tennis Association journeyed to Omemee to match strength with the racquet artists of that town. Ideal weather, convenient and charming grounds, and the delightful entertainment provided, including a luncheon of unusual dainties, combined to make the day one of pure pleasure. Following are the results of the different events:

Singles—
Richardson, Peterborough, beat Dr. Sutton.
Hodgetts, Omemee, beat Dennison.
Matthews, Peterborough, beat Rev. Earle.
Dr. Wood, Omemee, beat Mr. Butler.
Mr. Henderson of Peterborough, beat J. Stephenson.
Mr. Gaele of Peterborough beat W. Stephenson.

Doubles—
Messrs. Richardson and Henderson of Peterborough, beat Dr. Sutton and T. Stephenson.
Messrs. Gaele and Butler of Peterborough, beat Dr. Wood and Rev. Earle.
Messrs. Dennison and Mathews of Peterborough, beat Messrs. Hodgetts and Stephenson.

World's Rowing Champ Has Pugilistic Hopes

The failure of Bill Lang has in no way damped the ardour of Australians in their search for a "White Hope," and at last they believe they have discovered a man who has more than an outside chance of bringing back the world's championship. The new aspirant is Dick Arnst, champion sculler of the world. For some time past the Australian sporting journals have been hinting at the possibility of the burly New Zealander forsaking the outriggers in favour of the ring, and a few days before leaving Australia, a correspondent writes: "I ascertained that the favourable reception generally given to the suggestion that he should take up boxing had made Arnst reconsider his decision. From the one most concerned I received an invitation to be present at his tryout with an American boxer of note. It was supposed to be Arnst's first business effort with the gloves, but even remembering the great disparity in weight and strength in favour of the New Zealander, it was soon apparent that he had been paying more than passing attention to the sport. He did not shape like a novice, but made the most of his strength and weight.

BASEBALL

The Petes have three games away from home in a row after Saturday's home game with Bowmanville. On Saturday, July 29th they will play in Cobourg, on Saturday, August 5th in Bowmanville and on Wednesday, Aug. 16 in Belleville. Saturday the 12th has been left an open date on account of the big soccer game in the Ontario championship series between the Barcas of Toronto and the local C.G.E. team.

The records of the Peterborough Midland League team for the season so far has been as follows:
Peterborough 31, Cobourg 9.
Peterborough 14, Port Hope 8.
Peterborough 15, Cobourg 5.
Peterborough 15, Port Hope 0.
Peterborough 6, Bowmanville 5.
Peterborough 5, Bowmanville 7.
Peterborough 3, Belleville 4.
Total, Peterborough 93, opponents 38
The pitchers' records are: Quinlan won 4, lost 1; Cresswell won 1, lost 0, Rahmel won 0, lost 1.

The Grays beat Jersey City Sunday by 21 to 6. Doescher and Mason were batted out of the box. May 3 Toronto beat Newark 22 to 2 at Newark.

Dubuc's win on Saturday was the sixth straight win for that pitcher.

Miller of Montreal made three singles and a home run on Sunday.

It is said that Joe McGinnity will sell his Newark club, plant and franchise to Frank Mihlon, a Newark sporting promoter, for $50,000. McGinnity paid $25,000 for the club and spent $25,000 more on new stands, so that he will get his money back on the deal.

The latest figures show that Ty Cobb leads both major leagues in hitting, base-running, base-stealing, hits for extra bases and scoring runs.

Draw near and listen: Ty Cobb didn't break into the summary of Sunday's game for a singe startling act and got only one miserable single. Which is more to be remarked about than if he had won the game by his individual playing.

Curry, a trolley league twirler, passed eleven Athletics in six innings, while Indian Bender struck out ten men, Philadelphia winning by 8 to 4.

This young Mr. Gregg of the Naps can't lose for winning. And please see how the Nap-less Naps have been mounting in the percentage "col-yum."

Starting with the Rochester Club today the Leafs will play for two solid weeks on the Island grounds. Providence, Baltimore, and Jersey City following in order. Then the team goes away for a week's trip to Newark and Jersey City returning here with the former club to play Civic Holiday and the following days. Another ten days' trip to Baltimore and Providence and then the team comes home again and plays right through at the Island until Labour Day.

DAMES AND DAUGHTERS.

Mrs. Roswell R. Hoes, wife of a chaplain in the United States navy, has an umbrella that was presented to Lafayette by the city of Boston in 1824.

Mrs. Jessie Waterhouse was elected president of the Women's Association of Retail Druggists at the recent annual convention which was held in Boston.

Mme. Curie, codiscoverer with her late husband of radium, has been invited to come from Paris to America next year for the purpose of taking part in the international chemical congress which is to be held in Washington.

Mrs. Atlee Pomerene, wife of the Democratic senator from Ohio, is a clever water color artist. She has made several dainty sketches of the Rock creek section near Washington, and her drawing rooms are filled with her own paintings. Mrs. Pomerene also is skillful with her needle.

Miss Annie S. Peck, the woman mountain climber, is off on another expedition in search of the apex of the continent. Amid the unknown summits of the Andes she hopes to locate a mountain top higher than Aconcagua, on the border of Argentine and Chile, whose 22,800 feet represent the greatest elevation yet discovered in North and South America.

Pen, Chisel and Brush.

Augustus Thomas, the playwright, was formerly a page boy in the Forty-first congress.

Alphonse Legros, painter, sculptor, etcher and medalist, who has just celebrated his seventy-fourth birthday, is a naturalized Englishman. He was born at Dijon, France, in 1837.

Gari Melchers, who has received more European honors than any other American painter, is a native of Detroit. Whistler and Sargent were the only two other Americans to share with him the blue ribbon of art in Paris.

Woman's World.

According to Mr. Oppenheim, the English novelist, the ideal woman does not exist, but what's the use of his saying that to a man who's married to her?—Boston Globe.

BERLIN PREACHER CRITICIZES HOBBLE SKIRTS AND "RATS"

BERLIN, ONT., JULY 17.—In the course of a sermon to young women at the United Brethren church, Rev. S. H. Swarts took occasion to score extremes in women's gowns and hats, and the address created quite a sensation. Several young women left the church during the sermon, directly following the preacher's remarks about "rats." He referred to St. Paul's remarks about hair dressing, and wondered what the apostle would say if he could see the enormous "rats" women wore in their heads nowadays. The hobble skirt received attention, and, as to the other sensation in skirts, now considered imminent, the speaker thought the first woman appearing on the Berlin streets so attired, should be arrested.

FOUND MONEY HIDDEN BY GAYNOR AND GREENE

Special to The Examiner

Washington, July 17.—Three-quarters of a million dollars have been recovered from the concealed assets of Gaynor and Greene, who defrauded the government out of $2,000,000 in Savannah harbor dredging contracts in 1897. This was developed by enquiries at the Department of Justice.

E. I. Johnson, an expert accountant, and United States District Attorney Marion Erwin of Savannah, Ga., are responsible for he recovery. They have been at work digging up the assets of the defaulters almost from the time the frauds were discovered. Most of the funds recovered were in bonds and stock. More than $300,000 was in cash. These assets were found in New York, Philadelphia, Chicago and Denver. Some bonds were located in Paris, but they could not be recovered.

Johnson and Attorney Erwin have been searching for these assets for twelve years. During that time their combined compensation and expenses amounted to about $150,000. Within the last year more than $100,000 in cash has been recovered. It is expected that other assets of the defaulters will be found.

THE VITAL SPARK OF LIFE IS PHOTOGRAPHED

Special to The Examiner:

Detroit, Mich., July 17.—The flight of the vital spark has been witnessed, according to a statement made by Dr. Patrick S. O'Donnell of Chicago, an X-ray expert, who has been following experiments made by Dr. W. J. Kilner of London, Eng.

Some time ago using a chemicalised film seated between two thin strips of glass, Dr. O'Donnell gave a demonstration to twenty physicians of the "aura," or electrical radiation of living bodies, four young women being used as subjects. The aura developed as a strong ray of light surrounding the entire form of the subject.

"Last night," said Dr. O'Donnell, "in the presence of several physicians in Mercy Hospital, I tried the experiment on a dying man. He was rapidly sinking. Suddenly the attending physician announced that the man was dead. The aura began to spread from the body and presently disappeared. Further observation of the corpse revealed no sign of the aura.

"We do not claim that the light is the soul or spirit. In fact no one seems to know what it is. In my opinion, however, it is some sort of radio-activity made visible by the use of the chemicalised film. My experiments, however, seem to prove that it is the animating power or current of life of human beings."

CONDITIONS OF THE GREAT ENGLISH AVIATION CONTEST--NO ONE MAY FINISH

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, JULY 17.—While the conquest of the air has come to be so much a matter of course that flying competitions fail to excite a fraction of the interest that individual exploits did a year ago, England is to witness this week one of the most ambitious attempts at long-distance aeroplaning yet seen. The event will be a circuit of the Island over a course of 1010 miles for a prize of $50,000, offered by the Daily Mail.

Charles T. Weymann, who won the International Aviation Cup at Eastchurch on July 1st is the only American entrant, while Europe will be represented by Beaumont, the winner of the recent European circuit competition; Vedrines who fininshed first in the Paris to Madrid race, and others. Valentine, the Englishman, who competed in the European circuit, will also compete.

The course to be flown over comprises fourteen sections, which range from 20 to 182 miles in length.

The race will be started next Saturday, July 23, at Brooklands, but the day's task is only a sort of tuning up flight for twenty miles to Hendon, in the northwest of London, where the competitors will rest over Sunday. On Monday, at four in the morning they will start on the second stage of 343 miles, from Hendon to Edinburgh. En route they will halt, after 188 miles, at Harrow Gate, for another 68 miles, at Newcastle, thence over a flight of 93 miles to the Scottish capital.

The third stage will be from Edinburgh across Scotland to Glasgow, and thence to Bristol, altogether 385 miles, with stops at Stirling (31 miles) Glasgow (22 miles), Carlisle (86 miles), Manchester (103 miles), Bristol (141 miles).

The fourth stage is from Bristol to Brighton, a distance of 234 miles. On this stage stops are arranged for Exeter (65 miles), and Salisbury (83 miles), the final stage to Brighton being 76 miles. And lastly a short flight of forty miles will be made from Brighton to the starting point at the Brooklands motor racing field.

Will One of Them Finish?

Whether any of the competitors will complete the race is doubtful. Conditions have been established which, in the opinion of experts who have observed previous competitions are almost impossible of fulfillment. More depends upon the stability of the machines than had been required in any previous race. The flying men must do the circuit of over one thousand miles practically with their machines intact. The most important parts of each machine are to be marked, and these parts must be kept together throughout the course.

The few men who finished in the recent European circuit changed their aeroplanes at some stage of the journey, or made substitutes of the most important parts, so that they returned to France with almost entirely new machines. Renaud, who carried a passenger on his biplane throughout the European circuit, was the only one who whose machine had not suffered substitutions of important parts.

The crucial stage of the journey, in the opinion of the airmen, will be the flight northward from Harrow Gate to Edinburgh. The country is so uneven, and the air currents so troublesome in this region, that it will be no surprise if the race gets its quietus along this stretch.

"DAWN" SANK

The tug "Dawn" belonging to the Bishop and Buchanan Company sank at Young's Point just above the lock on Saturday and was raised yesterday after considerable difficulty. The "Dawn" was leaking badly and unexpectedly took a plunge to the bottom.

Orillia Has Landed Another New Industry

ORILLIA, JULY 17.—The by-law voted on to-day to raise by debentures eighty thousand dollars for an extension of the electric power plant was carried by a vote of 603 for and 25 against. Another large industry will be immediately established at Orillia. The Perrin Plow Company of Smith's Falls, the West Lorne Wagon Company, West Lorne, the Tudhope Knox Co., Orillia, and the Tudhope, Anderson Company, Winnipeg, have formed a merger, and will go extensively into the manufacture of implements and waggons for the western trade. The town has given a thirty-acre site on lower West street, and the contract has been let for the erection of a two-storey brick building, 80 by 200 feet.

The National Hardware Company, which manufactures door locks, is putting up a brick addition, costing $16,000. Ayres & Hewitt are erecting a new clothing factory, and the Canada Refining & Smelting Company is erecting buildings which will double its capacity.

RELIEF IS STILL NEEDED IN PORCUPINE DISTRICT, CONDITIONS AS THEY ARE NOW

Special to The Examiner:

GOLDEN CITY, JULY 17.—The official list of the forest fire victims issued here at present includes 62 names, with 75 missing. A number of the latter, however, are sure to be alive. There have been only seven bodies taken out of Porcupine Lake up to date. Some people think there will be no more. Others say there will be at least thirty. At any rate, however, there will be nothing like the 100 or more which rumour at first announced to be drowned.

Cash Badly Needed.

The crying need of Porcupine to-day is cash. Food is required, too, but that is coming every day. No money, however, has arrived, and the members of the relief committee are being seriously hampered in their work.

One of the members of the Committee, C. A. Foster, of Haileybury, one of the most successful mining men in the country, was most emphatic in his statement to The Star.

"There are dead men whom we cannot bury, there are bodies which we cannot ship, simply because we haven't enough money. We hear about the thousands of dollars that are being subscribed in Toronto, and elsewhere, and what we want to know is, "Where is the money?" You will do good service if you make it plain to the south that we must have actual cash here right away. We are glad to have the food, and we will need more, but when the people of Ontario have been kind enough to subscribe so much money, we feel that it is only right for us to have some of it here.

"It costs a great deal to bury people up here. Even to dig trenches for the bodies takes money, for Italians have to be hired. It costs a lot more to bring bodies into Golden City, buy caskets, and ship the bodies out. If for no other reason, the memory of the dead makes it necessary for us to have cash here, and that right away.

"There are many other uses for the money, too. Until we can build roads to Pottsville and South Porcupine, there can be no start in the work of reconstruction. For the present, however, the cryin gneed is money for the care of the dead."

Raided Their Own Pockets.

Other mebmers of the committee corroborated the statements of Mr. Foster. They included T. J. Flynn, the well-known mining engineer; A. E. D. Bruce, the Mining Recorder, and Arthur Slaght, lawyer, of Haileybury. They were all agreed that money was the first need.

"The commitee is composed of responsible men," said an informant of The Star, "and, of course, you can rely absolutely on what they say. I know that they themselves have paid out thousands of dollars of their own money since the disaster, but it is not fair to ask them to shoulder too much of the burden."

Only two names have been added to the death list. They are Didelo Dipro an Italian, who died in Liskeard Hospital after being taken from Porcupine and Arthur Johnson. The latter was found near Trout Creek. When he saw the fire approaching him, he took poison to commit suicide rather than be burned alive. In some way the fire did not reach him and if he had not taken the poison, he would have been alive to-day. As it is, he lived for some time, but the poison finally took its inevitable effect.

Nicholson Body Mutilated.

The bodies of Stan. Nicholson, of Guelph, and Mervan Strange, barber, of South Porcupine, were recovered from the lake on Saturday. Nicholson's body was badly mangled, and apparently had been struck by the screw of a gasoline launch. The body will be sent down from here on Monday morning, and will reach Toronto on Tuesday.

Strange's body could not be identified for a long time, until his old father happened to be down at the wharf and discovered it lying in the launch. The poor man was nearly prostrated with grief. His son had been reported missing, but the father had been hoping against hope that he might have escaped.

Bank Hit Hard.

The banks have been hit hard by the fire disaster. All through the district the branches have been destroyed. Golden City is the only place which has banking facilities, except Cochrane, where the Imperial Bank was saved.

BANK OF OTTAWA, South Porcupine and Cochrane.

IMPERIAL BANK,—South Porcupine.

BANK OF COMMERCE. — South Porcupine and Potsville.

TRADERS' BANK. — South Porcupine, Potsville and Aura Lake.

The last bank also lost their building at Kelso. The staff had been withdrawn a few days before.

Explosion Made a Big Hole.

A carload of provisions and coffins were sent into the Dome to-day. They could not be put through before, owing to the break in the T. and N. O. line, where the car of dynamite blew up during the fire. Not a trace of the car, not a single piece, has been found. The hole torn up was twenty feet deep, filled with water. A loop was built around it, and the cars went out to-day. The supplies were dumped off at Dome Landing, about a mile from the mine, and were carried the rest of the distance.

"832 WESTMINSTER."

King George's Home Has Lots of 'Phones.

Although His Majesty's telephone number, "832 Westminster," can be duly rung up by any of his subjects, it does not follow that they will be able to speak to King George direct. As a matter of fact, the arrangements in the palace make it impossible for anyone to casually call up His Majesty for a friendly chat. As the writer of an interesting article on the telephone at Buckingham Palace, published in The Morning Leader, however, remarks, all the high functionaries, from Lord Knollys upwards to say nothing of minor officials and servants, are in touch with His Majesty, who can speak to them in their own apartments or private residences.

Every lady and gentleman of the Royal Household, every functionary, can be reached in a twinkling. Then there are, of course, private lines to Marlborough House, St. James' Palace, and York House. Even the schoolroom of Buckingham Palace is "on the wire."

There are three fifty-line switchboards in Buckingham Palace. Two are used for the day service and one for night purposes, and during the twenty-four hours the staff works in sections. The transfer of the lines from the day to the night service is accomplished by means of a change-over switch, either in the palace post-office or the palace itself.

The King possesses an extension from the switchboard to his private apartments, and, in addition, His Majesty has a private exchange line to his own apartments. This is used for special communications of a private nature in connection with state affairs.

Queen Mary has a private line and also an exchange line. The latter facility Princess Mary also enjoys, she can converse with her parents or with the occupants of the schoolroom. Miss Knollys has a telephone in her sitting-room, from which she can converse with Queen Mary or Queen Alexandra.

Coronation Carpet.

Scotland is having the honor of making the carpets which will cover the floor of Westminster Abbey for the coronation, and the looms of a great carpet factory in Glasgow are busily engaged upon the important task. The floor covering has from earliest times been a specific feature in the preparations for the stately ceremony, and in the Liber Regalis prepared for Richard II. a copy of which is in the safekeeping of the Deane of Westminster, there is a definite order as to the "Bay Cloth or Barrel" to be placed under the King's feet as he goeth." At all the later coronations the carpet has been of a rich and beautiful character, with as lustrous a surface as possible, and from the quantities needed in the more recent times it is one of the first requirements to be set in hand. The new carpet will follow very closely upon the lines of that ordered for King Edward's crowning. Then as now the color was a singularly soft, rich blue. The design was symbolical and embodied the badge and motto of the Order of the Garter and the Tudor rose, with the thistle, shamrock, and lotus connected with festoons of bay leaves and ribbons. These were effectively shown in a rather lighter shade of color and the whole formed an admirable background to the magnificence of the state robes, the ecclesiastical vestments, the crimson of the peeresses' dresses, and the military and diplomatic uniforms.

The Shadchan.

East of Aldgate, in London's Ghetto, where the descendants of Pharaoh's brickmakers dwell, is where the shadchan — the Jewish matrimonial agent — is to be found.

The name denotes a "bringing together," and it is the Shadchan who initiates the whole affair. He says to a young man, "You ought to marry. Now, I know the very girl. Her beauty—ah!—and her dowry—h'm!" The Shadchan's fee, you see, is generally calculated upon the dowry.

This strange, decaying occupation is an ancient one. Hebrew literature of the thirteenth and fourteenth century refers to the Shadchan and his legal claim to remuneration, which was always higher when the couple lived more than ten miles apart. Perhaps the extra fee was for shoe-leather.

Amongst old-fashioned Jews, the world over, marriages are still brought about by the Shadchan, who has figured as a witness in a breach of promise case before now, when the charms or the dowry, or both, have proved illusory, or exaggerated.

George Hope Commits Suicide

few minutes after that that the Sergeant found him.

Sergt. Adams was recalled, and stated that he released the other prisoner last night about 12.10, and he would have an opportunity of passing a knife to Hope.

Dr. McPherson was called. He said he was called about 5.30, and found the deceased as before stated, in a sitting position and the body was cold. He could not say how long he had been dead, but presumably over an hour, and probably a lot longer. He did not examine the throat, and could not say as to whether the wound there was the cause of death. There was a clot of blood over the eye, but he thought there was no wound there.

Coroner Dr. Greer stated that there was no doubt but that the deceased died as a result of hemmorhage from the wound in the neck, and it was for the jury to say whether there should be a post mortem examination.

The Jury returned, after a brief deliberation, with the following verdict:

"The finding of the Jury is that the deceased George Hope came to his death by his own hands, and that we do not consider a post mortem would disclose any more facts than we have already seen. We do not think that any blame can be attached to any person or persons."

Later the body was removed to Belleghem's undertaking establishment, and prepared for burial.

The funeral notice appears elsewhere in these columns.

LETTER OF CONDOLENCE

Mr. Albert Webster, Worshipful Master of Enniskillen, L.O.L., has received the following letter of condolence from the lodge in connection with his recent bereavement:

To Bro. Albert Webster, W.M., of Enniskillen L.O.L., No. 522—

We, the members of the said lodge, wish to convey to you our sincere sympathy in the loss you have sustained by the death of your youngest daughter Daisy.

We would willingly bear a part of your burden, and share the grief which now fills your home with sorrow. We pray that the wise God who doeth all things well, will lessen your sorrow by filling your heart with a strong desire for a glorious re-union where parting shall be no more.

We realize how vain are words to bring comfort, but we trust you will seek consolation from Him who alone can give. While we know that death is the lot of all and sooner or later those who are dear to us will be taken away from us, yet we feel the blow heavily when it comes.

We pray that His ever loving Providence may watch over you and your beloved wife and daughter. The blessings of many years till in the bye and bye we shall meet to part no more.

Signed on behalf of the members of L.O.L. No. 522.

The office of Commissioner of Police—the title of the chief of the force—is quite an important one. Before the Royal processions Sir Edward Henry, the present commissioner, rode up and down the route with even more show than Lord Kitchener, who was in command of the military arrangements of the day. Despite the fact that most of the constables were on duty for stretches of longer than twelve hours, the entire police arrangements were perfect throughout the recent festivities.

FEEDING THE POLICE

A great deal of amusement was created over the arrangements for feeding the police on duty at the Coronation. Each man was provided by the authorities before he went on duty with a slab of plain chocolate, three or four patent "concentrated nutritive" biscuits, and a box of special thirst quenching tablets. The comments on this gift by the men were mordant.

"Dog bite 'em!" wrathfully exclaimed a huge red-faced policeman in the crowd. "Do they think we're a lot of kids? Wish they choked with it."

Then he exhibited a huge package of meat sandwiches, a veal and ham pie and other condiments from his deep pockets, including a great bottle of cold tea. "That's food," he roared, and took a huge bite out of the pie.

The walk in Havelock this year was one of the largest ever held in the village. The weather was all that could be desired and everybody took advantage of it and attended the glorious 12th of July celebration. The village was appropriately decorated and adorned for the occasion. The parade took place at 1.30 in the afternoon, headed by the Norwood band, who supplied music for the day, and who are worthy of much appreciation for the many selections rendered. Following are some of the lodges which took part in the parade: Donegal, Hastings, Norwood, Warsaw, North Dummer, South Dummer, Pollmont, Ennismore, Marmora, Cordova and Havelock. Speeches were made in the park by the following speakers: Hon. J. R. Stratton, of Peterborough, J. A. Sexsmith, M.P., of Preneveau, Jas. A. Thompson, M.P.P., of town, Mr. Fulcher of Marmora and the resident clergy.

Miss Jean McPhee, graduate Household Science, McDonald Institute, Guelph, and the Boston Cooking School, will give a grand baking exhibition in the town hall, Havelock, for one week, commencing Monday, July 17th and ending July 22nd. Pleasant afternoon tea served. Everything absolutely free.

Mrs. Wm. Cole and family who have been the guests of relatives in town the past three weeks, returned to their home at West Toronto on Saturday last.

Mrs. Holcombe and son Stanley visited friends in Peterborough on Fri-

THIS YEAR'S WHEAT CROP WILL BE THE LARGEST IN THE HISTORY OF CANADA — FIFTY THOUSAND MEN REQUIRED FOR THE HARVEST.

The wheat crop of 1911 is the largest ever known in the history of the country—a low estimate of the crop of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta being at least two hundred million bushels, and the Government of the respective provinces state that fifty thousand men will be required for the harvest this year. These will have to be principally recruited from Ontario and the prosperity of Canada depends on securing them promptly. The Canadian Pacific, on whom will practically fall the entire task of transporting the men to the West, is already making special arrangements for this year. Excursions from Ontario points to Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta will be run at the same rates and conditions as last year and special trains from Toronto and Ontario points through to Winnipeg and West will be run, making the trip in practically thirty six hours, avoiding any change of cars or transfers—this will be a day shorter than any other route. Dates of the excursions will be announced as soon as possible, and all C.P.R. Agents can supply full information concerning this year's excursions.

LONDON POLICE HAVE ADOPTED QUEER WEAPONS, USE A RUBBER HOSE

London, July 18.—For years it has been notorious that although the London police are in many respects the best in the world they have been sadly handicapped in dealing with roughs and crooks by the fact that they were ineffectually armed, their only weapon being a short pocket baton, which they are allowed to use only in circumstances of extreme danger.

After the Houndsditch affray with armed foreign burglars an agitation was raised for the arming of the police, that agitation was fruitless, but now the police are arming themselves in secret. Firearms on account of the cost and difficulty in concealing them have not been adopted, but weapons which can be used to quite as deadly effect and leave no mark are now carried by the police in rough neighbourhoods. This dangerous weapon is just a few feet of loaded gutta percha such as is used for carriage tyres.

A DANGEROUS WEAPON

It is even more dangerous than a sandbag and in the hands of a large London "Bobby" it becomes quite a formidable weapon and will lay a rough out before he can get time to draw his pistol or knife. And the constables use it freely now; they are beginning to realise that their superior officers are extremely short-sighted and hold views entirely too Utopian to be put in practice on a Whitechapel beat.

"It's like this," said a constable to me the other day. "We are armed with a short truncheon about a foot long and we've got to keep it out of sight in our pockets. We are supposed never to use it unless we are practically in danger of our lives. The authorities don't allow us any latitude—they tell us we are intelligent fellows, but all the same they don't allow us any private judgment at all. Now every magistrate who has a court in a low class district knows or ought to know that the police are always being damaged by the hooligans.

Yet if a hooligan is found with a bump on his head, we've got to go through what I've read they call the "third degree" in America. That makes us shy of using what bit of weapon we have got, and so we have either taken to using the bit of rubber on the quiet, which leaves no traces or taking the chance—really it's more a certainty than a chance—of getting mauled now and then.

Now if we had a good stout stick or something like that fairly effective and dangerous looking, it would be a lot better for everybody. In the first place it would make the roughs afraid of us, and if it didn't we could make them afraid with it and at the same time the public wouldn't have to pay for the upkeep of so many men on the sick list—which, of course, means the damaged list.

"What we want is to be put on the same level as the police in New York. Not only with regard to arms, but with regard to uniforms and general treatment. There is a lot of discontent all through the force because we don't get light enough clothes for summer wear. They give us a uniform for hot weather, but it's hardly any different from the winter one, and naturally these hot days it makes us feel pretty wild with the authorities. Inside the ranks we look on our administrators with a great deal of respect, for all of us know that as organizers they are first rate, but on this question of arms they seem to have muddled badly. We are having to solve the problem for ourselves and we have done it as well as any Commissioner of Police with a title as long as my arm would have done. These swells who boss us generally come from the army and they really haven't any idea how to clear a street of factory girls or stop a roughs' fight. We have, because we've had actual experience, and that's why we invented the gutta percha weapon and put it to good use, while they were writing reports and making enquiries at Scotland Yard."

UNIQUE MANAGEMENT

An interesting feature of the London police is its unique management. The Metropolitan Police is a Government department and is on something like the same ooting as the army. It is managed direct from the Home Office by the Secretary of Home Affairs. The Metropolitan Police area extends for a radius of twenty miles—roughly—round the centre of London.

"FOLLOW MY WHITE PLUME" MAY BE LIBERAL SLOGAN

"Follow my white plumes" may be the Liberal battle cry in the impending general election, says the Ottawa correspondent of the New York Herald. Addressing his French-Canadian compatriots on the Champ de Mars at Montreal, last Tuesday, Sir Wilfrid Laurier exclaimed:

"Henry at Navarre at the battle of Ivry said: 'Follow my white plume, and you will find it always in the forefront of honour.' Like Henry IV., I say to you young men, 'Follow my white plume—the white hairs of sixty-nine years—and you will, I believe I can say without boasting, find it always in the forefront of honour.'"

Sir Wilfrid's hair, while thin on top, is luxuriant and bushy behind his ears and gives an unique distinction to his appearance, and is thought not inappropriate to the lines:

And be your oriflamme to-day the helmet of Navarre."

Sir Wilfrid is eager for a battle of ballots. When his Government was returned to power in 1908 on the cry "Let Laurier finish his work!" he said he probably never would run again, but he has no other idea now but to press the fighting.

ECZEMA ON THE HEAD

Mr. Peterson, South Bay, Ont., writes: "For years I suffered a sort of eczema on the head. I tried four different doctors, giving each a fair trial, but the disease grew worse and spread to my arm. I got Dr. Chase's Ointment, and it has entirely cured me. I give you my name because I want other sufferers to know about this splendid Ointment."

$500 PRIZES

At Canadian National Will go to Short Horns and Holsteins

The special prizes of $500.00 each given by the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, go to the cattle classes that last year had the largest number of entries in the beef and dairy breeds respectively.

The prize will go to the best animal exhibited in Shorthorns or Holsteins without regard to sex, and the value of it ensures a wide range of competition. It should prove a great incentive to cattlemen to put their best in great condition for showing.

Trent Canal Guide Book.

—Just issued from the Examiner presses, a most comprehensive and artistic reference and guide book of the Trent Canal, containing a host of valuable and hitherto unpublished information concerning the waterway, compiled by Mr. E. S. Clarry. This book gives precisely the information about the Canal that is so much in demand. Containing as it does, charts of the lakes throughout the system from Orillia and Barrie on Lake Simcoe to Healey's Falls on the Trent, with the main steamer channel clearly indicated it will be of invaluable assistance to the owners of power boats. The maps and charts which the guide book contains are alone worth many times the price of the publication, and they will be appreciated by all navigators in the district. The book is beautifully illustrated by artistic photographs of many points of interest along the system and will be much in demand, if only for souvenir purposes. It is now on sale at Trebilcock Bros. Peterborough Book Store.

PERSONAL AND SOCIAL

Mr. F. R. Yokome, of the Examiner, has commenced a two weeks' vacation.

Miss Ella Freeland of Buffalo, is the guest of Mrs. (Dr.) Robinson, 225 Charlotte street.

Mr. H. H. Murrick, Post Office Inspector for Eastern Ontario, is in Peterborough on a visit of inspection.

Mr. W. J. Koster, 574 Charlotte st., is attending the Master Painters' Convention in Toronto, this week.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Clarke and their neice, Miss Mae Donaldson, are spending a couple of weeks visiting friends in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. John Heffernan and family of Providence, R.I., left for their home to-day, after a month's visit in the city.

Mrs. O. J. Clatworthy and Miss Alverda Brown of Oshawa, Ont., are visiting with their sister, Mrs. W. McMillan, at 228 Charlotte street.

The following guests are at the Hotel National: Mr. J. J. Driscoll of St. Louis; Mr. F. W. McLean, St. Catharines; Mr. W. T. Downes of Detroit.

The following guests are registered at the Oriental: Mr. W. B. Screaton, of London; Mr. H. Darcey of Burleigh Falls; Mr. Stewart Armour, of San Francisco.

Mrs. D. B. Mullen and Mrs. F. L. Mullen and son of Edmonton, Alta., formerly of Peterborough, Ont., are spending a few weeks at their cottage, Cooking Lake.

The many friends of little Miss Grace Primeau will be pleased to learn that she has passed with first class honours her primary piano examination in the Toronto College of Music.

Mr. Bruce Doupe, painter, who met with a painful accident a few weeks ago, is progressing most favourably. While never entirely confined to the house, he is able to get around much better, and is looking after his business interests as heretofore.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard J. Chowen of Peterborough, announce the engagement of their only daughter, Hazel Etta, to Raymond P. Best, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Best, 166 Chestnut street, Winnipeg, the marriage to take place quietly about the middle of August.—Globe.

His many friends in Peterborough will be glad to learn that Mr. Gordon Campbell, who was in the Porcupine district and about whose safety there was great anxiety, has communicated with some of his friends here since the fire, stating that he came through all right.

Mr. I. Elwood Lane and family, of Fort Wayne, Ind., visited his brother, A. F. Lane, Sunday. Mr. Lane has been touring for two weeks in his magnificent touring car, going a distance of over two thousand miles. He was in Rochester attending the meeting of the Shriners.

OBITUARY

The funeral of the late Mr. Schneider, of 168 London street, took place this afternoon at the Little Lake cemetery. The Rev. Mr. Couch officiated. There were a large number of friends present at the interment, showing how great was the esteem in which he was held by all who were fortunate enough to make his acquaintance. The pall bearers were Messrs. Miller, Matchett, White, Davidson, Madill and Thompson.

The relatives of the deceased gentleman have the sympathy of a large number of friends.

SIMEON S. KELLY.

The funeral of the late Simeon S. Kelly was held on Saturday 8th from the residence of his brother, Dr. Kelly, Markham, to Brown's Corners Presbyterian cemetery, and was largely attended. Mr. Kelly was at one time engaged in the teaching profession and taught for a time in the school at Warsaw. He was well and favourably known, and universal regret in the neighbourhood of his late home is felt at his sudden demise, which occurred after only a few days' illness.

Besides his widow, two brothers and two sisters survive. The deceased was prominently identified with the Masonic and Orange orders and was a member of the Presbyterian church.

The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Mr. Rae.

IN DREAD OF CROUP

Every mother dreads croup unless she knows about Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. Given in frequent small doses, at the first indication of trouble, this treatment loosens the cough and affords relief and comfort. Its use should be kept up until the child is entirely recovered.

MANY GUESTS AT BELLEVDERE

Examiner Special.

CROWE'S LANDING, STONEY LAKE, JUL Y18.—"Bellevidere" summer resort has almost a full quota of guests at the present time and this week will see the house accommodation taxed to its utmost. Mr. Lennox the proprietor, has made many improvements since last season, making his place even more comfortable than ever. A new and commodious parlour has been arranged, a feature of which is a large stone fireplace. There is telephone communication with the outside world and Mr. Lennox has added to his fleet a speedy gasoline launch. Among the recent registrations at "Bellevidere" are the following: F. C. Hewlett, Flusington, N.Y.; E. J. Searight and wife, Peterborough; J. A. Calder and wife, Toronto; Mrs. G. M. LAKEHURST PARAGRAPHS

Special to The Examiner.

LAKEHURST, JULY 17.—The rain which has fallen lately was extremely welcome here, as we have not had any of any account since about the middle of June, and the crops suffered greatly in consequence, although it came too late to help the hay and wheat. The peas and oats will be benefitted.

Mr. A. G. Shearer has opened an ice-cream parlour at Lakehurst on Saturday evenings. A week ago last Saturday was the first, and the ice cream was of first-class quality and seemed to be in great demand.

The telephone line is still incomplete, although we are experiencing all the unpleasant features, such as having great posts thrust in our door yards and having the branches lopped from our beautiful shade trees, we have, as yet, had no chance of testing the advantages of the innovation.

Mr. Alvin Johnston of Belleville, spent a few days of last week visiting friends here.

Misses Marion and Lena Weir of Lang, have returned home after a short visit with friends here.

Miss S. Weir spent last week visiting her aunt in Apsley.

Miss Holmes and Mr. Aimes of Raeboro, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Holmes a week ago Sunday.

Miss King of Peterborough, who has been visiting at Mr. McGuire's, returned home on Friday.

POST CARD COLUMN

To the Editor Examiner:

Dear Sir, — Kindly permit me, through the columns of your paper, to express my sincerest gratitude to all who contributed to make the football match, which was given for my benefit, a success.

Yours, etc.,

House of Commons Resumes the Adjourned Debate on the Reciprocity Question

THE DISCUSSION

Ottawa, July 19.—Before a specially filled House the debate on the reciprocity proposals was resumed yesterday On the motion to go into committee of ways and means, W. S. Middlebro (N. Grey) moved an amendment expressing the desirability of the Government recognizing in some tangible way the services of the veterans of 1866-70. Sir Wilfrid Laurier replied briefly, and the remainder of the debate was carried on by members of the Opposition. On a straight party division the vote stood: For the amendment, 45; against, 61. The Government majority was only 16.

Mr. Arthurs (Parry Sound) continuing the reciprocity discussion analyzed the attempted defence of reciprocity by members of the Government, and pointed out how absurdly inaccurate were statistics furnished by the Government.

J. G. Taylor (New Westminster) said that geography had favored the north and south trade, but the fathers of Confederation had aimed to make it run east and west. Sir Wilfrid had done his best to promote this, but had permitted Mr. Fielding to override his good intentions.

On the motion to go into committee of ways and means, W. S. Middlebro (North Grey) introduced the question of the Government granting some recognition, either in land or money, to the veterans of the Fenian raids of 1866 and 1870. He showed that the attention of the Government had been called to the situation some fifteen or sixteen years ago, the veterans petitioned the Government in 1896, and repeatedly at intervals since delegations representing the Veterans' Associations had interviewed the Government.

Whether land or money, the member for North Grey thought that something should be done for those who had taken up arms at that time.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier replied that the matter had not been overlooked, but had been receiving the attention of the Minister of Militia. While Mr. Middlebro had invited the Government to follow the example of the Mackenzie administration, the Prime Minister pointed out that the Government had rewarded the men who fought in the rebellion of 1885, and in the South African war. A Conservative Government was in power at the time of the Fenian raid, and he asked "Why did not that Government take the position that it was desirable for the people of Canada to recognize the services of those who had taken part in that campaign." For his part he would be willing to grant some reward to those who had actively participated in the defence of the country at the time of the raid, but many volunteers had been called to their regiments, but only did garrison duty.

J. D. Taylor (New Westminster) pointed out that the House met under exceptional circumstances to carry out an understanding which two Ministers had given to President Taft. If the Government was so jealous of its honor in that regard, why not equally so with regard to the men to whom it promised to grant aid some years ago.

R. L. Borden made enquiries in reference to the progress which has been made with the census returns. He asked when the work would be completed and when the result would be known.

Mr. Fisher said that he would not like to say off-hand when it would be possible to give Mr. Borden the information.

Taking Bait Illegally.

St. John's, Nfld., July 19.—Surprised while in the act of taking bait illegally near Cape Race, at the southeastern extremity of Newfoundland, sixteen fishermen from a Gloucester schooner hastily rowed to shore Monday and abandoned their dories and fled into the woods. Seven abandoned dories were confiscated by the colonial cruiser Fiona.

In order to capture the fishermen themselves a posse of police has been despatched to the scene, and a thorough search was being made for the fishermen.

Missing Since the Fire.

Kingston, July 19.—Kingston relatives have received word from Porcupine that T. N. Campbell, who left here seven years ago, is safe, but that two of his brothers, Wesley and Ernest, also the latter's wife and two children, who took refuge in the lake, are missing. T. N. Campbell was one of the first men on the ground at Porcupine and conducted a brokerage office. Wesley Campbell's house was burned.

Killed at Telephone.

Brockville, Conn., July 19.—A. H. Ramagge of Hartford, 25 years old, was killed by an electric shock as he stood at a telephone early yesterday in the local sub-station of the Connecticut Co., through which high power wires run. Wires became crossed, so that when the young man answered the bell, he received the heavy current.

Watered the Milk.

Brockville, July 19.—John and Michael Featherstone, farmers, residing at Taylor Postoffice, were yesterday fined $50 and costs each for watering milk furnished a cheese factory.

Trainor of Toronto Wins First Prize R. C. R. Lance-Corporal Scores the Only Possible

THIRTEEN IN RUNNING

Bisley, England, July 19.—Lance-Corpl. J. Trainor, R.C.R., of Toronto, scored a possible in the first stage of the King's prize competition, the leading match of the Bisley meet. Of the 1,450 competitors Trainor was the only one to make a possible.

The competition is for prizes aggregating about $8,000, and is open to territorials and retired territorials. Ranges 200, 500 and 600 are used, seven shots at each.

The second stage will be shot on Friday, and the third stage on Saturday. The first prize is $1,000 and a medal.

Trainor's victory was exceedingly popular in camp and on the range. He was photographed a dozen times, and also in front of the Canadian hut, mounted on the shoulders of his fellow members of the team. The following Canadians have qualified for the second stage of the King's prize: Bibby 97, Bayles 97, F. Morris 94, Clifford 94, Russell 93, Martin 93, Capt. Miller 92, Wayne 91, Clark 90, W. Morris 90, Col. Sergt. Hunter 90, MacLaren 89. Sixty-seven who scored 88 each will shoot off for the last 24 places.

REVOLUTION IN HAYTI.

Government Troops Routed In Battle —U. S. Interests Threatened.

Port au Prince, Hayti, July 19.—The revolution progresses. The Government troops were routed at Trou and have returned in disorder to Cape Haytien. The situation is calm here, but if the Government fails it is feared there will be disorders, as all the disciplined troops are in the north.

Another U. S. Cruiser.

Washington, July 19.—At the request of the U. S. Minister at Port au Prince, the United States will send another gunboat to Hayti waters to protect Americans and their interests, now seriously threatened by the revolution against President Simon. The gunboat Petrel is already at Port Liberte, on the north coast.

Germans Are Expelled.

Kingston, Jamaica, July 19.—Mail advices from Hayti state that several prominent Germans have been expelled from the country on the grounds of alleged support given by them to the revolution.

Won't Allow Bull Fight.

Toronto, July 19.—Bull fights were bumped by the police commissioners at their meeting yesterday afternoon. William Dunn, a Spaniard of English descent, applied, through his solicitor, G. F. Hodgson, for a permit to pull off a cattle scrap at the island stadium, [illegible]

Castro Still Missing.

Washington, D.C., July 19.—The world search for Ciphrano Castro, "the man without a country," is still continued.

Apparently authentic reports that he was in or near Venezuela embarked upon a revolutionary movement finally have proved erroneous.

Parkhill Girl Drowned.

Windsor, July 19.—The Detroit River claimed another victim Monday night, when Miss Mabel Mason of Parkhill, Ont., met a watery grave off the foot of Campeau avenue. In her death struggles she nearly dragged to his death Samuel Parr, 22 years old, who lives in this city and who was endeavoring to save her.

COLONIALS LEAVE.

The Overseas Representatives Given Luncheon In London.

London, July 19.—King George sent a message to the farewell luncheon to the representatives of the dominions, given by the Parliamentary committee yesterday, conveying the hope that their wives had enjoyed their visit to the Mother Country. His Majesty expressed pleasure at having seen them at Buckingham Palace, and added wishes for a safe and pleasant journey home.

Mr. Asquith, in addressing the gathering, said he thought that as a result of the survey of the various parts of the United Kingdom which they had had, the visitors would carry away two abiding impressions; first, that whatever pessimistic cynics might have said to the contrary, this Mother Country, the home centre of the Empire, was not yet moribund. Cheers greeted this statement.

"Wherever you have been," Mr. Asquith continued, "you have seen abounding evidence of vitality and progress—I do not wish to speak of politics—in all the social, industrial and other walks of our common life. Next, but not least important, you will all go to your various dominions, and the colonies of the King, feeling that there is identity in the ideals and aims between the different parts of the Empire, quite independent of all political parties, which constitutes the abiding safeguard of the Empire."

Furniture Store Gutted.

Chatham, July 19.—The McDonald furniture store was partially gutted by fire yesterday at noon. The blaze only raged for about half an hour before the firemen had it stopped, but in that time almost the entire stock of the store, which comprises three storeys on King street, was destroyed. Damage by fire, water and smoke will run into thousands of dollars. Gray's China Hall, next door, was drenched with water, and much of the stock ruined. The origin of the fire is unknown, and how it got such a start before it was noticed is rather a mystery.

Montreal Carpenters Strike.

Montreal, July 19.—The carpenters went out on strike yesterday for 35 cents an hour, and the number to be on strike is about 1,500.

At present they are getting from 25 to 32 cents an hour.

Identified the Body.

Niagara Falls, Ont., July 19.—The mystery surrounding the disappearance of Mrs. Ella Davis from her home at Niagara-on-the-Lake last November was cleared up by the identification of a body washed ashore on Monday at Olcott Beach by Chas Davis as his wife. The body will be shipped to Toronto, the woman's former home, for burial.

To Probe Shoe Machine Trust.

Boston, July 19.—A message requesting that the Legislature institute an investigation of the manufacture of shoe machinery on the ground that the business was being conducted illegally, was sent to the Senate yesterday by Governor Foss.

NEW TOWN IS RISING

Survivors of Fire Are Planning the Coming Porcupine—Are Building on the Smouldering Ashes

FLOCKING BACK

Porcupine Camp, July 19.—Waves of fire, flames riding in the stirrups of death, tornadoes driving hotter than the furnaces of hell, and other ghost like expressions that have served to describe to the outside world something of the horrible holocaust in which, perhaps, 70 persons have perished, have all been relegated to the background in Porcupine, and now that proper and due respect has been given to the dead, brave men and women, for whom all Porcupine mourns, mining has again come to the front. Townsites are building with a rapidity that is marvelous, when it is understood that there is absolutely no building material on hand. In Porcupine City cabins are being built from the half-burned logs from which the fires were put out, while in South Porcupine men built over the fire. In one instance, while the ruins smoked on the spot where the cabin was being put up, builders continued to lay logs and drive nails.

"I heard tell of men building on the ruins of a fire," said D. C. Clark, "but I never before saw one building on top of the fire." It is this spirit that drives Porcupine along, with the proper support from those more fortunate on the outside, those who prosper on the work of poor men in the north.

The greatest gold mining camp on the North American continent will advance tenfold with the advantage that has been gained through a wholesale cleaning up of the timber muskeg. The mines plan for immediate work. Many of those who rushed temporarily from the camp till shelter and food was provided, will be coming back next week. Work will be plentiful and laborers now in the camp will find employment at good wages.

Estimates of the loss are made up as follows: South Porcupine, $350,000; Porcupine City, $250,000; Golden City, $30,000; twelve of the largest mines, $500,000; many small prospecting mines in four townships, $50,000; prospectors' cabins, tools, supplies and clothes in five townships, $10,000. No computation for losses sustained by the mines in work done, or loss of time that must be borne during the next three months, is made. Already the mines are starting work, clearing away the debris and getting material on hand for foundations. Roads are being chopped out through the tangled mass of fallen trees and haste is being made to wipe out all evidences of the terrible holocaust.

Relief funds as follows have been received by the committee: Dominion Government, tents and blankets, $17,500; from relief fund, gathered in Toronto, $5,000 cash; provisions (no definite word as to where they came from, except from towns along the T. & N.O.); half a carload of provisions and shelter from Cobalt, Lake Mucy Co., to the West Dome employes; one carload of provisions from North Bay, to be charged to relief fund; a carload of coffins, payment to be adjusted later; Western Miners' Union; money for hospital purposes from the National Red Cross Society of the United States.

Masonic Grand Lodge.

St. Catharines, July 19.—Last evening the city was well filled with Masonic delegates to the grand lodge, which opens to-day, many arriving on last evening's trains. Yesterday morning was spent in committee meetings, and in the afternoon the grand lodge officers and members of committees were taken for an automobile tour through the fruit district into Vineland and the experimental fruit farm, members of the local lodges furnishing the autos. Last evening the visitors attended a special concert given by the 19th Regiment band in their honor.

Honey Goes Up.

Toronto, July 19.—Up goes the price of honey.

When the honey exchange committee of the Ontario Beekeepers' Association held their annual meeting yesterday at the secretary's office in the Parliament buildings, several reasons were given for an advance in prices. The practical failure of the small fruit crops, the high price of cherries, only a fair crop of apples, and the reduction in the supply of white honey, both in Canada and the United States, were some of the more important arguments for a higher rate of prices.

Asked For Explanation.

Madrid, July 19.—According to a semi-official statement last night the Foreign Office has requested the Spanish legation at Tangier for information regarding the reported arrest of M. Boisset, the French consular agent at Alcazar. In view of the fact that instructions have already been given to the Spanish Minister at Tangier and the fact also that he has not reported the incident, is taken as indicating either that it was unimportant in itself, or that the legation's explanations offered M. Boisset were satisfactory.

Exiled Shah Returns.

Teheran, Persia, July 19.—Mohammed Ali Mirza, the exiled Shah of Persia, has returned to his own land for the purpose of making another bid for the throne. The ex-Shah is now at Gumesh Tepe, a small port in the Caspian Sea, in the northern part of Persia, near the Russian border, and it is stated that a Russian vessel conveyed him to that place.

Soon after Mohammed Ali Mirza was dethroned in July, 1909, he proceeded to Russia and arrived at Odessa in October of the same year. The Russian Government undertook by protocol to keep the ex-Shah under strict surveillance and prevent all intrigues with respect to his return to Persia, and possibly to the throne. Notwithstanding this, the deposed Shah has made progress through Russia quite rapidly and without molestation from Odessa to Gumesh, a distance of about 1,000 miles. What force Mohammed has with him is not known.

Opposed the Merger.

Montreal, July 19.—Lieut.-Col. F. S. Meighen was yesterday elected president of the Lake of the Woods Milling Co., succeeding his late father in that position. The new president had been a director of the company for several years and had also occupied the treasurership. No director to fill the place left vacant on the board by the election of the new president has as yet been named.

Lieut.-Col. Meighen's appointments to the presidency means that the anti-merger policy of the company, inaugurated by his late father, will be steadfastly adhered to.

Hindered the Firemen.

Cardiff, Wales, July 19.—Serious rioting occurred on the docks yesterday, arising from the strike troubles, in which a dozen policemen and a score of civilians were badly injured. During the riots a large dock warehouse caught fire. It is suspected that an incendiary applied the match. The rioters interfered with the efforts of the firemen to extinguish the flames, and looted the warehouse of hogsheads of liquor, which they consumed. The police have been ordered here from Newport, and there is great fear of renewed rioting of a more serious nature.

Taken to Winnipeg.

Niagara Falls, Ont., July 19.—Antonio Vecco, the Italian wanted in Winnipeg for murdering a fellow countryman, was brought from Buffalo yesterday afternoon and taken to the west by Detective by Chief Elliott of Winnipeg.

THE
Cost of Glasses

When you think of having your eyes examined and of the possibility of wearing glasses, the matter of cost naturally arises.

As in everything else, good work, careful skilful work, is apt to cost more than work less good.

There is nothing you buy for your personal use that you ought to be more careful about, that you can afford to have the best of, than these glasses, that you are going to depend on to preserve and assist your eyesight.

The reason we have succeeded so well and our business has grown so satisfactorily is that the best work is given in every case and a reasonable price is charged.

All Work including the Lens Grinding is done on the Premises and Fully Guaranteed.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

I AM not one of those people who see immodesty in every little thing. The folks who shriek "indecency" at elbow sleeves and Dutch necks and thin stockings and peek-a-boo waists remind me forcibly of the old saying, "To the pure all things are pure."

But when it comes to women shadowgraphing the exact lines of their figures on the public consciousness the way so many of them do now—well, there's where I make my stand.

It wasn't so bad in the winter when the materials were thick and heavy, but now that they are thin and clinging—but why describe the effect, you know as well as I what it is.

Watch any group of men in a public place where men and women are passing and see how quickly some of them glance after a woman dressed in this way.

Wouldn't you think those glances would burn right into her back?

In Japan, as you probably know, the women of bad character are supposed to tie the sash in front instead of in back. A Japanese on a visit to this country evidently thought he had discovered a parallel to this custom when he saw a woman in one of these exceedingly clinging gowns, for he pointed her out to his American companion and inquired, "That is what your women of the demi monde wear?"

One more word. Especially for the girl over whose head my previous remarks have passed, who is sniffing at my accusation of immodesty as all newspaper talk and assuring her self that I'm one of those who don't know or care anything about style.

Whisper, my dear. A dressmaker whom I know, just came back from a trip to Paris. "To think that American women are still wearing those abominable tight skirts," she said. "Why, they've dropped them long ago in Paris. They say they are ugly and impossible. I suppose you people will realize that in a year or two."

What matter if my previous arguments against tight gowns have fallen flat?

Surely I have an answerable one in that.

By JACK LONDON

CHAPTER IV.

Joan Lackland

By the second day of the northwester, Sheldon was in collapse from his fever. It had taken an unfair advantage of his weak state, and though it was only ordinary malarial fever, in forty-eight hours it had run him as low as ten days of fever would have done when he was in condition. But the dysentery had been swept away from Berande. A score of convalescents lingered in the hospital, but they were improving hourly. There had been but one more death—that of the man whose brother had wailed over him instead of brushing the flies away.

On the morning of the fourth day of his fever Sheldon lay on the verandah, gazing dimly out over the raging ocean. The wind was falling, but a mighty sea was still thundering in on Berande beach, the flying spray reaching in as far as the flagstaff mounds, the foaming wash creaming against the gate-posts. He had taken thirty grains of quinine and the drug was buzzing in his ears like a nest of hornets, making his hands and knees tremble and causing a sickening palpitation of the stomach. Once, opening his eyes, he saw what he took to be an hallucination. Not far out, and coming in across the Jessie's anchorage, he saw a whale-boat's nose thrust skyward on a smoky crest and disappear naturally as an actual whale-boat's nose should disappear, as it slid down the back of the sea. He knew that no whale-boat should be out there, and he was quite certain no men in the Solomons were mad enough to be abroad in such a storm.

But the hallucination persisted. A minute later, chancing to open his eyes, he saw the whale-boat, full length, and saw right into it as it rose on the face of a wave. He saw six sweeps at work, and, in the stern clearly outlined against the overhanging wall of white, a man who stood erect, gigantic, swaying with his weight on the steering-sweep. This he saw, and an eighth man who crouched in the bow and gazed shoreward. But what startled Sheldon was the sight of a woman in the sternsheets, between the stroke oar and the steersman. A woman she was, for a braid of her hair was flying, and she was just in the act of recapturing it and stowing it away beneath a hat that for all the world was like his own "Baden-Powell."

The boat disappeared behind the wave and rose into view on the face of the following one. Again he looked into it. The men were dark-skinned and larger than Solomon Islanders, but the woman, he could plainly see, was white. Who she was and what she was doing there, were thoughts that drifted vaguely through his consciousness. He was too sick to be vitally interested, and besides he had a half-feeling that it was all a dream. But he noted that the men were resting on their sweeps while the woman and the steersman were intently watching the run of seas behind them.

"Good boatmen," was Sheldon's verdict, as he saw the boat leap forward on the face of a huge breaker, the sweeps flying swiftly to keep her on that front of the moving mountain of water that raced madly for the shore. It was well done. Part full of water, the boat was flung upon the beach, the men springing out and dragging its nose to the gate-posts. Sheldon had called vainly to the house-boys, who, at the moment, were dosing the remaining patients in the hospital. He knew he was unable to rise up and go down the path to meet the newcomers, so he lay back in the steamer chair and watched for ages while they cared for the boat. The woman stood to one side, her hand resting on the gate. Occasional surges of sea-water washed over her feet, which he could see were encased in rubber sea-boots. She scrutinized the house sharply, and for some time she gazed at him steadily. At last, speaking to two of the men, who turned and followed her, she started up the path.

Sheldon attempted to rise, got half up out of his chair, and fell back, helplessly. He was surprised at the size of the men, who loomed like giants behind her. Both were six-footers, and they were heavy in proportion. He had never seen islanders like them. They were not black like the Solomon Islanders, but light brown; and their features were larger, more regular, and even handsome.

The woman—or girl, rather, he decided—walked along the veranda toward him. The two men waited at the head of the steps, watching curiously. The girl was angry. He could see that. Her gray eyes were flashing and her lips were quivering. That she had a temper, was his thought. But the eyes were striking. He decided that they were not gray after all, or, at least, not all gray. They were large and wide apart, and they looked at him from under level brows. Her face was cameolike, so clear cut was it. There were other striking things about her—the cow-boy Stetson hat, the heavy braids of brown hair, and the long-barrelled 38 Colt's revolver that hung in its holster on her hip.

"Pretty hospitality, I must say," was her greeting, "letting strangers sink or swim in your front yard."

"I—I beg your pardon," he stammered, by a supreme effort dragging himself to his feet.

His legs wobbled under him, and with a suffocating sensation he began sinking to the floor. He was aware of a feeble gratification as he saw solicitude leap into her eyes; then blackness smote him, and, at the moment of smiting him, his thought was that at last, and for the first time in his life, he had fainted.

The ringing of the big bell aroused him. He opened his eyes and found that he was on the couch indoors. A glance at the clock told him that it was six, and from the direction the sun's rays streamed into the room he knew that it was morning. At first he puzzled over something untoward he was sure had happened. Then, on the wall, he saw a Stetson hat hanging, and, beneath it, a full cartridge-belt and .. long-barrelled 38 Colt's revolver. The slender girth of the belt told its feminine story, and he remembered the whale-boat of the day before and the gray eyes that flashed beneath the level brows. She it must have been, who had just rung the bell. The cares of the plantation rushed upon him, and he sat up in bed, clutching at the wall for support as the mosquito screen lurched dizzily around him. He was still sitting there, holding on, with eyes closed, striving to master his giddiness, when he heard her voice.

"You'll lie right down again, sir," she said.

It was sharply imperative, a voice used to command. At the same time one hand pressed him back toward the pillow while the other caught him from behind and eased him down.

"You've been unconscious for 24 hours now," she went on, "and I have taken charge. When I say the word you'll get up, and not until then. Now, what medicine do you take? — quinine? Here are ten grains. That's right. You'll make a good patient."

"My dear madam," he began.

"You mustn't speak," she interrupted, "that is, in protest. Otherwise, you can talk."

"But the plantation—"

"A dead man is of no use on a plantation. Don't you want to know about me? My vanity is hurt. Here am I, just through my first shipwreck, and here are you, not the least bit curious, talking about your miserable plantation. Can't you see that I am just bursting to tell somebody, anybody, about my shipwreck?"

He smiled. It was the first time in weeks. And he smiled, not so much at what she said, as at the way she said it—the whimsical expression of her face, the laughter in her eyes, and the several tiny lines of humour that drew in at the corners. He was curiously wondering as to what her age was, as he said aloud:

"Yes, tell me, please."

"That I will not—not now," she retorted, with a toss of the head. I'll find somebody to tell my story to who does not have to be asked. Also, I want information. I managed to find out what time to ring the bell to turn the hands to. And that is about all. I don't understand the ridiculous speech of your people. What time do they knock off?"

"At eleven—go on again at one."

"That will do, thank you. And now, where do you keep the key to the provisions? I want to feed my men."

"Your men!" he gasped. "On tinned goods! No, no. Let them go out and eat with the boys."

Her eyes flashed as on the day before, and he saw again the imperative expression on her face.

"That I won't. My men are men. I've been out to your miserable barracks and watched them eat. Faugh! Potatoes! Nothing but potatoes. No salt. Nothing. Only potatoes. I may have been mistaken, but I thought I understood them to say that that was all they ever got to eat. Two meals a day and every day in the week?"

He nodded.

"Well, my men wouldn't stand for that a single day, much less a whole week. Where is the key?"

"Hanging on that clothes-hook under the cloak."

He gave in easily enough, but as she was reaching down the key she heard him say:

"Fancy niggers and tinned provisions."

This time she really was angry. The blood was in her cheeks as she turned on him.

"My men are not niggers. The sooner you understand that the better for our acquaintance. As for the tinned goods, I'll pay for all they eat. Please don't worry about that. Worry is not good for you in your condition. And I won't stay any longer than I have to — just long enough to get you on your feet, and not go away with the feeling of having deserted a white man."

"You're American, aren't you?" he asked quietly.

The question disconcerted here for the moment.

"Yes," she vouchsafed, with a defiant look. "Why?"

"Nothing. I merely thought so."

"Anything further?"

He shook his head.

"Why" he asked.

"Oh, nothing. I thought you might have something pleasant to say."

"My name is Sheldon, David Sheldon," he said, with direct relevance, holding out a thin hand.

Her hand started out impulsively, then checked.

"My name is Lackland, Joan Lackland." The hand went out. "And let us be friends."

"It could not be otherwise—" he began lamely.

"And I can feed my men all the tinned goods I want?" she rushed on.

"Till the cows come home," he answered, attempting her own lightness, then adding, "that is, to Berande. You see we don't have any cows at Berande."

She fixed him coldly with her eyes.

"Is that a joke?" she demanded.

"I really don't know—I—I thought it was, but then, you see, I'm sick."

"You're English, aren't you?" was her next query.

"Now thats too much, even for a sick man," he cried. "You know well enough that I am."

"Oh," she said absently. "Then you are?"

He frowned, tightened his lips, then burst into laughter, in which she joined.

"It's my own fault," he confessed. "I shouldn't have baited you. I'll be careful in the future."

"In the meantime, go on laughing, and I'll see about breakfast. Is there anything you would fancy?"

He shook his head.

"It will do you good to eat something. Your fever has burned out, and you are merely weak. Wait a moment."

She hurried out of the room in the direction of the kitchen, tripped at the door in a pair of sandals several times too large for her feet, and disappeared in rosy confusion.

"By Jove, those are my sandals," he thought to himself. "The girl has not a thing to wear except what she landed on the beach in, and she certainly landed in sea-boots."

Spring Humors

Result From the Poisoned Condition of the Blood

Discharge is Checked—Sores Are Cleaned Out and Healed by

Dr. Chase's Ointment

Aside from the suffering caused by pimples, sores and skin eruptions, there is the annoyance and embarrassment to which they give rise, particularly when on the hands or face.

It is quite proper to try to get the blood right by use of internal treatment, but this is a tedious method of overcoming the skin troubles, which can so readily be gotten rid of by using Dr. Chase's Ointment.

The three pricipal ingredients of this great, soothing, healing ointment are the most potent known to the medical profession as a means of cleaning out sores and ulcers, destroying morbid growth, lessening the discharge, preventing blood-poisoning and stimulating the healing process.

Dr. Chase's Ointment stops itching almost as soon as applied and often heals almost like magic.

The time required for cure depends on the nature of the ailment, but, unlike internal treatment, the benefits are apparent to the eye, and you can note from day to day the improvement made.

The wonderful success of Dr. Chase's Ointment in the cure of eczema, salt rheum, psoriasis and old sores and wounds is sufficient proof that it is bound to be satisfactory in the treatment of less severe diseases of the skin. 60 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. SEVEN YEARS OF MISERY

All Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Sikeston, Mo.—"For seven years I suffered everything. I was in bed for four or five days at a time every month, and so weak I could hardly walk. I cramped and had backache and headache, and was so nervous and weak that I dreaded to see anyone or have anyone move in the room. The doctors gave me medicine to cause me at those times, and said that I ought to have an operation. I would not listen to that, and when a friend of my husband told him about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it had done for his wife, I was willing to take it. Now I look the picture of health and feel like it, too. I can do my own housework, hoe my garden, and milk a cow. I can entertain company and enjoy them. I can visit when I choose, and walk as far as any ordinary woman, any day in the month. I wish I could talk to every suffering woman and girl."—Mrs. Della Burrows, Sikeston, Mo.

The most successful remedy in this country for the cure of all forms of female complaints is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

It is more widely and successfully used than any other remedy. It has cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing down feeling, indigestion, and nervous prostration, after all other means had failed. Why don't you try it?

COSTLIEST HAT IN THE WORLD

The most expensive hat in the world is on view at the annual exhibition of Ascot and Grand Prix hats held by the Maison Lewis at their salons in Regent Street, London. It has been especially designed by M. Lewis for Princess Miahesco of Bukharest. It is a large black tagal hat lined with silver lace and covered with a wealth of white ospreys, which tower high into the air. A cluster of silver roses in front completes the trimming. The unusually high price of the model is due to the ospreys. This particular millinery, which has caused so many indignant protests against cruelty to birds, has become so scarce that the small quantity which is still on the market has risen enormously in price, and in accordance with fashion's usual foibles, this fact sufffices to make ospreys the rage of the season.

The Problems Of Hindu Immigration Into Canada

Story of the Earliest Movement of Sons of Empire Into the Dominion---Prejudice of Accidental Circumstances---Discrimination in the Immigration Laws

(By Walter W. Baer.)

The Canadians of the province of British Columbia are becoming familiar with the presence among them of a people whose characteristic features and racial type have been for many years a matter of speculation or special study to all but those who have not visited India and observed the Hindus under their native conditions. These swarthy, turbaned, whiskered, and dark featured men with piercing eyes and striking countenance are today moving in and out among us and sharing in the ordinary pursuits of livelihood just as the scions of other and alien races from the opposite hemisphere have done during the last quarter of a century. To those who are interested in the movement among races which are resulting in a fulfilment of the Scriptural declaration attributed to the God of the Hebrews in which he is credited with the statement, "Yet once again will I shake all nations and the Desire of all nations shall come," the travel and trail of these Asiatic people among us may afford an interesting subject for review. The fact that of the Asiatic nations the first among us were the Chinese, that these were followed much later by the Japanese, and that the people of our own Empire fellow-subjects of the same sovereign and loyal upholders of our own Imperial fabric, should be the last, is a matter which could be explained only by a close study of the political movements of the last half century. It is not so much with these things that I am just now concerned as with the fact that they are among us and that in common with the introduction of immigrants from all the Oriental nations, they bring with them the problems of their affiliation with us and their adjustment to the conditions of civilization under which we live. I am moved to write upon this subject because the problems of Oriental immigration as affecting our political economy have always been deeply interesting to me, and, in the next place, because it has gradually forced itself upon me as a conviction that in admitting the Hindus to our shores, and following the rapidity with which they have become a part of our economic and industrial affairs we shall be compelled to look upon our fellow-subjects of the British Empire with a somewhat different view than is demanded by the immigrants of other and alien races. It is because the facts which must ultimately determine our attitude toward these people are so little known and because they are so undesignedly capable of appeal to our sense of fairness and justice that it becomes the apparent duty of one who has studied them to make them widely understood. In this article I shall, therefore, confine myself to a merely historic review of the circumstances under which the Hindu appears as one of us and how he became a factor in the problems that must be solved in the solution of the wide question of the foreign relations of the West.

The geographical position of the province is such, in its relation to the other parts of the Empire, that it is here where we naturally first encounter these people. The immigration which flows into Canada from European countries reaches this western province last. Whatever is adaptable to the needs and conditions of the provinces lying east of British Columbia is absorbed by these before they reach us—unless they have set out from home with this province as their destination. With immigration from the Orient the situation is exactly reversed. We are the first to receive, and necessarily compelled to assimilate, the strangers who come to us from the Celestial and other empires as well as from the nethermost parts of our own British domain. So that our immigration has been affected—I might almost say governed—by these two considerations. We have had to hunger for European immigration and we have had to apply ourselves to the adaptation and utilization of those who offered us their sadly-needed help from the Far East. This, together with the fact that our immigration laws have had to be devised at Ottawa and by Parliament the majority of whose members have never been able to understand our industrial and economical problems, has put every immigrant approaching our shores from across the Pacific Ocean in the same class, and we have largely lost sight of many important and inherent distinctions that should have been maintained.

Like the Chinese who were first to come and the Japanese who were next to follow, this our late brother is here, and, though one of ourselves in his loyalty to the British Empire, and his constitutional and traditional adaptation to our forms of government and our institutions, he is, in some respects, the least permitted to avail himself of the advantages of these. This is not because of designed discrimination against the Hindu, but because of the collusion of conditions and the lack of that discrimination which was imperative if these very disabilities were to be avoided.

That is why I wish to tell the people of Canada the story of this branch of our British people so that when Parliament comes to deal with the matters of citizenship within the Empire and of immigration laws and regulations which were adumbrated at the recent Imperial Conference, some of the discussions which may take place in the House of Commons and the reasons for the enactment of some which may be passed will be understood from the outside.

The present Hindu population of Canada numbers about 5,000 souls, all men, for no women are allowed to accompany them to Canada or to follow them after they have arrived and settled. These are resident entirely in British Columbia, and chiefly in the cities of Vancouver and Victoria where they are industriously employed in the many forms of manual labor and on the farms in the neighborhood, for which they appear to have both special adaptation and desire.

I am indebted to Dr. Sundar Singh, the accredited agent for these people in Canada, for the statement as to how the eyes of the Hindus were first turned to America and Canada, and the first beginnings of modern emigration from India were inspired. He says that the visit of Hindu religious reformers to the great Parliament of Religions which was held in Chicago in connection with the World's Fair first aroused these people to an appreciation of the advantages of Occidental civilizations and democratic institutions. The educational work carried on by American missionaries in the high schools of India also prepared the way for a sowing of good seed in a ready soil, the fruitage of which turned the eyes of educated Hindus toward this new world. Economic conditions in India furthered a movement of emigrants to Canada in 1905 when, and continuing until 1907, not a few came to this country.

The time at which they came was the worst that fate could have selected for them to obtain a favorable reception here. At that time the whole province was in a state of political turmoil; a provincial election was simmering; large numbers of Japanese were coming to the province and the labor unions were up in arms at the "importation" of alien labor. The whole seaboard was seething with excitement, politicians eagerly seized their opportunity to make political capital out of the events, and the most strenuous protests against immigration from any Oriental country were vehemently passed and sent to Ottawa. The result was that the innocent Hindu was compelled to accept his place as one race among several who were said to be breaking into Canada at the instigation of capital to the discomfiture of labor. No discrimination was made and no effort put forth to discover whether or not these people, new to us, were but the precursors of further economic troubles. The result was that Hindus made their bow to Occidental civilization under conditions of somewhat unreasoning prejudice against every new importation of laborers in any sphere of employment.

As I am desirous of stating the fact fully and fairly, I must say that some of the Hindus who arrived during this period were not of the class most adapted or adaptable to the conditions prevailing in the labor world. They were ignorant of our language and customs; unskilled in our methods of labor; houseless, and unacquainted with the conditions of "roughing it" in this Last West. I saw all those things myself and moralized often. It is not to be wondered that some of these people, without a guide and shepherdless, should, under pressure of starvation, have solicited food. I know myself that they never asked for food without first begging pathetically for "burrok," which it took me some time to learn was the nearest approach they could make toward pronouncing the word "work." This unfortunate condition but added fuel to the fire, and these poor wanderers in the outskirts of our cities were represented to be dangerous, barbarian, licentious, and full of assaults. All of this I now know to have been untrue. The Hindu is not more naturally criminal than other men, and I question whether an equal number of Europeans or Anglo-Saxons from any Occidental country could have been dumped helpless into the midst of a strange and unsympathetic populace and be guilty of fewer deeds of violence or overt acts.

Some of those who came at first were not physically fitted to meet the climatic conditions of this country, and they failed, as any other race must fall under similar conditions. The point toward which I am now driving is this that in a marvellously short period of time the Hindus realized the elements which had constituted their mistakes and the unsuccessful ones among us were removed in a space of time that made many of us wonder how it was effected. The immigration was immediately checked; the ill-conditioned were sent home, and since then only such as were fully equipped to make their way in the conditions prevailing here have been allowed to come. None of our immigration problems here in the West has righted itself so completely, so quickly, and so wholly from within itself.

The Hindus we have in the province to-day are adapted to the conditions they are in harmony with their surroundings, they are well thought of, and in demand as farm laborers and for other forms of manual labor. To be more than this they do not seem to aspire. They are frugal, temperate, law-abiding citizens, loyal to their employers and manifesting a commendable desire to acquaint themselves with our language and national ideals. They are acquainted somewhat with British constitutional government, and have a most ready perception of the essential features of those under which we live. They have no alien allegiance to forswear and nothing could ever compel them to be other than British subjects. As many times before they fought for Empire, and their fathers laid down their lives in defence of the British sovereignty, so they would again, and for no other. They have not tried to go to the United States because since coming to America they have learned more intimately that Canada is a British country and the United States is not. British territory and British institutions are good enough for them; they have no desire to experiment with other forms of government.

So they have acquired property among us, and all of them are on the way to naturalization, though that seems a strange thing to have to say. That British subjects, the sons of those who held, compact and intact, the British power in India, should have to go through just the same process in order to become a British subject in Canada as has the Japanese, a Chinaman, or a Swede, is something which puzzles them, notwithstanding their training in esoteric and mystic religions.

They have acquired property here, and have become permanent residents. They own in Victoria $300,000 worth of property, and in Vancouver they possess holdings well worth $2,000,000. They are rapidly acquiring knowledge of our social customs and business methods. They wear our clothes to the last stitch, excepting the turban, and, after trying one of these myself, I admit that were I accomplished in the art of winding a turban so that it would stay put I might adopt that form of headwear for myself. The turban has no religious significance, is no sign of caste, no social badge; nothing but a comfortable headgear from which the Hindu is loathe to part, and I do not blame him.

I could print a hundred letters telling me of the faithfulness of the Hindu in his service to his employer; the reliance that may be safely placed upon him at his work, and his unshrinking application of his strength to his varied tasks. Altogether, my opinion is that of the several racial types who have crossed the Pacific Ocean to participate in our great toil of reducing this western province to its final productive power, the Hindu is the most desirable, and I cannot truly say that he is in any sense undesirable. The Hindus of that city have raised $1,000 for the establishment of a night school in Vancouver, and they have sent home to India $6,000 for the education of their relations who are looking ultimately toward British Columbia as a land of promise. Those who come after these who are now here will be qualified and equipped to take their place in the economic world in a way with which those now here had to become acquainted after their arrival, and the long process of adaptation.

Now all these things are true of the Hindu as a man. It is fitting that we take a look at ourselves. We permit the Japanese who comes to our country to acquire property, naturalize, vote and have a voice in our affairs, transacting such business as his acumen dictates. We also permit him to bring with him or send home to Japan for his wife, and as many of his offspring, male or female, as he desires to remove to this country. He may marry here if he chooses, and so long as he conforms to our sanitary and social laws we interfere not with him. We do not ask him to pay any head tax when he comes to our country. We require only that he shall have $50 in negotiable securities or coin to guarantee us that he will not become a charge on our citizens. We have an entente cordiale between the governments by the terms of which no more than 400 Japanese are permitted to emigrate to Canada each year. All of this works very well and smoothly, and the friction of a few years ago has ceased. We are at peace.

We permit any reasonable number of Chinese—men or women—to come to Canada and enter our ports on payment of a head tax of $500. After they are here they possess all the privileges of our civilisation and may naturalise as easily as the immigrant from anywhere. A Chinaman may come here, acquire property, send home and bring one, two, three, or four of his wives with him and live in polygamous relations with all these, and we do not raise any protest. How do we know? What do we care? It is none of our business, and that is what I really think. Just while I am at this point in this narrative I may as well say that I consider it quite as creditable to a Chinaman to live in open or undisguised polygamous relation with half a dozen only wives as it is for us to pretend to practice monogamy when some of those who raise the loudest clamour against this sort of thing do not. But this is not an essential part of the story. The Hindu is a monogamist by tradition and practice; as faithfully so as the Anglo-Saxon. Yet he is not permitted to bring his wife to this country, and no female child of his may come near to smile into his eyes. He must move among the sights and hear the happy domestic songs of those for whom he labors, but he must be al

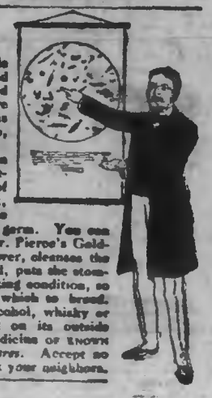
Afraid of Ghosts



Many people are afraid of ghosts. Few people are afraid of germs. Yet the ghost is a fancy and the germ is a fact. If the germ could be magnified to a size equal to its terrors it would appear more terrible than any fire-breathing dragon. Germs can't be avoided. They are in the air we breathe, the water we drink.

The germ can only prosper when the condition of the system gives it free scope to establish itself and develop. When there is a deficiency of vital force, languor, restlessness, a sallow cheek, a hollow eye, when the appetite is poor and the sleep is broken, it is time to guard against the germ. You can fortify the body against all germs by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It increases the vital power, cleanses the system of clogging impurities, enriches the blood, puts the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition in working condition, so that the germ finds no weak or tainted spot in which to breed. "Golden Medical Discovery" contains no alcohol, whisky or habit-forming drugs. All its ingredients printed on its outside wrapper. It is not a secret nostrum but a medicine of KNOWN COMPOSITION and with a record of 40 years of cures. Accept no substitute—there is nothing "just as good." Ask your neighbors.

Department of the Naval Service

SEALED TENDERS, addressed to the undersigned and endorsed "Tender for the Erection of Wireless Telegraph Station," at Midland, Ontario, will be received at this office until noon, on July twenty-fourth, 1911

Plans, specifications and form of contract to be entered into can be seen on and after July tenth instant, at the office of the Superintendent of Wireless Telegraphs, Department of the Naval Service, Ottawa, the Office of the Agent of the Department of Marine and Fisheries, Parry Sound, Ontario, or the Office of the Postmaster at Midland, Ontario.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed forms supplied, and signed with their actual signatures, stating their occupations and places of residence. In the case of firms, the actual signature, the nature of the occupation, and place of residence of each member of the firm must be given.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of the Naval Service, equal to ten per cent. (10 p. c.) of the amount of the tender, which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,
G. J. DESBARATS,
Deputy Minister.

THE PROBLEM OF IMMIGRATION

lowed only to think of those who are equally dear to him and as much a part of his own life as are our loved ones of ours. But his are in a far-away land. He must not be guilty of an overt look, much less an overt act, lest he be considered a menace to our social safety. Not many Europeans could stand the strain of similar conditions, and yet we aggravate the discrimination in his case by permitting really less desirable and trustworthy people of other and alien nations to foster their home traditions and companionships even when their social and domestic habits defy our notions of propriety. I do not believe there is any sane man or domesticated woman in Canada who will be found to say that this is right. It is a condition which we do not impose even upon our pet animals, and yet we inflict it upon a people whose religious traditions are older than ours; whose domestic ideals are as pure as our own, and who are men and women of like passions with ourselves. I have always claimed when I have been compelled to champion our civilimtion to assert that these things are so only because we do not understand what we are doing to these people who, though not of our race, are Imperially bone of our bone and flesh of our flesh.

I believe my readers will be interested in knowing something about the religion of these people. We have sent missionaries to them to convert them from Paganism, and we have looked upon India as a great empire groaning under the darkness of a Pagan idolatry. We are, of course, a superior people. I have read many tomes of missionary literature and have yet to learn that there is a general appreciation or knowledge of the fact that India had its Martin Luther even as Europe had. I had to learn from a Hindu that there was about simultaneously with the Lutheran Reformation a great schism in the traditional religious system of India, and that the people whom we call—or who call themselves—Sikhs are so designated because of their adherence to the reformed religion. All Sikhs are Hindus, but not all Hindus are Sikhs; now you can understand the difference. These latter are of the Indians, but also of the Hindus; they are of the same class as those once addressed by the great Gallilean Teacher, who said to His disciples, "Ye are in the world, but not of the world." Of the religion of the Sikhs I have not room to write, but I may tell you that in its general resemblance to Protestant religions it most nearly resembles that of the Quakers. It recognizes the great Spiritual influences of a being similar in the Sikh's conception to that of a Christian's God, and the personal influence of this being is evidenced or recognised in much the same manner and according to the same theory as that held by the Quakers. They are in no sense idolators, and among those with whom I have had the privilege of heart converse in these matters I have found that their conception of God is as sacred, as whole, as reverent, as classical, as unmystical and everything else Godlike, as is my own. The brotherhood which exists between the Sikhs as members of a like religious cult is so much superior to that often exhibited by professional Christians that if a tree is to be known by its fruits they have the drop on us. If religion has any restraining influence in the shaping of the acts of a man's life, I would as soon trust the Sikh's religion as I would any other to do that work. It is free from many of the obscurities and mystifications that have always made the acceptance of the Christian dogmas a matter of difficulty to the Hindu people. It has its own mysteries, but they are with no more difficulty resolved into matters of acceptance by faith than many of the dogmas of Christian theology.

What, then, do the Hindus (Sikhs) who are among us ask? I might explain to you why I parenthesised the word "Sikh" there. It is because there are no Hindus in this country who are not Sikhs. No Hindu in the accepted sense of the term ever comes to this country or emigrates to any soil off the shores of India. To do so would be to sacrifice his caste and he would become to himself and to his fellows what a Chinese was once without his queue—a man without a country!

I answer my own question by saying that all the Sikh asks is a square deal. He does not want the bars let down so that hordes of his countrymen may come to Canada. He is quite intelligent enough to appreciate the economic problems that would be raised and made embarrassing to everyone in this country were this to happen. He knows enough to perceive that only a moderate immigration of Sikhs to Canada can be tolerated. But he knows there is a niche in the industrial requirements and in the labor situation in this country which he can fill perhaps better than anyone else, and he asks only that he be given the same chance in a country which he loves, and is a part of the same Empire for which he would readily die, as those aliens who perhaps never at heart become subjects of other than their own native sovereigns. He asks—and when I say "asks" I do not mean demands—only that he shall not be discriminated against and placed at a serious disadvantage in the fostering of those sentiments which are recognised—particularly by Anglo-Saxon people—as lying at the basis of all true loyalty, social peace, and national progress. He wants to bring his wife here and have his home here, perhaps die here, and should he die here he will not ask that his bones be cratet and sent back across the sea. He asks only that his remains may be disposed of in that time-honoured and sanitary way which perhaps European people will have to adopt before they solve their sanitary problems in their entirety.

I think, and now that you have read his story, I am sure that you think he ought to be treated with some degree of fairness in the matters which we send missionaries to India to teach him lie at the basis of all physical sanctity, social safety, domestic happiness, and national progress. When these matters are discussed in your Parliament I hope that the reading of this paper will have contributed somewhat to your understanding of the issues involved and an appreciation of the manner in which the question must be settled.

I can contribute no more thoughtful and authoritative conclusion to this article than by quoting the words of Lord Crewe, uttered when this subject was under discussion at the late Imperial Conference.

At the Imperial Conference, New Zealand proposed that the dominions be entrusted with wider legislative powers regarding British and foreign shipping. The Earl of Crewe said that before the resolution was moved he desired to refer generally to Indian migration and immigration. He had had the advantage, or disadvantage, of considering the question, first as Colonial Secretary, and secondly as Secretary for India. In both offices he had come to the conclusion that no question could be discussed at the conference more difficult in some aspects than Indian immigration and the treatment of members of native

THE INITIAL PRODUCER

The Man to Consider in the Reciprocity Discussion

Hon. Frank Oliver told Brandon electors that the farmers, when they asked for reciprocity last December, had little idea of the magnitude which the question would soon assume. No longer was the question confined to Canada. The United States and the United Kingdom were now both energetically discussing it. He accepted as a first principle of economics that taxation should be heavy on luxuries and light on food stuffs. The initial producer had the right to dispose of his product to the best advantage. His being permitted to do so, and being facilitated in doing so, was necessarily and unquestionably in the interest of every legitimate industry in the country. For every industry of every kind and description in Canada lived, moved, and had its being absolutely and entirely upon the work of the initial producer in developing the raw material of the country. Any initial producer who opposed the reciprocity agreement was opposing something which was in his own interests. He repeated that every legitimate interest in Canada depended on the continued expansion of the initial producing industries, notably and above all others that of agriculture. The expansion of the farming industry depended upon the profit the farmer could make and, in turn, the profit he could make depended upon the market he could get. Upon that principle the Dominion Government has taken its life in its hands. It had introduced the reciprocity agreement into Parliament and was prepared to press the question to a conclusion before the country. Mr. Oliver said he did not believe that men from the broad prairies of the West would ever make a demand upon the Government for a policy of sectional interest.

FUGITIVE ON LINER?

German Police Say Forger Is Bound For Montreal.

Montreal, July 19.—According to information received at the local German consulate, Wilhelm Johann Gustav Schlottman of Wismar, Germany, wanted by the police of that city on a charge of having obtained cash to the amount of over $30,000 on forged checks, is supposed to be now on the water heading in the direction of Montreal.

Traveling with Schlottman, who was a prominent lawyer in his native city is said to be Miss Karla Meschutt, the daughter of a Wismar merchant who has been missing from her home since a day or two previous to Schlottman's disappearance.

While most of the money which Schlottman is said to have carried away from Germany with him was the result of cleverly forged checks in the name of some of his clients, it is understood that charges of embezzlement are also to be laid against the man.

The local police authorities, as well as those at Quebec, have been notified to be on the lookout for Schlottman, who is described as being 37 years of age, about five feet eight inches in height, with a strong thick set face, heavy moustache, slightly bald, blue eyes, florid complexion and always wearing a binocle.

MARKET REPORTS.

Liverpool Wheat Futures Close slightly Lower, Chicago Lower—Live Stock —Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, July 19.—With supplies of new wheat piling up here and with the world's available supply showing a substantial increase, the market for the cereal slowly succumbed to-day under the crush. Closing prices varied from the same as last night to 1-4c to 3-8c down. In corn there was a net decline of 1c to 1 3-8c to 1 1-2c and on oats a loss of 1-2c to 1c. Provisions wound up at 2 1-2c to 10c and 12 1-2c greater cost.

The Liverpool market closed to-day ½d to ¾d higher on wheat and unchanged to ¼d lower on corn, compared with yesterday. Berlin wheat closed ⅛c lower, Paris ⅛c to 2⅛c lower.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Toronto Live Stock.

TORONTO, July 19.—The railways reported 89 carloads at the City Yards, consisting of 993 cattle, 1593 hogs, 2238 sheep and lambs and 357 calves.

Butchers.

Geo. Rowntree bought 400 cattle, or nearly if not fully one-half of the fat cattle on sale, at the following prices: Butchers' steers and heifers, $5.10 to $5.50; good to choice cows at $4.30 to $5; canners at $3.50, and common cows, $3.50; bulls, $3.25 to $4.65.

Stockers.

A few lots of stockers, 600 to 800 lbs. each, sold at $3.80 to $4.50 per cwt.

Milkers and Springers.

A fairly good supply of milkers and springers sold at from $35 to $60; but we heard of three choice cows bringing $70.

Veal Calves.

Upwards of 400 veal calves were sold at $4 to $8.50 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

Receipts of sheep and lambs (especially lambs) were large, over 2200 being on sale. Lambs dropped from $4 to $5 per cwt., one of the greatest slumps in the history of the market.

Lamb prices ranged at from $6 to $7 per cwt., while last Thursday $10 to $11 per cwt. was paid. Sheep, ewes, sold at $3.50 to $4.25, with a few yearlings at $5.

Hogs.

Mr. Harris quoted selects, fed and watered, at $7.40, and $7.10 f.o.b. cars at country points.

Council Did Not Object

Special to The Examiner:

ST. THOMAS, JUL Y19.—The story that the council had objected to the bills the Hydro-Electric Commission presented, is denied by the authorities. The rate charged was according to the contract.

Would Fight For England

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, JULY 19.—Jack Johnston is quoted as being so pleased with his treatment in England that he is likely to become a citizen of Britain. He would fight for England in time of war, but not for the States, he said.

Caught By Convicts

Special to The Examiner

RENO, NEV., JULY 19.—Jas. Atone, an embezzler, was chased and caught by fellow-convicts working on the road, when he broke jail.

BAD FIRE IN TORONTO

Special to The Examiner

TORONTO, JUL Y17.—Thirty thousand dollars damage was done by fire at the Copeland, Chatterson building on Queen street east this morning. In the Grenadiers sergeants' mess, on the top floor, many valuable trophies were lost.

Many persons suffering from rheumatism have been permanently cured by Miller's Compound Iron Pills. Wm. Madill.

A JEALOUS MAN KILLS TWO OUTRIGHT, AND SERIOUSLY WOUNDS A THIRD

Horrible Tragedy at Anderson Father-in-law and Wife Are Murdered and Sister-in law Injured

USED A REVOLVER

Special Wire to The Examiner.

ANDERSON, S.C., JULY 19.—A terrible tragedy occurred here early this morning, which resulted in the death of two persons and in the serious wounding of a third. Samuel Ryde, a well-known resident, in a fit of rage, impelled by jealousy, fired at his father-in-law, his wife, and his sister-in-law, with a revolver, and his aim, in all three cases, was unfortunately too accurate. His shots killed his father-in-law and wife, and his wife's sister is badly injured. The affair has caused great excitement here.

Supposed Spider Turned Out To Be A Tarantula

The other evening a decidedly unwelcome guest made its appearance when Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Mitchell were entertaining a few friends. In the midst of the enjoyment what was thought to be a large spider was noticed and an exciting chase followed. Mr. Spider proved to be a decidedly agile insect, and it was only after a long pursuit that he was finally cornered and despatched. Then it was discovered that the supposed spider was nothing less than a specimen of the dread tarantula, whose bite is generally fatal. The tarantula had evidently invaded Peterborough in a bunch of bananas.

Carelessness Of Prospectors Cause Of The Big Fire

OTTAWA, JULY 18.—A. N. Molesworth, engineer in charge of the Transcontinental Railway construction around Cochrane, who is in Ottawa, attributes the disastrous fires in Northern Ontario to inexperienced and careless prospectors.

"Men enter the woods to prospect," he says, "who know nothing about the life. They light fires and leave them, without realizing what the consequences may be. The Porcupine country was in a highly inflammable condition, dry as parchment. The fires will not retard work on the T. & N. O."

OMEMEE, JULY 19.—On Monday County Police Magistrate Moore of Lindsay, presided over the cases of Thos. Rowan, Richard Morton, Edward Dancy and Charles Banks, charged with being drunk and disorderly in the quarters of the Omemee Division of the 45th Regiment. Several witnesses were called and the case for the Crown was clearly proven notwithstanding the able defence put forward by Mr. Geo. Jordan, the lawyer for the parties prosecuted. The fines imposed, together with the costs, amounted to $8.60 each. In concluding his remarks Magistrate Moore hinted that the Militia might take steps to prefer a more serious charge of a criminal character for breaking into the armoury.

Progress Being Made In Securing Of Cheap Cable Rates For Canada

OTTAWA, JULY 18.—In the House of Commons this evening Hon. Mr. Lemieux, replying to Mr. W. F. Maclean, who had advocated public ownership of telegraphs and cable lines, said he had been in communication with two Postmasters-General of Britain, Hon. Messrs. Buxton and Samuel, in reference to this very matter, and had found them both warm friends of cheaper rates between Canada and the mother country. An arrangement had been effected with the companies whereby the rates were set at twenty-five cents per word for urgent messages, twelve cents per word for semi-urgent messages to be delivered within a certain number of hours, and six cents per word for press messages. This, however, was not satisfactory to either Government and if further reductions were not made it was the intention to establish a State-owned cable, which, it was estimated, would cost only some $2,000,000.

Mr. Samuel, the British Postmaster-General, had informed the recent Imperial Conference definitely that unless the cable companies further reduced their rates in accordance with the Government's insistence, the British Government would proceed without delay with the construction of a State-owned cable.

"Speaking personally," said Mr. Lemieux, "I would like to see a State-owned cable between Canada and Britain. I believe it to be necessary to the Empire. I am not what you call a jingo, but I believe that if we are to tighten the bonds of union between the motherland and the dominions over the seas we cannot do better than cheapen the means of communication with the nerve-centre of the Empire." The whole matter had been under consideration at the recent Imperial Conference, and if the rates were not lowered to satisfactory figures the Government of Britain was committed to a State-owned cable. Already the British Government had purchased all the rights of the Marconi system in Britain, which was operated in connection with the naval stations.

"If, then," continued the Postmaster-General, "the members of the press and the public will be patient for a short time they will have a cheaper service in the not far distant future."

AN AMATEUR OPERATION FOR APPENDICITIS PERFORMED

Special to The Examiner

PORT ARTHUR, JULY 18.—On the banks of Rainy River, 200 miles directly north of Nepigon, lies a solitary trading station of the Hudson Bay Company, Fort Hope. The Europeans who live in that district are cut off from civilisation the whole year round.

Two weeks ago the wife of Harry McPherson, resident of Fort Hope, was taken ill and her husband was satisfied it was a case of appendicitis. The illness became so acute that the husband decided as a last resource to perform an operation. With but a slight knowledge of surgery, and armed with a few articles supplied in a small "first aid" case, he successfully carried out the operation.

The next matter was to reach some place where good nursing and care could be obtained, and a start was made immediately for the south, ten Indians being hired to make a 200-mile journey to Nepigon. Day after day the journey was continued. At one portage it was necessary to carry the woman thirteen miles, but she bore the trial bravely and now rests in McKellar Hospital.

Tyrus Cobb's Greatest Seven

In the series with the Athletics that closed Friday, Ty Cobb was the star to win the greatest honours. In this series Cobb did more phenomenal work than in any other set of games he ever played.

In the four contests Cobb was at bat thirteen times, scored seven runs and made seven hits, besides sending out two sacrifice flies. He drove in six runs besides that, and his hits totalled ten bases. His batting average for the series was .539.

Cobb made three sensational catches in the series, but his best work was on bases. On three separate days he made plays that will live in baseball history. Here they are:

Tuesday—Scored from second base on a sacrifice fly that Crawford sent to Oldring in the fifth inning.

Wednesday—Made clean hits of second base, third base and home in the first inning, and in the second he scored from second on Delahanty's sacrifice fly to Murphy, but it was not a clean run, as Livingstone lost the ball after tagging Ty.

Thursday—Won the game in the ninth inning by scoring from first on an ordinary single by Delahanty into right field.

And as far as history shows no one has ever made a like record.

A YEAR INDOORS

"For thirteen months I was so bad with chronic indigestion that I could not go out of doors. Nerves were unstrung, the heart bad and smothering feelings came on till I thought I would choke. Doctors' treatment failed me, so I began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which I thank for my present good health. I am now doing my housework and have a family of ten."

THE PETERBORO CHEESE BOARD MET THIS MORNING 3040 BOXES WERE DISPOSED OF

Board Was Well Represented---It 3-4 Was the Price Paid for the Entire Lot---Mr. Alexander White Ex-President of the Belleville Cheese Board Was Present at the Meeting---An Adjournment Was Made for Two Weeks

The regular fortnightly meeting of the Peterborough cheese board was held this morning. A large number of buyers was present. The board was also favoured with the presence of Mr. Alexander White, ex-president of the Belleville cheese board, now connected with the Seymour Power Company.

Three thousand and forty boxes were boarded. Mr. Watkins made the first bid, which was 11 9-16c. This was raised to 11¾c by Mr. Gillespie, who bought the following factories at that figure: Keene, Warminster, Shearer, Central Smith, Selwyn, Villiers, Warsaw, Westwood, Pine Grove, Maple Leaf, Lang, East Emily, Trewern.

At the same figure Mr. Kerr bought the following: Myrtle, Indian River, North Dummer, Bensfort, Cedardale, Fleetwood.

Mr. Cook at 11¾c took the five remaining factories.

The following factories boarded cheese:

Keene	90
Warminster	130
Shearer	115
Central Smith	173
Selwyn	157
Villiers	105

The Board then adjourned for two weeks.

Still Urgent Need Of Funds In The North

Although the people of Ontario have responded nobly to the call for financial assistance for the fire sufferers in the Porcupine district, there is still urgent needs for funds, and Peterborough people are urged to do their share in this most praiseworthy object. As announced, the Examiner is prepared to receive all donations and see that they are forwarded to the proper quarters. In other towns in Ontario, large amounts have been raised and Peterborough is not accustomed to fall behind in such movements. That the call is urgent is indicated by the following letter in to-day's "Globe" from the wife of the Mayor of Cobalt:

To the Editor of The Globe.—I wish you would print a notice in your valuable paper asking the good and charitable ladies of Toronto to help us in procuring clothes for the women and children who are left almost naked and destitute by the terrible fires in the north country—namely, Cochrane, Porcupine and Pottsville, besides about 150 settlers.

Children's or women's clothing or cash donations will be thankfully received, and I will see that the deserving people receive them. Again thanking you, I remain, yours very truly, Mrs. Sol. White.

NOMINEES CHOSEN

J. H. Burnham and E. A. Peck Selected as the Liberal—Conservative Candidates in West Peterborough

CONVENTION LAST NIGHT

At a meeting of delegates representative of the Liberal Conservatives of West Peterborough, held last night in the Conservatory Music Hall, J. H. Burnham, barrister, was nominated to contest West Peterborough in the Conservative interests for the House of Commons and E. A. Peck, barrister, chosen as the Conservative candidate for the Legislature. The nomination in each case was unanimous.

The meeting was largely attended. Mr. Jas. Kendry, president of the West Peterborough Liberal Conservative Association, was in the chair and the first business was the election of officers, which resulted in the following being chosen:

President—Jas. Kendry.

First Vice-President—Harry Phelan.

Second Vice-President — William Buller.

Third Vice-President—Milson Blewitt (Smith).

Secretary-Treasurer—Jas. Edgar.

The following chairmen were elected:

No. 1 Ward—Geo. Benton.
No. 2 Ward—Walter Fisher.
No. 3 Ward—Jos. Mills.
No. 4 Ward—Wm. Hill.
No. 5 Ward—Robt. Hamilton.
South Monaghan—Chas. Wicks.
North Monaghan—W. G. Howden.
Smith—T. T. Wilburn.
Ennismore—P. J. Scollard.
South Harvey—Thos. Elliott.
North Harvey—Peter Graham.
Galway—Wm. Dudman.
Cavendish—Alex. Simpson.

A resolution of confidence in Sir Jas. Whitney was passed on motion of J. J. Turner, Jr. and Harry Morgan.

A similar resolution of confidence in Mr. Borden was also carried. It was fathered by L. M. Hayes and William Croft.

A motion of regret at the intending retirement of Mr. T. E. Bradburn, M.P.P. from the political arena and of appreciation of his services as representative for West Peterborough in the legislature was moved by J. H. Burnham and seconded by W. G. Howden of North Monaghan and carried.

An anti-reciprocity motion introduced by G. A. Austin and George Moncrief was also passed.

On motion of Wm. Buller and R. Denne, Messrs. T. E. Bradburn and F. H. Dobbin were appointed to draft a letter of condolence from the Convention to be forwarded to the family of the late Hugh Waddell.

The next business was the nomination of candidates, those for the Dominion House being taken first.

J. H. Burnham was nominated by Joseph Batten and J. T. C. Laug and was the only name brought before the meeting.

Mr. Burnham in a brief speech accepted the nomination.

For the Legislature Mr. T. E. Bradburn, M.P.P., was nominated by W. H. Moore and Dr. Morrison but withdrew, stating his intention of retiring. At the same time he moved that E. A. Peck be made the nominee and his motion was seconded by Frank Adams.

Nominations were declared closed on motion of W. H. Moore and Harry Phelan.

The meeting was then brought to a close by the usual cheers for the King, Mr. Borden and the candidates.

CROP REPORT.

A bulletin on the crops and live stock of Canada has been issued recently. The condition of the field crops of Canada for the month ending June 30th, as compiled in the Census and Statistics Office from the reports of a large staff of correspondents, is, on the whole, quite satisfactory, although on account of uneven rainfall it is not uniform for all the provinces. Even in parts of the same province, as in Ontario, there is considerable inequality. For the most part in that province excellent reports are made, but there are districts in which the grains and hay have been badly affected for want of rains in May and June.

For the whole of Canada the condition of winter wheat is only 75.26 per cent. as compared with 100 for a full crop. This is ten per cent. less than last year, two per cent. less than in 1909, and nearly 14 per cent. less than three years ago. In Ontario it is only 73 per cent. of a full crop, as compared with 94.29 last year, 78.50 in 1909, and 88 in 1908. In Alberta, the only other province in which winter wheat is largely grown, the condition this year is 83.22 per cent., compared with 63.62 in 1910, 85.65 in 1909, and 95 in 1908. Spring wheat in all the provinces this year is given the high average condition of 94.78 at the end of June, which is better than in 1910 by 12.62 per cent., better than in 1909 by 8 per cent., and better than in 1908 by nearly 15 per cent. Ontario and British Columbia are the only provinces in which the conditions are under 90, and in Saskatchewan and Manitoba it is close to 100.

The average for barley is 93, which is six to ten per cent. better than in the preceding three years. It reaches close to 95 in the Northwest provinces, Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick, and over 90 in Nova Scotia and Quebec, a point below 90 in Ontario and only 84 in British Columbia.

Oats shows an average of 94.40 for all provinces, which is higher than any year since 1908, and is 95 or higher in Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick, Quebec, and the Northwest provinces. In Ontario it is close to 90, and over 90 in British Columbia.

Rye, peas, and mixed grains are given a condition of about 90 for the Dominion, and are higher than in any year, beginning with 1906. Hay and clover and alfalfa are both below last year's condition, and pasture is a point higher. In the three Northwest provinces the condition of pasture is over 100.

The feature of late cereals is the increase of area in flax, which is nearly 300,000 acres more than last year. The largest increase of flax is in Saskatchewan, where this crop, in recent years, has grown into great favour.

The numbers of live stock do not show much change from last year, but their condition at the end of June is very satisfactory. All classes are within less than two points of 100, and an excellent uniformity is shown throughout all the provinces.

THE MINISTER OF FINANCE.

There is little less reason for satisfaction at the return of Mr. Fielding in good health and working trim than there is for congratulation on the return of the Premier in like condition. There is much work and not a little worry ahead for both of them, but if there is any excess of disadvantage resting on either, it is Mr. Fielding that has to face it. He is the author of the reciprocity agreement; the great fight of the next few months will be about that agreement, and on Mr. Fielding will fall most heavily the onus if the Government should happen to be defeated or even partially worsted.

Mr. Fielding is a Minister whom this country could ill spare. He is less brilliant than some of his colleagues, notably the Premier himself, but he is painstakingly accurate and lucidly intelligent. He takes nothing for granted. His knowledge of financial detail and of commercial and industrial condition of the whole Dominion is marvellously comprehensive. Withal he is easily master of his great stores of information. His marshalling of facts and statistics in his budget speeches is singularly skilful, so that his financial statements, condensed, as they are, make interesting reading. It is fortunate that we have such a man in his position; his steadying power is simply incalculable. We have had in his fifteen-years term only one short period of financial stress and not even such a short period of financial panic.

Mr. Fielding has held the portfolio of finance for fifteen years without a break and without a ruffle. He had only a small surplus in his first year, and only a small one three years ago—in the year of depression. In every other year of the fifteen he has had a large surplus, and it looks just now as if the one for this year would make a new record. Revenue treads on the heels of trade and industry, and both trade and industry are flourishing as never before. Moreover, immigration is on the steady increase, and no intelligent observer needs to be told that every immigrant on the average brings into the country enough money to swell the volume of commerce by his consumption of dutiable goods.

For some reason, probably because he has been uniformly and continuously successful, Mr. Fielding receives scant consideration at the hands of Opposition publicists and politicians. He would be the last to complain of this, for he is not a whiner, and he has no compassion for himself. There is all the more reason why his own party friends should stand by him on all suitable occasions. His task is heavy enough: one way of lightening it is for Liberal members to master the finances, and thus be prepared to do their share of financial discussion when opportunity offers. This is especially true of the debate on reciprocity, which will come on soon, and may be protracted. There will be much speaking to do, and those who feel inclined to take part in the discussion will render a valuable service to their party by going into it as Mr. Fielding will go: thoroughly prepared to put up a forcible and educative plea.

THE BREAK UP OF BRITISH UNIONISM.

Through the operation of some causes that are obvious enough and others more obscure, what is called the Unionist party in the British Parliament seems to be shattering itself into fragments beyond all hope of immediate reconsolidation. One apparent cause of the disintegration is the inept leadership of Mr. Balfour; another is the unbridged chasm between him and the followers of Joseph Chamberlain; a third is the deliberate and persistent effort of the House of Lords to reassert legislative powers which had long ago fallen into disuse, and which the greatest Conservative statesman had not for a century ventured to assert in practice.

There may have been other minor causes in operation to produce the cleavages that are now taking place, but these are the principal ones, and of these the last is by far the most important and most effective. The House of Lords in 1902 assented readily to an Education Bill, which made serious inroads on the National System of Education, established in 1870. For several years the drastic provisions of this law were sternly, but passively resisted by Nonconformist churchmen, whose leader was the Rev. Dr. Clifford, well known to the people of Canada. Five years ago the Liberals came into power, with the late Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman as Prime Minister. They passed in the House of Commons an Education Bill intended to relieve the educational situation. It was amended by the Lords, so as to make it impossible of acceptance by the Commons, and it was then dropped. Four years ago resolutions were passed by the Commons, affirming that the Lords' veto on any measure should not be absolute and final—for all practical purposes the same resolutions now in question between the two Houses of Parliament as embodied in the "Parliament Bill". Since that time another Education Bill was passed by the Lords.

To fill the cup of their folly and complete their political suicide the Unionists, by their majority in the House of Lords, hurked and delayed the Lloyd-George budget, and thus interfered with the revenue and supply bill of the year. Twice within a few months were general elections held to determine what the constitution on this point should be and twice the Unionists went down to defeat, with a majority of over a hundred against them in the House of Commons. The latter then passed the "Parliament Bill," which takes away from the House of Lords the right to either veto or amend a financial bill passed by the Commons, and allows only a temporary and delaying veto on other legislation. If the House of Lords refuses to pass this measure the King will be asked to create peers enough to pass it, about five hundred being necessary. There seems to be no doubt that he will do this, and now the Unionists are in serious trouble over the prospect. The wiser ones advise that the bill limiting their own functions be passed; the more extreme members of the House of Lords avow their determination to fight against the Bill to "the bitter end". It seems more likely that the majority will yield, but that will not prevent the Lords from being shorn, not merely of their privileges and powers, but of their prestige. They acted recklessly and unwisely, and, after sowing the wind, they are now reaping the whirlwind.

There is, in their fate, a warning to the Conservative party in Canada at the present time. The reciprocity agreement with the United States was a non-party measure, when it was introduced. The Conservatives in Parliament, allying themselves with the capitalists outside, made it a party issue. Had they acted wisely they would have quietly accepted the measure and would thus have shared in the prestige of its success, or have thrown entirely on the Government the responsibility of its failure. They have, instead, delayed the Session, campaigned the country, and disturbed business. They are threatening to force on a general election a year before it is necessary, and before it is possible to pass the redistribution bill required after each decennial census. There is among them a rapidly-developing split, which bids fair to become permanent and thus leave Liberals in power for at least another decade.

World is Growing Better Says Lloyd George

The Chancellor of the Exchequer, who was accompanied by Mrs. Lloyd George and their little daughter, presided at the annual floral service at the Welsh Baptist church, Castle street, W. London, recently.

Mr. Lloyd George, who spoke in Welsh, said he was not discouraged when he heard the people complaining that things were not as they used to be. Everybody said that about everything. They all knew of the man who went to the editor of "Punch" and said, "Sir, 'Punch' is not as good as it used to be," and the editor of "Punch" replied, "It never was." (Laughter). It was the same with everything.

There were only two ways of appealing to people, by way of the past or of the future. There was many a man with a conservative leaning who preferred to refer to the past, and his motto was, "The old country is not as it used to be." But he (the Chancellor) wanted not to refer alone to the old paths, but to raise the country higher. He had recently been reading the history of the revivals in Wales, and there was much that was very interesting in it, not only from a religious standpoint, but as a meditation on the great movements that made nations progress.

They were apt to complain that things were getting worse, but they were not. The world was getting better. It was like the ebbing and flowing of the tide. At one time it was high tide and they thought it would remain. The flow receded and they got the dry beach with many a human being withering on the sea shore.

Proceeding to refer to a paper on the "Church Militant" which had been read by Mr. Hunt, the Chancellor said religion had something to do with ordinary political life, and they must bring religion into the realms of statesmanship. Why? The responsibility was that of religion and the disgrace of religion's also if things went wrong.

How did other countries judge us? Not as Britishers only, but as a Christian country, and if the country was full of poverty and unhappiness and defilement it was religion that suffered. Therefore for the sake of the good name of religion, religion must be the inspiration of politics here. All the poverty in London was really at the door of religion; it was the responsibility of the Christian church.

What was the first thing that the Christian church did when she was established? It was to look after the poor, to tell her goods, to see that there was no single poor man in her midst. There had never been a revival or reform carried through except through the help and leadership of men who gained nothing by the movement. That was one of the mistakes the Labour Party had made. They thought they would win reform through the people who suffered only; but no reform was ever brought about only through the people who suffered. They always received the help and leadership of those who profited nothing by the movement. That was the history of the world from beginning to end.

The people who received the old age pensions were not the people who brought it about. Take any reform, the extension of the franchise, for instance. The people who moved that it should be extended already had it, but if it had not been for them there would have been no extensions. And he would say the same of the ladies. They would have the franchise through the help of the other sex who had already had it. He would tell them more than that. Reforms were won here through the aid of people who lost personally by them.

Sacrifice was the basis of the Christian religion, and that was why people should interpret political principles in the light of Christian principles. There were political reformers who believed conscientiously that they would never be able to save the people until they destroyed religion. There never was a greater or a more destructive mistake than that.

But for the spirit of religion and self-sacrifice, reforms would never have been brought about, and if they destroyed the Christian churches they would turn this country into a burned up wilderness. There would be nothing between the people and what was called force. What was that? The spirit of cruelty, the spirit of despotism, the spirit of self-seeking. There was nothing between the people and tyranny but the spirit of the Christian churches.

TO-DAYS MARKET

To-day marks the first anniversary of what proved to be one of the most disastrous conflicts between capital and labour that the history of this country records. We refer to the strike of the Grand Trunk Railway employees, which was called for by the Brotherhood of Railway Conductors, brakemen and firemen, on the night of the 16th day of July at 9 o'clock. The strike, which lasted about two weeks, completely crippled the entire Grand Trunk Railway system.

Piano Pupils

The piano pupils of Miss McCabe who tried the recent examinations of the Toronto Conservatory of Music were all successful in passing with first-class honours—a splendid showing. Miss Ethel Noble took first-class honours in senior second piano, and Miss Veronica Carveth ad Miss Nora Mollot first-class honours in junior piano.

Tax Bills

The tax bills have been sent out Those people who have bought or sold property lately will please come to tax office and have it adjusted at once as later on I will be too busy taking in the taxes. The office will be open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. for first payment, including 1st of August. Come early and avoid the rush.

Urge Conclusion of Treaty.

St. Petersburg, July 19.—The Novoe Vremya urges the conclusion of an Anglo-Russian treaty of arbitration.

The Moscow Russkoe Slovo styles the treaty signed by Japan and Great Britain as the end of Anglo-Japanese alliance.

The amendments in the new version it says, are tantamount to annulment of the alliance, and will terminate Japanese hegemony in the Pacific. Since the Portsmouth conference, The Slovo says, Japan has neglected her navy and devoted her whole resources to the army and the establishment on the continent, preparatory to a further advance to the northwest. An end has now been put to Japan's continental policy. Henceforth she must watch the United States and spend money for a powerful fleet.

The Russkoe Slovo urges immediate negotiations for an Anglo-Russian treaty of arbitration, "to free Russia from wearisome Japanese tutelage in the Far East."

Wife Murderer Suicided.

St. Ignace, Mich., July 19.—Robert Inglis, on his way to the Marquette prison to serve a 40-year sentence jumped overboard from a car ferry yesterday between Mackinac City and St. Ignace. He refused aid from a life-preserver thrown to him and drowned.

Inglis was sentenced from Grand Rapids for killing his wife about six weeks ago.

BEITH WILL PITCH FOR BOWMANVILLE AGAINST PETERBORO ON SATURDAY

A letter from Bowmanville last night to the Secretary of the Peterborough Baseball Club, gives the interesting information that the Goodyear team will have their strongest team of the season here on Saturday, and that they expect to show that their victory in Bowmanville was no fluke, by administering a thrashing to Manager Quinlan's braves right at Riverside Park. Needless to say the Petes are looking at the matter in a different light, and, judging by the way in which they are turning out for practice this week are determined to make things interesting all the way for the Rubber men. Which ever way the contest goes it is certain that it will be one of the snappiest exhibitions of the season, and undoubtedly will attract a big crowd of fans and fanettes. Manager Quinlan will pitch for Peterborough, Ernie Rahmel who pitched the last game against Bowmanville, has expressed a desire to be sent in against the Goodyear team in the next game at Bowmanville, and will likely be accomodated. Beith will work for Bowmanville.

Jeff Can Defeat Johnson Says Bob Fitzsimmons

It will be many years before a 'white hope' is unearthed who will be able to grab the world's heavyweight title from Jack Johnson, is the opinion of Bob Fitzsimmons, former ring champion, who is now enjoying a two months' respite from stage duties on his Dutchess (N.J.) farm.

"The only fellow who can defeat Johnson is John Barleycorn, provided Jeffries don't come back," declared Bob emphatically. "In my opinion, Jeff is the only living man who can lick Johnson. I believe if I could have him in tow for five or six months Ueff would be able to defeat two Johnsons in one night.

"Jeff is willing to take another Whack at the negro," said Fitz, "but I do not believe he will ever fight again, as he is up against a game of 'My wife won't let me.'"

While Fitzsimmons hold out mighty little encouragement for the defeat of Johnson he declares it can be brought about by the development of talent.

"Give me a college-bred athlete, about twenty years old, 6 feet 5 inches in height and about 225 avoirdupois, and I will guarantee to turn out a white champion within five years," said Fitz. "I prefer college athletes, as they have brains and are more easily instructed. They catch on quicker, you know, than those big fellows who have no education.

"It takes a good while to learn the boxing game," continued Fitz. "To be a boxer one must begin at the bottom. Experience makes champions. If I could get hold of a college boy, within one year's time I would have him sufficiently groomed to take on an easy mark. I would teach him the science of bag-punching every day for a year and then I would let him wallop me every time he could hit me."

Fitz expects a young iron worker from Cleveland to spend a few weeks on his farm who, he believes, possesses promising pugilistic qualities, and, according to Fits, the boy may prove a "diamond in the rough." Fit'zs "unknown" is eighteen years of age, 6 feet 2 1-2 inches in his stocking feet and tips the beam at the 220-pound mark. "He's as hard as a nail and what a whale he'll be when he is twenty years old!" remarked Fitz as he exploited his protege.

AN APPEAL TO PETERBOROUGH SPORTSMEN.

(By kind permission of the Editor.)

Gentlemen,—I want to draw your attention to something that I am sure will interest everyone of you. The C. G. E. Football Club and the Peterborough Church Football League have as you know, worked hard this season to popularize football and have met with very great success. There is more talk about football in the city now than there has been for years past. This all helps sport, doesn't it? As you know, the Church League schedule is over and the cup winners are St. James'. Now remains the C. G. E. and here we in Peterborough have a chance, if only we will take it, of winning the championship of Ontario and of obtaining the honour of bringing home right here in our city, the championship cup and gold medals. Now, this is something worth working for and working hard. Fancy a Peterborough team bringing home the championship of Ontario, and it can be done. More, I confidently say it is almost certain to be accomplished. I will tell you why I am so confident, and then I will show you what you can do to help bring this about. The C.G.E. have entered for the finals in the Ontario Association. If they win they bring to the city the championship of Ontario and the cup and medals. And you all know what this means. Now, th. C.G.E. have already won the Midland League championship, a very worthy feat, as those who study football here, easily know. Now, here comes the interesting part. I assure you the C.G.E. this season have met and defeated teams every bit as good as those they will be called upon to meet in the Ontario finals and they are confident of success and are eager to do their best to win. Now, here comes your part and your duty in a nutshell. They want around $150 to do this and here you can help them. Collectors will be coming around to you for help and it is upto you to help. They will do their best, will you do yours. Smallest contributions will be welcome, because all helps to make up the sum wanted. The team and all connected with it are doing their best Will you help them? Remember, it is up to you now!

PERCIVAL G. S. WEBB.

TALKATIVE FANS DRIVE PLAYERS FROM PASTIME

Nothing is so nauseating to the baseball player as the pestiferous fan who insists upon talking to and making the acquaintance of every pill tosser. The bug who calls the ball player by his first name as he passes him on the street is never liked by the exponent of the national pastime. On the contrary, he is despised. The travelling man who "butts into" the ball players' conversation in the hotel lobby is lucky to get away without having his facial architecture materially changed. But so long as baseball is the national game, so long will the bil players be pestered by the bugs.

There is one instance where a great young player gave up a lucrative position on the diamond because he couldn't stand to be the target for an endless amount of inane worshippers. The player in question was V. Campbell, who lately returned to the Pittsburg club.

Campbell quit baseball at the wind-up of the 1910 season, after he had made the greatest record of any young fielder in the game, simply because he was obliged to talk "shop" everywhere he went during the winter. Whether in a cafe, ballroom, drawing-room, or on the streets, Campbell's friends invariably made baseball the sole topic of conversation when he was around.

Fred Clarke, manager of the Pirates, was driven to an obscure farm in Kansas by the pestiferous fan. Most ball players who realize that they can make a bit of money out of baseball hike to a farm in the off season simply to avoid the talkative bug. Many players, like Campbell, quit the game rather than be pestered to death with the lifeless arguments of their alleged friends and admirers.

WOLGAST APPEARS TO BE INVINCIBLE AT 133 POUNDS

Ad. Wolgast looks unbeatable at 133 pounds. But while few now believe that any man in the world has more than an outside chance with him at the ringside weight, there are still three boxers of renown whom he has not beaten and with whom he can draw money such as will make it worth while for him to take them on. Two are legitimate lightweights, the other a few pounds above the notch. They are Freddie Welsh, a Briton; Knockout Brown, the star of the East, and Packey McFarland, the Chicago boy who has been hounding the Michigan wildcat for a match these many months.

Welsh has beaten the other pair to the first whack at Ad's title, being matched to go twenty rounds with him on Labour Day in a California arena. Freddie has posted $1,000 of the $10,000 side bet that the champion insists he must make and has a wealthy Englishman backing him who will furnish the rest of the coin.

Welsh, because of his great boxing skill, would be an attraction with Wolgast in a twenty-round encounter. He saw Wolgast crush Moran, his fellow-countryman, and he still thinks he can shade Ad in an hour of fighting. He deserves a chance.

BROWN DESERVES A CHANCE

K. O. Brown, by virtue of two close arguments he gave the champion when the latter returned to the ring after breaking his arm, also merits a whirl at thehonours. He has beaten every lightweight in the East and is a tough, rugged boy, who is dangerous because of a peculiar fighting style.

McFarland would be the legitimate opponent for Wolgast were he able to do 133 at gong time. But he can't scale under those circumstances and be strong. That much he admits. Wolgast figures he can whip Packey at any weight, and sooner or later, because of the chunks of money such a bout would bring in, the champ is going to give the stock yards man a fight.

Except for these three there is none who has class enough to have his demands for a match call for serious attention. Matt Wells, the English champion, refuses to do better than 135 at three o'clock for a night fight, which makes him impossible. So, although Wolgast stands supreme as the best of his inches in the universe, he need not lack for a few matches when he dons the gloves again next fall.

WOLGAST'S WIN DECISIVE

Wolgast's defeat of Owen Moran was so decisive as to leave not the slightest question as to his superiority. He won in every round, from the time the wily Briton first led with his left until he sank helpless to the mat in the thirteenth round, a thoroughly whipped fighter. Wolgast beat him as he has beaten all the others—with his vicious body fighting. He used the loop-the-loop to the face and worried and punished Moran with it in the embraces, but the stomach jolts were the ones that battered the game foreigner into submission.

The result surprised a lot of the wise ones. They felt certain that Moran would beat Wolgast, for a ways at least, possibly for ten rounds. But Owen, so completely was he outfought, did not earn a shade in a single three-minute spell. Wolgast, hunching his left shoulder up to protect his jaw, foiled all of the Briton's efforts to get set for one of his stunning right crosses. In order to find Ad's jaw at all Moran had to hit so fast that he sacrificed power for speed.

Owen took a terrific licking and was knocked out for the first time in his long and brilliant ring career. He was so completely outmatched that there is little probability of his ever getting another chance at the lightweight championship. He would be a poor attraction if matched with Wolgast again, particularly in this country. They might draw abroad. The Englishman, who was confident that he was destined to take the championship back home, was a heart-broken man after the battle, and he made himself look bad by crying "foul" when there was none at the ringside who saw a low blow in the final round.

Moran is a championship possibility no longer. Wolgast has endeared himself to the hearts of the fans by a wonderful campaign against a sturdy lot of challengers and stands at the top of the heap, unquestioned, but not unchallenged.

Rockville, L. I., July 17.—Without doubt the most unique unassisted triple play in all baseball history was pulled off by Jesse Ryerson, catcher and captain of the Rockville Center team of the South Side League of Long Island in the last game with Oceanside on the local grounds. Indeed, but for the fact that it is possible to retire but three men on a side in one inning, the marvelous feat would have proved a quadruple play, as four runners were retired, figuratively speaking.

Oceanside had three men on the bases with none out in the first inning. With two and three on him, the batter missed a third strike. Ryerson, the Rockville catcher, purposely dropped the third strike. Now, of course, under prevailing conditions the batsman was out the minute he missed the ball, and he had no business running to first base. None of the runners was forced to advance. But the athletes of the South Side League are somewhat hazy on the rules. The retired batsman rushed on to first base. The runner at third took it for granted that he was expected to score, so he rushed for the plate. Ryerson met him half way and tagged him out. The man at second in the meantime was being crowded off the midway by the logical holder of first base. He lit out for third and Ryerson raced over to the near corner and also tagged him. This completed the unassisted triple play, as Ryerson was given the put-out on the batter, despite the fact that the third strike was dropped.

Now, none of the players of either team had tumbled to the fact that the umpire had declared out the batsman. When Ryerson had effected the triple killing he looked up and saw the player entitled to first base and who had been crowded off by the batsman, midway between first and second. The runner attempted to sneak back to first, but Ryerson threw the ball to that baseman and the player was finally run down by the first baseman, second baseman and Ryerson, the latter securing the supposed put-out. Thus, you see, had it been possible, Catcher Ryerson would have had four put-outs on one play.

McInnis, Collins, Barry and Baker—the greatest infield in the world. How's that for an appraisal? Well, Connie Mack makes it. He picks his four youngsters, melded together, as the finest quarter of infielders in the business, and says that outside of a couple of years there will never have been an infield in the history of the game that will compare with those four lads for all-round work.

McInnis is the lad of whom he is especially proud. Manager Mack always wanted to utilise the services of Tiny Jack because of the ability with which he poked holes in opposing twirlers. So he thought he would make him into an outfielder. One day the wise, cute and cunning Harry Davis sidled up to the Big Boss and tittered: "Stick young Mac on first for a change."

Connie went out to McInnis and said: "Can you jump for them, Mac?" "Can I jump for them! Put 'em over and watch me."

Connie took him out and pelted them over Mac's bean time after time, and the same T. after T. Mac leaped into the yielding ozone and dragged the pill out of the embrace of the breezes.

"Get out on first to-day and take a chance," said Connie.

And it is a safe bet that Mac will stick on first all the rest of the season unless he takes a slump, and Connie figures that Harry Davis could go in and work well until Mac gets a rest and returns to shape again.

Now, gentle fans, here is an inventory by the keen McGillicuddy that will interest the lads who whoop it up for the Mackmen.

"I'm managing the greatest team in the world when Eddie Collins is in the line-up. It doesn't matter whether or not we win the pennant, and I'm not making any statements on that score, but I've got the greatest team in the history of baseball. You don't often hear me getting in a rave, but that's the truth. Never in my experience as a player and manager, and I'm no chicken, as you know, have I ever seen such a bunch as I am managing.

"Collins will get back and then watch the dust fly. And then watch what the greatest team in the world does in this little old league of ours."

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for additions and alterations to the Post Office, Kingston, Ontario," will be received until 4.00 P. M., on Monday, July 31, 1911, for the work mentioned.

Plans, specifications and form of contract can be seen and forms of tender obtained at this Department and on application to Wm. Newlands and Sons, Architects, Kingston, Ont.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed forms supplied, and signed with their actual signatures, stating their occupations and places of residence. In the case of firms, the actual signature, the nature of the occupation and place of residence of each member of the firm must be given.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, made payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, equal to ten per cent (10 p. c.) of the amount of the tender, which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,
R. C. DESBOCHES,
Secretary.

Department of Public Works,
Ottawa, July 8, 1911.

Newspapers will not be paid for this advertisement if they insert it without authority from the Department.

SWATS THE FLY

Special to The Examiner.

SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS, July 18.—The fly—the common, busy, disease-carrying house fly—got a rap in the Appellate Court of Texas that is calculated to cause the people, not only in this part of the State, but in all parts of the country, to get more in earnest in their efforts to do away with this summertime pest.

The swat the fly got in the Appellate Court grew out of a suit for damages in which Louis Rittiman had sued A. Cohen & Co. for damages, alleging that flies from the defendant's place carried disease germs that caused the death of Miss Belle Rittiman, daughter of the plaintiff.

A jury in the lower court had given the plaintiff judgment for $1,000. The peculiar thing about it is that Associate Justice W. S. Fly passed upon the case.

LIKES HIS PRISON

Special to The Examiner.

HOUSTON, TEX., July 18.—There is a convict in the Texas Penitentiary who likes the prison life so well that he doesn't want to leave it. Recently when the Board of Pardons met in regular session, a communication was read from a convict for whom efforts were being made to secure a pardon. The convict asked that efforts to secure his freedom be ignored.

It is believed the Governor and board will act favorably on the man's request. The convict declared he knew it was the daughter of an uncle who was seeking his freedom, but he says, "Please don't pay any attention to her efforts for a parole or pardon." He says he is well pleased with life in prison, that he gets all he wants to eat, and gets a chance to go to church.

MAKING SPICE OUT OF MOLASSES AND SAWDUST

TOPEKA, July 18.—The effort to provide pure food for the people of the country through the Government and the various State pure food laws and departments has brought about a higher quality of foodstuffs, but it has not deterred the inventive genius of the country from trying to work out schemes for substitutes and adulterations of food products.

A man in Tennessee has developed a scheme by which he can make a pure apple cider vinegar at an actual cost of four cents a gallon, and using one apple for each gallon. The fraud could not be detected except by an actual chemical test. The same chap also has a scheme for making apple butter with onesapple to the gallon of butter and at a cost of one-fourth the real article.

A man in Rochester, N.Y., developed a plan of treating sawdust with molasses to use in adulterating spices. One part of the real spice and three parts of sawdust made the product, which could not be detected by the eye or tongue.

PUPILS OF MRS. GREENSLADE

Following is a correct list of the pupils of Mrs. W. A. Greenslade who were successful in passing the recent examinations of the Toronto College of Music:

As will be seen Miss Edith Leadbetter tailed both primary and first year exams during 1911 and received first-class honours in each.

Miss Margaret Turner, who is only nine years old, did not accomplish first-class honours in the primary exams., but did well considering her age.

Senior rudiments—First-class honours, Miss Mabel Rehill.

First year—First-class honours — Edith Leadbetter.

Primary— First-class honours—Oscar Freeburn, Catharine Wilson, Edward Firth, Edith Leadbetter, Alma Beaver.

Primary honours—Margaret Turner

BUFFALO PORCUPINE BUYS M'COSH CLAIMS

Spectacular Property, Neighbor of Dome, Passes Into Hands of Strong Company

An evidence of the quickened interest in the Porcupine gold area is to be found in the news which leaked out last night of the transfer of the well-known McCosh claims, which several influential syndicates have endeavoured to secure since the discovery of spectacular showings of free gold thereon, from the original owners to the Buffalo Porcupine Gold Mines, Limited. A good deal of local capital is represented in the transaction and the negotiations were completed upon behalf of the purchasers by the firm of J. H. Jewell & Co., of Toronto, which has handled several large deals in Porcupine properties of late. Neither the vendors nor the purchasers would divulge the details of the transaction last night, but those who were close to the negotiations stated that the consideration was in the neighbourhood of one hundred thousand dollars, and competent mining authorities were of the opinion that if this were the figure the deal was an unusually good one for the company. The McCosh claims are south of the Dome and compromise three contiguous claims, in all 120 acres. No information has been given as to whether the property will be placed on the market or will be operated and developed by private capital, but it is likely that the latter policy will be adopted.

According to the report of Mr. Mowry Bates, the well-known engineer, the vein on lot Number 986 is at least five feet wide and probably wider, as only the south wall was shown at the period of examination. The vein has been traced to the adjoining claim, where stripping has disclosed a large number of free gold showings, some of them being remarkably rich. Engineer Bates panned oxidized material from the surface of the vein on claim 986, which gave twenty-two colours to one-fourth pound of rock, or equal to about $80 per ton. Mr. Bates, in his report, stated that the vein was strong and could be traced for eight hundred feet.

The incident of the sale of this property so quickly after the disastrous fire, indicates that the trend of capital is more strongly than ever in the direction of Porcupine. The Buffalo-Porcupine Gold Mines, Limited, is a strong corporation and has a number of prominent American business men upon its directorate. Mr. William Muir, president of the Pennsylvania Paraffine Works, Titusville, Pa., and a director of Beaver Consolidated, is the vice-president of the company. J. H. Jewell & Co., which carried out the negotiations, did not enter upon the Porcupine field until its permanency was established, but have since been the principals in several large transactions.

3,000 MILES TO WED A MAN SHE HAD NEVER SEEN

SANTA BARBARA, July 18.—More than three thousand miles to a State where she had never been, to meet a man she had never seen, with the intention of wedding him the day she arrived, was the trip taken by Mrs. Anna Mariah Attwater, aged fifty-one, of Baltimore, Md. Everything took place according to schedule, and she is now Mrs. Lucien Beal, of Goleta, one of Santa Barbara's suburbs.

Mr. Beal, who is sixty years of age, is a prosperous rancher, owning a large walnut grove, from which he derives a profitable income every year. He has been married three times, in each case securing his mate through a matrimonial agency. His former wives are both dead.

While they had exchanged pictures, Mr. Beal, as a second means of identification, wore a large red rose on the lapel of his coat when he met the train, and Mrs. Attwater lost no time in greeting the wearer as she stepped forth into a crowd of strangers.

"My, but you are a fine looking old chap," said Mrs. Attwater as she embraced him.

KANSAS BOY PRODIGY COULD READ AT TWO YEARS

TOPEKA, KAN., July 18.—While educators in the Eastern States are making a close study of the Boston boy who is an educational prodigy and a sophomore at Harvard, the Kansas educators have also a prodigy who is arousing considerable interest among teachers. He is Lewellyn Lot Zure, of Lawrence, a distant cousin of the late Samuel J. Tilden, who will enter the sophomore year at the University of Kansas next fall at fifteen years, and will receive a degree from that institution before he is eighteen, and at the usual age for boys and girls to be entering the university.

In seven years this boy has done all of the common, high school, and freshman college work. His parents refused to allow him to attend school until he was eight years old, and he has done two years ordinary school work every year, except one.

This boy mastered the alphabet at sixteen months, and could read at the age of two. At five he was reading, for amusement, the lighter plays of Shakespeare, and at six he was studying civil engineering. The boy, after completing his regular college work, intends to take up engineering. The father and mother would not send their boy to school, so he studied and read anyway. The lad was as healthy as any youngster. He has never had the attention of a physician. He is a tennis devotee, but has never aspired to be a major league hero.

10 DAYS IN GAOL

John Fowley, who appeared in court a few days ago on a charge of drunkenness, and who was allowed to go on the promise that he would get out of the city, appeared again this morning on the same charge, and was given ten days in gaol. He said that he was going out of the city, and got a job hoeing turnips for a farmer just outside the city, and got drunk, but pleaded that if he was given another chance he would vamoose. A $2.00 fine was imposed, which he was unable to pay, so he will be kept out of the turnip patch for ten days.

A WEAK HEART

When the heart is weak or irregular in action, when the blood is thin and watery, remember the blood-forming qualities of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and by its use flood the system with rich, red, vitalizing blood. This is Nature's way of curing weakness and disease. It is the only way to ensure lasting benefits.

POST CARD COLUMN

Editor Post Card Column.

Sir,—I am asked to write you about the delivery of luggage and such things on Sunday, as they want a day of rest. Only idiots and slaves do such work. I was both, myself, when a tenderfoot, and had to work just the same on Sunday, until I paid off the imaginary fees of the employment agent and got a bit in hand to leave.

BOARD AND GRAVE

Special to The Examiner.

HILLSDALE, MICH., July 18.—Through the trial of a contested divorce case here a pre-marriage agreement has been revealed where the husband agreed only to give his wife a home and support during her life and at death a proper burial.

Mrs. Rebecca Geise is suing her well-to-do farmer husband for a divorce and claims part of his property. To his wife's surprise he produced during the trial an agreement he claims she signed before marriage.

The wife remembers signing the agreement, but claims she did not know it contained the clause where she was only to have a home and proper burial as the result of her marriage.

WARM WEATHER DISHES

A great deal of discomfort during the warm days will be alleviated if the daily menu consists of cold dishes instead of the usual hot ones. It is a wrong idea which many people entertain that food which is cold is not nutritious. In summer time it is more so than heavy, hot dishes, and a cold dish will be found decidedly palatable at this time of year.

Four recipes for dainty dishes which should be included in the hot weather menu given below:

Lamb Cutlets in Tomato Jelly.

Boil or braise the best end of a neck of lamb, and when cold trim into cutlets. Mix together equal parts of tomato sauce and aspic jelly, and mask the cutlets with this when almost cold and leave them to set. Serve the cutlets around a macedoine of vegetables with mayonnaise sauce, and garnish with cut-up aspic and slices of tomato.

Iced Curry in Cucumber Cases.

Prepare cases of cucumbers by cutting off neatly peeled lengths, stamp out in a fluted shape, and hollow out in centre. Stew gently half an hour and fill in with the following curry. Prepare fairly early and stand on ice.

Curry for the cases — Two tablespoonfuls of melted butter, ditto curry powder, one ditto lemon juice, three small onions minced fine. Simmer ten minutes, then add half a pound of finely minced veal and simmer for half an hour. Add one pint of milk, simmer slowly two hours, till all moisture is nearly absorbed.

Little Lobster Salads.

Rub the yolks of four hard-boiled eggs through a sieve, season with salt, pepper, any cayenne, and add by degrees four tablespoonfuls of salad oil. When a smooth paste is formed pour in a teaspoonful of vinegar a gill of cool liquid, aspic jelly, and a gill of double cream. Have ready some of the best portions of a lobster, coarsely chopped, add to the mixture, and fill some small china cases which have been line dwith aspic jelly; pour in a little cool aspic over the filling, and put the moulds in a cool place or on ice till required. Turn them out, and garnish with a little finely shredded lettuce and cucumber.

Warsrw Items

WARSAW, JULY 19—The number of holiday visitors has been unusually large during the past week. Among these are the first time visitors with friends, the transients in automobiles and cabs, the annuals and the occasional who come to renew the acquaintanceship of childhood. To all the glad hand of friendship is extended. They are as welcome as the spring beauties in the May time. Their arrival has been pleasantly anticipated for months and finally they come laden with hearty greetings eager to pour forth the love that has no adequate means of communication, for what seems like ages. The event is only to be compared to the Christmas gathering.

Owing to the inclemency of the weather, the lawn social under the auspices of the Presbyterian church held on Monday evening, took place in the town hall. As a means of revenue the event was most successful. Excellent refreshments were served during the fore part of the evening, following which a programme of readings and vocal and instrumental music was rendered.

The morning and evening services commemorative of the reopening of the Presbyterian church were largely attended. The services were conducted by Rev. H. J. Keith of Peterborough, who delivered an excellent sermon on each occasion.

Mr. and Mrs. John Nichol of Lethbridge, Alta., were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Edwards during last week. Mr. Nichol left for home on Tuesday.

Dr. J. A. Couch, Mrs. Couch and Master Aaron, Toronto are spending a few weeks with relatives here.

Mrs. (Dr.) Anderson, Miss Anderson and Miss Edith Anderson, Leamington, Ont., are guests of Mrs. James Selkirk.

Mr. O. A. Kidd and Mrs. Kidd are visiting Mr. E. Snider.

Mr. F. D. Kerr, city, was in town on Monday.

Miss Beatrice Flynn, Peterborough, is a guest of Miss M. Fitzpatrick.

Mr. Fred Roy, Peterborough, was in town on Tuesday.

Mr. R. Turrett, Toronto, is a guest of Rev. R. Brown.

Mrs. Watson, Campbellford, is a guest of Mrs. David Miller.

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Choate and Master Grover, Washington, D.C., Mrs. N. E. Bell and Masters Cyril, Eugene and Kenneth, Toronto, were guests of Mr. A. F. Choate last week.

The final match in the Canadian Rifle League competition was held on Saturday last. Following is the result of the team standing in the four matches:

W. J. Selkirk	367
J. H. Payne	364
Nathan Payne	349
Rufus Payne	340
Arthur Hendren	326
David Miller	323
John Drain	319
Wm. Miller	304
Robt. Tedford	303
Hilliard Darling	293

This score entitles the first two to first-class marksman's certificates and the second two to second class.

Mr. David Miller has received from militia headquarters the handsome silver salver presented by the government for skill in rifle shooting which was won by him in last year's competitions.

INTERESTING MEETING

A very interesting meeting of the Charlotte street Auxiliary of the W. M. S. was held Tuesday, July 18th. A specially pleasing feature of the meeting was the presentation of a life certificate and pin to Mrs. C. Wright, one of the oldest members of the society, who through a long life has been identified with the various interests of the Methodist church in Peterborough. An address was read testifying to the love and esteem in which Mrs. Wright has so long been held.

OBITUARY

OMEMEE NEWS

Omemee, July 19.

Miss Annie Thompson is visiting in Cobourg.

Miss Evelyn Porter of Prince Albert, Sask., is the guest of her mother.

Mrs. R. Burns and Miss Olive spent last week at "Capaline," Stoney Lake, the guests of Mrs. Morrow, Peterborough.

Mr. Jim Bonnis left on Monday morning for Toronto, where he has secured a position in a drug store.

Miss Lula Bushnell is visiting in Peterborough.

Mrs. H. Homer was in Peterborough on Sunday.

Miss Edmonds of Berlin is visiting Miss Evelyn Porter.

Mr. Jack Murray is spending his holidays with Mr. Hartley Currie on Georgian Bay.

Mr. and Mrs. T. A. McPherson left on Friday for Newfoundland to visit their son Ross, who is in business with his uncle.

On Saturday afternoon Messrs. Henderson, Matthews, Richardson and Dennison of Peterborough challenged four of our tennis players on the local courts. The visitors won all the events except in the case of singles between Mr. Dennison and Mr. Hodgetts, whom Mr. Hodgetts defeated his opponent.

Mr. Richard Foggt, returned from his Western trip on Friday. He was accompanied by his daughter and granddaughter, Mrs. Cook and Miss Bath of Saskatchewan.

A garden party will be held on the lawn of the Methodist Church on Wednesday, July 26th. The Peterborough band has been engaged for the occasion.

Messrs. M. B. Nugent and Geo. Wilson spent Sunday in Peterborough.

Mrs. J. M. McCrea returned home last week after spending a month with her mother, Mrs Roberts of Cobourg.

Miss Gladys Henderson is visiting in Midland.

Rev. Geo. McQuade is visiting his parents.

The result of the census places the population of Omemee at 852.

Mr. H. Shields was in Peterborough on Tuesday.

Arrangements have been completed regarding the excursion on Aug. 1st under the auspices of the Methodist Sunday School. A special train will be run to Lakefield in the morning, and from there the trip is taken around the lakes to Lindsay, returning to Omemee by train.

Miss Etta Scott was the guest of Miss Vera Sproule, Lindsay, on Sunday.

On Sunday, July 9th, the Rev. R. Burns preached the annual sermon to the Orangemen in the Methodist Church. The procession formed at the hall and the lodges walked in a body to the church, where the centre seats had been reserved for them. Mr. Burns took as his text Josh I. 8 and 9. After giving a history of the order, he emphasized the value and importance of the Holy Scriptures in connection with Orangism. Appropriate music was rendered by the choir, under the able leadership of Mr. S. J. Mulligan. On their return to the hall the lodges moved a hearty vote of appreciation to the reverend gentleman for his able discourse.

Trent Canal Guide Book.

—Just issued from the Examiner presses, a most comprehensive and artistic reference and guide book of the Trent Canal, containing a host of valuable and hitherto unpublished information concerning the waterway, compiled by Mr. E. S. Clarry. This book gives precisely the information about the Canal that is so much in demand. Containing as it does, charts of the lakes throughout the system from Orillia and Barrie on Lake Simcoe to Healey's Falls on the Trent, with the main steamer channel clearly indicated it will be of invaluable assistance to the owners of power boats. The maps and charts which the guide book contains are alone worth many times the price of the publication, and they will be appreciated by all navigators in the district. The book is beautifully illustrated by artistic photographs of many points of interest along the system and will be much in demand, if only for souvenir purposes. It is now on sale at Trebilcock Bros. Peterborough Book Store.

DOCTOR SAID SHE WOULD DIE

"Fruit-a-tives" Saved Her Life

RIVIERE À PIERRE, QUE., May 9th 1911

"I look upon my recovery as nothing short of a miracle. I was for eleven years constantly suffering from Chronic Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Constipation. The last two years of my illness, I was confined to my bed nearly all the time. I was so thin I weighed only 90 pounds, and I vomited everything I ate. Even water would not stay on my stomach.

The doctors gave me up to die as the stomach trouble produced heart weakness and I was frequently unconscious.

At this time, a lady friend strongly advised me to try "Fruit-a-tives" and how thankful I am that I did so. When I had taken one box, I was much better and after three boxes, I was practically well again and had gained 20 pounds.

I have taken thirteen boxes in all and now weigh 150 pounds and am absolutely well—no pain—no indigestion—no constipation—my heart is sound and complexion clear".

BOXING

Conkle is trying to induce Fred Anderson, the big ball player, who was released by Hamilton, and formerly played with Peterborough, in the Midland League, to go into the boxing game, and there is a chance that, "Andy" will be seen in the ring next winter. He has done a little boxing, but never went into the game seriously. Conkle likes his style and thinks that he can put him in shape to win a few bouts from some of the third-rate heavies. Anderson weighs 208 pounds when in training and has an arm that would reach across the Dundas canal.—Hamilto Herald.

A Striking Metaphor.

For a "striking metaphor" take Sydney Smith's when he saw a little girl stoop down and stroke the shell of a turtle.

"Why are you doing that, Belle?" he asked.

"To please the turtle."

"My child, you might as well stroke the dome of St. Paul's to please the man and chapter."

The Zoo's Food Bill.

It costs nearly $25,000 a year to feed the animals at the London Zoo.

And how varied is the menu is seen when it is stated that it includes such trifles as horses, goats, monkey-nuts, bananas, grapes, oranges, apples, turnips, potatoes, bread, fowls' heads, sugar, mice, and sparrows.

In addition, the denizens of the Zoo get through in a year 161 loads of hay, 208 loads of straw, 15,000 bundles of tares, 300 bushels of maize, over a ton of rice, 150 bushels of canary seed, nearly 2,000 pints of shrimps, and about 30 tons of fish.

Expects to Grow.

Apparently the church people in Saskatoon, Sask., feel pretty certain that that city won't lag behind in the race of western Canada cities. A committee on union and location of churches in Saskatoon has been considering how many church buildings will be needed there ten years from now, and it was estimated that at the end of that period the city will have a population of at least sixty-five thousand. The present population of Saskatoon is about fifteen thousand.

Left-Handed Pitchers Playing Important Part In National Race

Left-handed pitchers are playing an important part in the present keen struggle for the leadership of the National League. They will do much toward settling the championship before the schedule runs out, October 12. This is a prediction made by Johnny Kling, of Boston.

Up to date, they have caused sudden changes in the standing of the first five clubs. Marquard brought the Giants to the top by beating the Chicago Cubs and the Pittsburg Pirates, and he and Wiltse are greatly responsible for McGraw's club being where it is. Sallee, of St. Louis, has done more for the Cardinals than any hurler on Bresnahan's staff, while "Lefty" Leifield has been called into action when defeat meant dropping a notch lower in the race and held Pittsburg above water.

Bill Burns has helped Philadelphia considerably, but not as much as he could if he would exert himself a little more.

Rucker has set the League record this season for the largest number of victories, and is one twirler who has kept Brooklyn from occupying last place. Boston has two left-handers, and they are doing first-class work considering the team they are with. They are Matern and McTigue. Kling predicts that McTigue will be the leading southpaw in the National League next season, as he thinks the youngster has as much speed and "stuff" as Rube Waddell ever had.

NO PORTSIDER FOR CUBS

Chicago has no portsider on the team. It is a fact to be lamented. So thinks Kling, who recently was daily adorned with a Cub uniform. From what left-handers have been doing against New York, Cincinnati, Philadelphia, and St. Louis, it seems as if Kling's "dope" is correct. All four of these clubs are at sea when facing a flinger who pegs from the port side. Therefore, if Manager Chance had one to sandwich in with his right-handers it is safe to venture the remark that New York, St. Louis, or Cincinnati would seldom obtain an even break in a series.

This is not gossip collected haphazard, but was taken from remarks made by Kling, who has made a study of the other clubs since departing from the ranks of the Chicago Cubs.

"If Chance possessed a left-hander like Marquard, Leifield, or this young fellow McTigue we have, I do not think there would be any doubt about Chicago's taking the championship," said Kling recently. "I figure the Cubs are going to win anyway, but I would feel more certain if Chance had a left-hander. It is too bad Pfiester deteriorated. Both Mattern and McTigue were amazingly effective against the Giants, and if we had played a little better baseball we would have beaten them with those two fellows on the mound.

WOULD HAVE BEST PITCHERS

"McGraw has only three left-handed hitters, Devore, Doyle, and Bridwell, but that doesn't make any difference, because the right-handers cannot hit them. They never did. This was demonstrated when Pfiester was able to whip them regularly a few years ago, and then McGraw possessed a harder hitting team than he has at present. That is why I say if Chance could get hold of a strong southpaw his pitching staff would be the best in the league. One is all he needs to sandwich in occasionally or to use in each series, so as to change the sight of the batters facing a right-hander continually.

"It is my opinion that left-handers are going to work wonders in the race. If Doom can get Bill Burns working in order with Alexander and Moore the Phillies will be a tougher bunch than they are right now. Marquard and Wiltse going as good is what is keeping the Giants on top. Mathewson is unable to stand the work he used to, and Ames is an in and outer, while Trucke is unreliable on account of his wildness. Where would the Cardinals be if Bresnahan did not have Sallee, and where would Brooklyn be if Rucker was not there, and the same with Leifield of Pittsburg? You would not see any of those teams so high in the percentage columns. That is why I contend Chance ought to have at least one left-hand pitcher to use against New York, Cincinnati, and St. Louis, because he is going to learn these are the teams he will have to beat to win the championship."

EXAMINER WILL RECEIVE AND SEND PARCELS FOR PORCUPINE FIRE SUFFERERS

The Examiner for the next few days will be pleased to receive and forward to their proper destination, any donations of clothes or boots for the fire sufferers in Porcupine. As will have been noticed by the appeal of the wife of the Mayor of Cobalt and by the despatch in another portion of this issue, the greatest need that exists in the north just now is for clothing and boots. Many women and children are going bare-footed and very poorly clad for want of proper clothing. The majority escaped with what they were wearing only, and they are sadly in need of apparel. Another cash donation is gratefully acknowledged in $5.00 subscription from Miss E. M. Allen. The list is as follows:

LIGHT HOUSE HEROINE HAS PASSED AWAY

COBORUG, ONT., JULY 19. — The death of a Canadian heroine, who spent her childhood and girlhood days at Brighton, Ont., occurred a few days ago at Alberni, B.C., in the passing of Mrs. Thomas Patterson. Mrs. Patterson was the only child of Capt. Geo. A. Huff, and when eighteen years of age married Thomas Patterson, keeper of Cape Beale lighthouse. During her fourteen years' residence at the light house she became known to the world as having heroically exerted herself upon several occasions to assist in saving shipwrecked crews on the west coast. Notable among these acts of self-sacrifice and heroism was her noble effort four years ago, when she was directly responsible for saving the lives of the crew of the stranded ship 'Coloma.' Unfortunately at that time she suffered injury to her health which she was never able to overcome. Besides being made the recipient of a public tribute in recognition of her bravery, her work was at that time officially recognized by the governments of Canada and the United States.

Mrs. Patterson is survived by her husband and a family of seven children.

FIRE DEP'T. CALLED OUT TO EXTINGUISH SMALL BLAZE AT REAR GEORGE STREET RESIDENCE

A Burning Rubbish Heap Which Threatened to Assume Large Proportions—A Portion of the Fence was Burned—A Quick Run was Made by the Brigade

At 11.40 last night the Fire Department received a call to extinguish a small blaze at the rear of 480 George street, opposite Central Park. A quantity of rubbish in the back yard caught fire, but beyond burning a portion of the fence, little damage was done.

The Fire Department responded very promptly and extinguished the blaze with the use of chemical fire extinguishers. The Chief ordered a line of hose laid from the nearest hydrant, to be inreadiness, but it was not required.

An Examiner reporter was sitting in front of the fire station when the alarm was received over the phone and out of personal curiosity took out his watch and timed the brigade getting out of the station. From the clang of the bell until the apparatus was in the street clear of the building, but 32 seconds had elapsed.

When the alarm came in last night all of the firemen were in bed with the exception of Engineer Jamieson, who was doing watch duty and the Chief, who was sitting in his office reading.

CANADIAN WOMAN IS WOUNDED BY SMALL BOY WAS AIMING AT AUTO

SOUTH NORWALK, CONN., JULY 20.—Incensed by having his pet bantam killed by an auto, William Beers, aged twelve, determined to shoot the tires of all passing cars. An auto occupied by Miss Eva Hammond of Coaticook, Canada, was the first to pass. He fired with a small rifle and the bullet veered, entering the head of Miss Hammond, who is not likely to recover.

Notify Chief Officer If You Have Been Missed By Census Enumerator

The newspapers have been reporting omissions on the part of enumerators of the census, especially in the large cities of the Dominion, and notwithstanding the care of the Census Office to enjoin a performance of accurate and full work on the part of enumerators it is possible that in some instances persons and even families have been passed over. It is known at the office that many reports of omissions are without foundation, and that generally the enumeration has been well and fully made, although it is too early for a final decision. The fact is that the census of a district or enumeration area was often not completed when complaints were first publicly made. The Census Office earnestly desires that the name of every man, woman and child in the country, as well as all other information called for in the schedule, should be recorded as the statute and the instructions require. But lest there should be an inadvertent omission on the part of any enumerator, the Office respectfully invites the co-operation of the public for the completion of a full census. To this end persons who believe or suspect that they have not been taken are asked to notify the Chief Officer of the Census at Ottawa, giving their name, post office address, street and number if residing in cities, towns or villages, or concession and number of lot if residing in country places. Letters containing information of this nature are postage free, and if it is found that such persons have not been enumerated in the returns made to the Census Office, means will at once be taken to remedy the defects through the local officers of the Census who were employed in the work and who are responsible if any mistakes have been made in their respective enumeration areas.

Story Of Beattie Nesbitt's Arrest Was Only A Joke

TORONTO, JULY 19.—For a few minutes this forenoon there was excitement around police headquarters and in the Crown Attorney's Department, when a letter came in from a town in Germany, written in German script, and in the body of which the name, Dr. William Beattie Nesbitt, was the most prominent feature. Some of the authorities jumped to premature conclusions, and the whispers went around, "Say have you heard the news? Dr. Beattie Nesbitt's caught in Germany, and they are holding him until a man can be sent."

Needless to say, a good many believed the story, especially as Inspector Duncan flourished the letter until he could get a German scholar to read it. Then he saw the point that it was an acknowledgment of the notice he had sent to that particular town months ago, asking that they keep an eye open for the doctor.

Apparently the idea of a practical joke still clung in the mind of the interpreter, for the letter was taken to the Crown Attorney's room, and there read forth in all its glowing detail of a capture, and then the excitement began. Others had it that it was a message from the doctor himself, expressing his regret that owing to business conditions he would be unable to attend the Lennox Conservative picnic at Jackson's Point, on the 29th, as per his custom. Immediately the joke was explained the excitement subsided.

STRAINED RELATIONS BETWEEN LLOYD GEORGE AND LABOURITES

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, JULY 20.—British Commons sat until early this morning discussing the insurance bill. Strained relations have arisen between the Labour party and Lloyd George. The Labour men demand that the state contribution to the insurance fund should be larger than the bill provides. Lloyd George refuses to go further in this direction.

THE
Cost of Glasses
When you think of having your eyes examined and of the possibility of wearing glasses, the matter of cost naturally arises.
As in everything else, good work, careful skilful work, is apt to cost more than work leasgood.
There is nothing you buy for your personal use that you ought to be more careful about, that you can afford to have the best of, than those glasses that you are going to depend on to preserve and assist your eyesight.
The reason we have succeeded so well and our business has grown so satisfactorily is that the best work is given in every case and a reasonable price is charged.

THE RESUMPTION OF THE GREAT DEBATE.

The Minister of Finance lost no time in bringing up the subject of reciprocity in the House of Commons on the resumption of the Session, and it may be expected to stay up now till the talking capacity of the Opposition has been thoroughly tested. It is already obvious that the intention of Mr. Borden and his supporters is to kill time; it is obvious also that they find the task an uphill and dreary one. They dislike the work, and find it irksome already: by the time they have kept it up for a month they will feel sheepish enough to quarrel with one another.

The attitude of Sir Wilfrid Laurier is, as usual, perfectly admirable. He is the very embodiment of patience, courtesy, and alertness. No complaint or protest has come from the Government side; the only peculiarity in the behaviour of the members is that they refrain from taking any part in discussing reciprocity, and that they have very little to say about the irrelevant topics introduced by Opposition members for time-wasting purposes. No more effective means of making clearly apparent the childishness of the Opposition strategy could be devised. Mr. Borden has still a chance to prevent himself from becoming a public laughing stock, but his time margin is a very narrow one.

In all seriousness it must be admitted that the Opposition's course is quite uncalled for. The question before Parliament is the ratification of an agreement to have concurrent legislation to effect the abolition of the customs duties on selected articles, mostly agricultural products. Such legislation does not, and cannot make, this measure of freer trade perpetual, or even valid for a definite time. Either the Canadian Parliament or the American Congress can at any session change the duties still levied, or reimpose those proposed to be abolished. Common courtesy demands that notice be given, but neither side can have any ground of complaint at legislative action taken by the other. To make such a fuss over such a measure of finance and trade is an unheard of proceeding.

How the farce will end remains, of course, to be seen. Much will depend on the trend and force of public opinion outside of Parliament. The indications are, as might be expected, unfavourable to the Opposition. To say nothing of the chilling reception handed out to Mr. Borden in the West, many Ontario members are known to have returned to Ottawa very downhearted at the directions given them by their Conservative supporters. They have been notified that the farmers, quite irrespective of party affiliations, desire freedom of trade with the United States in agricultural products. One member for a Western Ontario constituency, after explaining his attitude to a meeting of his party supporters, asked them to pass a resolution endorsing the anti-reciprocity course of the Opposition. His request was met by chilling and persistent silence, and he actually broke down and was affected to tears. To all appearance the end will be a Conservative tragedy not long delayed.

THE PACT OF PEACE.

Coming as suddenly as it did, there are few yet who really realise the tremendous importance of the arbitration treaty now in negotiation between Great Britain and hte United States says the Ottawa Free Press, and, it may also be pointed out, with the approval of other militant powers, such as Japan. It seems almost inconceivable that such a pact as this is now on the eve of being signed, but the very fact that such is the case shows that the story of the world is moving along much faster than it has hitherto done.

It is one of the most gratifying and significant signs of the times that these proposals have met with so little opposition. In a few quarters voices have been raised against them, but these have come from factions which are organized to a large extent by professional agitators, and which could be easily named. But, taking a cue from the pact itself, it is better to refrain.

Arbitration has, for a long time, been looked on, like the Millenium, as a dream. We have all seemed so imbued with the idea that Armageddon must come before the peace-flag was unfurled, that the very thought that mutual forbearance might take the place of the arbitrament of the sword appeared unthinkable. But, during the past hundred years the peace movement has been making slow though certain steps. There have been many obstacles in its way, but gradually these are being swept aside. Many of these barriers have been very strong, and there are many yet that are even stronger than those that have been surmounted. They might all be summed up in the difficulty of overcoming the seeming inconsistency between "peace on earth, goodwill to man," and "I come not to bring peace, but a sword," and there is every possibility that the Humanitarians, such as Frederic Harrison, may claim that the victory is to their cult, rather than to the principles of Christianity.

There can be scarcely any doubt but that the increase in treaties between nation and nation has largely helped to clear the way for such a pact as this. During the past century it has been found possible to adjust differences by means of arbitration, and without the empty scabbard. Nowadays it is becoming evident that the sight of the folly of two nations expending millions of lives and many millions of dollars over a so-called question of honour is as ridiculous as the sight of two dogs fighting over a meatless bone.

After all is said and done, war is nothing but a street brawl on an enormous scale, and street-brawlers are within the jurisdiction of the law of all lands, and are quickly brought to justice as a menace to the peace of the community. There are two great difficulties in the way of peace in these modern times of progressive and yet, sometimes effete, civilisation. One may be called the religious side. The conservatism of the human temperament cannot yet forget the olden time idea of the 'God of Hosts' and the 'Lord of Battles.' It is part and parcel of what is called belief. It is allowed to exist and to grow on the teachings of the Gentle Man of Nazareth, like a fungoid growth on an oak tree.

The other great obstacle comes from the secular side. With the growth of great armaments there have grown up great industries, and with the creation of enormous armies and navies, there have been incorporated many offices that are honourable, and that have brought out the finest qualities of men. The holding and the preservation of these has long been looked on as a great duty amongst the nations, and there can be no doubt that they have played a vast part in the making of history. They are vested interests, and it is well known what it means to interfere with the accumulation of such powers of self interests. It would be almost impossible to wipe out all these "in one fell swoop," and that is one of the reasons that the movement towards universal peace can only take one step at a time.

But the present agreement, as President Taft has said, "will be one of the greatest steps towards universal peace ever taken in the history of the world. The world is only fallible. Reforms that are worth having must be brought about little by little, not by one blow." And that is why all lovers of peace, will welcome the signing of the pact that will bind two great English-speaking nations in the cause of international unity.

THE RAILWAY COMMISSION.

(Toronto Star.)

The Winnipeg Free Press, which is publishing a remarkable series of articles on "this country's burden of unjust railway rates" now proposes its remedy, namely, the reconstruction of the Dominion Railway Commission. It declares that the commission is now "buried in detail," and is unable to deal with large railway questions. Its time is taken up with matters relating to crossings, bridges, and subways. The Free Press proposes that the commission be enlarged and provided with increased equipment for its work; also that it shall have larger powers, including the power of taking action on its own initiative, instead of waiting until some specific case is brought before it. In other words, it should be made an administrative as well as a judicial body.

In addition to the necessity of enlargement of the commission, increase of its equipment and widening of its powers, it is plainly necessary too, that the enlarged commission should be divided into a Western Board and an Eastern Board, each with a vice-chairman of its own, Chief Commissioner Mabee continuing to be the general chairman of the commission as a whole.

The Railway Commission is a comparatively new body, and it is not to be expected that it will always retain the form which it took when it was first organized. It will grow with the growth of the country. It will doubtless be necessary to enlarge the commisson from time to time, so as to keep pace with the increase of business. The details of which the Free Press speaks are important, as it admits, but it would be well if some of the commissioners had leisure for the study of the larger questions.

It is generally recognized that the commission does its work in a sensible way, with promptness and freedom from red tape; but it is quite possible that larger tasks could be undertaken if such additional assistance could be given as to relieve the commissioners from the burden of handling such a mass of small cases.

AN OLD COUNTRY VIEW

Writing in the London Financial News about Canadian public men, Mr. W. Leonard Palmer says:

"There is something in the manner of the Premier, not altogether due to his high position, that enforces attention. The greatness of the man is not aggressive—it is almost humble; and yet there sets upon him the quiet dignity born of the consciousness of power. No man could be fifteen years Prime Minister of Canada and fail to 'grow,' and Sir Wilfrid Laurier, great by nature from the first, has 'grown.' At all times and all seasons he is to be found where duty calls, and whenever he is wanted he is in his place in the House, always alert, always prepared, always courteous.

"Now and again, as business proceeds, he will be seen to drop back and converse with one or other of his back-bench supporters, to whom he will put some apt question touching the member's constituency. This constant confidential mingling with his followers is one of the secrets of Sir Wilfrid's power. And as in the House, so in the country. Men will follow the man quite as much as his policy.

"After Sir Wilfrid Laurier I was fortunate enough to be received privately by the Hon. W. S. Fielding, the strong man of the Cabinet, and, owing to the reciprocity issue, the man of the moment in Canada. The Minister of Finance does not claim the magnetic personality of the Premier. It is not until you converse with the Minister of Finance that you feel the great strength of the man, the indomitable will, the mastery of detail, the broad outlook, and the almost passionate desire to do what is right for his country and his people.

"Whatever may be the objections to the proposed reciprocity agreement, it will never be truly recorded that the Hon. W. S. Fielding entered into those negotiations other than as a great patriot, doing what he conscientiously believed to be for the good of Canada. Both at this meeting and at a subsequent one I had the pleasure of discussing all the great questions of the day with Mr. Fielding. There is an honesty and directness about Canada's Minister of Finance that puts aside all doubts as to why he rose to his present high position, and there is behind the quiet and gravely genial nature an intellect which in its outlook is as wide as the Dominion over which it is directed."

MASONS IN CONCLAVE.

Grand Master Reports Steady Growth of the Order.

St. Catharines, July 20.—The hotels of the city are unable to accommodate the crowds who are here to attend the fifty-sixth annual communication of the Masonic Grand Lodge of Canada, for the Province of Ontario, in session in the armory. The formal opening was made yesterday morning when an address of welcome was extended to the delegates by Mayor McBride. The Masonic welcome was voiced by George H. Sherwood, E. W. Smith, and James McIntosh, masters of three local lodges. The report of Grand Master MacWatt was then submitted.

Grand Master MacWatt's address contained considerable very interesting intelligence. It showed that to the end of May 31 the total revenue was $49,583.81, an increase of $1,178.42 over the year previous. For ordinary expenditure it required $16,797.07, and thus a surplus of $26,586.74 was at hand; this amount is slightly less than last year. During the year benevolent grants from the ordinary fund amounted to $26,875; this, however, was supplemented by grants from the interest of the semi-centennial fund of $3,920, making a total of $26,676.34. The lodges have so far paid into the semi-centennial fund $93,178.80, every lodge having contributed something during the year; last year 37 lodges contributed nothing.

The year was closed with a total membership of 46,500, as compared with only 46,000 the year previous.

Col. Ponton of Belleville had charge of the report on the condition of Masonry. One of the most particular recommendations was that in growing towns and cities permanent Masonic halls or temples should be erected. It was claimed that the reports of surpluses on hand in most cases would justify such an expenditure. Attention was also called to the need of providing for Masonic charities, while no restriction was placed on other charities.

Barnardo Boy's Bones.

London, Ont., July 20.—The police are convinced that the human bones found in the burned barn of Simon Blight at Wiarton on Tuesday are those of John Cousins, the Barnardo boy who mysteriously disappeared some weeks ago, shortly after the barns of a former employer at Lambeth had been destroyed.

He has a bad record, including a vicious attack on a farmer's wife.

An Epidemic of Blackleg.

Kingston, July 20.—An epidemic of blackleg has broken out among the young cattle near Portland, Ont. Dr. Ackland is busily engaged vaccinating all the young cattle in an effort to check the further spread of the disease.

MARKET REPORTS.

MONTREAL, July 19.—There was an improved demand from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat, and, as cables were stronger, with 1½d per quarter higher, sales of 100,000 bushels were made. The export trade in oats was quiet, but there was a better demand from local buyers, and sales of 50,000 bushels were made at prices ranging from 41½c to 42½c per bushel, as to grade. American corn was weaker, with No. 2 yellow in cargo lots offering at 69½c per bushel afloat, to arrive. A fair trade continues to be done in flour. Demand for all lines of millfeed is good.

Oats—Canadian western, No. 2, 43¾c to 44c, car lots, ex-store; extra No. 1 feed, 43½c to 43¾c. No. 2 C.W., 41c to 41½c.

Flour—Manitoba spring wheat patents, firsts, $5.20; seconds $4.80; winter wheat patents, $4.60 to $4.75; strong bakers', $4.60; straight rollers, $4.10 to $4.25; in bags, $1.85 to $2.

Rolled oats—Per barrel, $4.85; bag of 90 lbs., $2.15.

Corn—American, No. 2 yellow, 70c.

Millfeed—Bran, Ontario, $21 to $22; Manitoba, $20 to $21; middlings, Ontario, $22.50 to $23; shorts, Manitoba, $23; moullie, $25 to $28.

Cheese—Westerns, 11¾c to 11¾c; easterns, 11¼c to 11⅝c.

Butter—Choicest, 23½c to 24c.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, July 19.—At the Canadian Pacific live stock market the offerings this morning were 635 cattle, 400 sheep and lambs, 1150 hogs and 700 calves. The trade in cattle was fairly good on account of the cooler weather, and, as the offerings were not excessive, a steady feeling prevailed in the market, and prices show no change from Monday. Choice steers sold at 6¼c; good at 5¾c to 5¾c; fairly good at 5c to 5¼c; fair at 4½c to 4¾c, and common at 4c to 4½c per pound. Cows brought from 3½c to 5¼c, and bulls from 3½c to 5c per pound, as to quality.

The tone of the market for small meats was strong under a good demand and small supplies, and prices had an upward tendency, with sales of sheep at $4.20 to $4, lambs at $5.50 to $6.50, and calves at from $3 to $9 each, as to size and quality.

A weaker feeling developed in the market for hogs, and prices declined 50c per 100 pounds since Monday, on account of the increased offerings. At this reduction the demand from packers was good, and an active trade was done, with sales of selected lots at $7 to $7.25 per 100 pounds, weighed off cars.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, July 19.—Cattle—Receipts, 150 head; market slow, steady; prime steers, $6.25 to $6.50; butcher grades, $5.75 to $6.25.

Calves—Receipts, 400 head; market active, 25c higher; cull to choice, $5.50 to $8.75.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 1200 head; market active, firm; choice lambs, $7.40 to $7.50; cull to fair, $5 to $7.25; yearlings, $5.25 to $5.75; sheep, $3 to $4.75.

Hogs—Receipts, 1200; market active, higher; yorkers, $7.40 to $7.50; stags, $5 to $5.50; pigs, $5.60 to $7; mixed, $7.35 to $7.45; heavy, $7.10 to $7.30; roughs, $5 to $6.25.

Chicago Live Stock.

CHICAGO, July 19.—Hogs—Receipts, 35,000; market strong; mixed and butchers, $6.50 to $7; good, heavy, $6.45 to $6.55; rough, heavy, $6.25 to $6.45; light, $6.50 to $7; pigs, $5.65 to $6.35.

Cattle—Receipts, 20,000; market steady to lower; beeves, $4.70 to $8.00; cows and heifers, $3.10 to $8.75; stockers and feeders, $5.30 to $6.15; Texans, $4.50 to $5; calves, $5 to $7.50.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 20,000; market steady; native, $3.60 to $4.75; western, $5 to $4.80; lambs, $4 to $7.25; western, $4.60 to $7.25.

CHOSE SUICIDE.

Old Man at Leamington Had Been Sentenced to Jail.

Leamington, July 20.—A tragic affair took place here yesterday morning, when John Oliver, an old resident of Leamington, took strychnine and died a few minutes later.

Mr. Oliver was sentenced yesterday morning to a short term in Sandwich Jail, on conviction of being drunk and disorderly, and while on his way from the Police Court to the car, said he would like to go home and get his coat. To this the chief of police agreed, and accompanied him to his home. On the way to the railway station Mr. Oliver went into convulsions, informing the chief he had taken strychnine.

The policeman and others around supposed him to be shamming, but Mr. Oliver died within a few minutes. He was about 65 years old, and leaves a widow and three daughters.

About this time last year Mr. Oliver's son-in-law, named Dresser, shot and killed his wife (Miss Oliver) and then shot himself fatally. Thus three tragedies have occurred in the Oliver family within a year.

Executor's Sale of Valuable Business Premises and Real Estate in Campbellford.

In the matter of the estate of Sarah Isabella Hebden, deceased, there will be offered by the executors of the late Mrs. Sarah Isabella Hebden, at public sale at the Queen's Hotel, Campbellford, the real estate that belonged to the deceased, on Thursday, the 10th day of August, 1911, at twelve o'clock noon, consisting of:

PARCEL I. The "Queen's Hotel Block," a 3 storey brick building on Front street. The property extends along Front street a distance of 60 feet more or less. The ground floor consists of the hotel and a millinery store. The hotel, fitted with electric light, contains dining hall, vestibule, office, bar, parlours, 2 sitting rooms, 12 bedrooms, kitchen, lift, cellar and other accommodations.

PARCEL II. The "South Cockburn Block," a 2 storey brick building having a frontage of 42 feet, 6 inches, more or less, on Front street, and containing restaurant, tailor's and barber's shop with apartments above.

PARCEL III. The "North Cockburn Block," a 2 storey brick building having a frontage of 40 feet, 6 inches, more or less, on Front street, and containing Grocer's and Baker's shops, with bake house attached and apartments above.

PARCEL IV. The "Queen's Hotel Stables," a brick building, with wooden drive shed, on Front street, at the corner of River street, and having a frontage on both streets.

PARCEL V. The following building lots: (a) Lots 19 and 20 on the west side of Centre street. (b) Lot 21 on the east side of Centre street, and Lots 21 and 22 on the west side of Elmore street. (c) Lots 18 and 20 on the east side of King street. (d) Lots 11 and 12 on the west side of Elmore street.

Front street is the principal thoroughfare in the Town of Campbellford, and it is very seldom that such valuable blocks of business premises are offered for sale. The estate will be put up for sale in separate parcels as above mentioned, and the lots in Parcel 5 may be sold separately. There will be a reserved bid on each parcel and lot.

PAYMENTS: 10 per cent down at time of sale, 30 days for the balance without interest. 50 per cent. of purchase money may be secured by mortgage on purchased property.

For further particulars and conditions of sale apply to

By JACK LONDON

CHAPTER V.

She Would a Planter Be.

Sheldon mended rapidly. The fever had burned out, and there was nothing for him to do, but gather strength. Joan had taken the cook in hand, and for the first time, as Sheldon remarked, the chop at Berende was white man's chop. With her own hands Joan prepared the sick man's food, and between that and the cheer she brought him, he was able, after two days, to totter feebly out upon the veranda. The situation struck him as strange, and stranger still was the fact that it did not seem strange to the girl at all. She had settled down and taken charge of the household as a matter of course as if he were her father, or brother, or as if she were a man like himself.

"It is just too delightful for anything," she assured him. "It is like a page out of some romance. Here I come along out of the sea and find a sick man all alone with twohundred slaves—"

"Recruits," he corrected. "Contract labourers. They serve only three years, and they are free agents when they enter upon their contracts."

"Yes, yes," she hurried on; "—a sick man alone with two hundred recruits on a cannibal island—they are cannibals, aren't they? Or is it all talk?"

"Talk!" he said, with a smile. "It's a trifle more than that. Most of my boys are from the bush, and every bushman is a cannibal."

"But not after they become recruits? Surely, the boys you have here wouldn't be guilty."

"They'd eat you if the chance afforded."

"Are you just saying so, on theory? or do you really know?" she asked.

"I know."

"Why? What makes you think so? Your own men here?"

"Yes, my own men here, the very house-boys, the cook that at the present moment is making such delicious rolls, thanks to you."

Not more than three months ago eleven of them sneaked a whale-boat and ran for Malaita. Nine of them belonged to Malaita. Two were bushmen from San Cristoval. They were fools, the two from San Cristoval, I mean; so would any two Malaita men be who trusted themselves in a boat with nine from San Cristoval."

"Yes?" she asked eagerly. "Then what happened?"

"The nine Malaita men ate the two from San Cristoval, all except the heads, which are too valuable for mere eating. They stowed them away in the stern-locker till they landed. And those two heads are now in some bush village back of Lanea Langa."

She clapped her hands and her eyes sparkled.

"They are really and truly cannibals! And just think, this is the twentieth century! And I thought romance and adventure were fossilized!"

He looked at her with mild amusement.

"What is the matter now?" she queried.

"Oh, nothing, only I don't fancy being eaten by a lot of filthy niggers is the least bit romantic."

"No, of course not," she admitted. "But to be among them, controlling them, directing them, two hundred of them, and to escape being eaten by them—that, at least, if it isn't romantic, is certainly the quintessence of adventure. And adventure and romance are allied, you know."

"By the same token, to go into a nigger's stomach should be the quintessence of adventure," he retorted.

"I don't think you have any romance in you" she exclaimed. "You're just dull and somber and sordid like the business men at home. I don't know why you're here at all. You should be at home placidly vegetating as a banker's clerk or—or—"

"A shopkeeper's assistant, thank you."

"Yes, that—anything. What under the sun are you doing here on the edge of things?"

"Farming my bread and butter, trying to get on in the world."

"By the bitter road the younger must tread, ere he win to hearth and saddle of his own," she quoted. "Why, if that isn't romantic, then nothing is romantic. Think of all the younger sons out over the world, on a myriad of adventures, winning to those same hearths and saddles. And here you are in the thick of it, doing it, and here am I in the thick of it, doing it."

"I—I beg pardon," he drawled.

"Well, I'm a younger daughter, then," she amended; "and I have no hearth nor saddle—I haven't anybody or anything—and I'm just as far on the edge of things as you are."

"In your case, then, I'll admit there is a bit of romance," he confessed.

He could not help but think of the preceding nights, and of her sleeping in the hammock on the veranda, under mosquito curtains, her bodyguard of Tahitian sailors stretched out at the far corner of the veranda within call. He had been too helpless to resist, but now he resolved she should have his couch inside, while he would take the hammock.

"You see, I had read and dreamed about romance all my life," she was saying, "but I never, in my wildest fancies, thought that I should live it. It was all so unexpected. Two years ago I thought there was nothing left to me but—" She faltered, and made moue of distaste. "Well, the only thing that remained it seemed to me, was marriage."

"And you preferred a cannibal isle and a cartridge belt?" he suggested.

"I didn't think of the cannibal isle but the cartridge-belt was blissful."

"You wouldn't dare use the revolver if you were compelled to, Or," noting the glint in her eyes, "if you did use it, to—well, to hit anything."

If There Is A Weak Spot

In Your System or a Faltering Organ it Will be Worse at This Time of Year

Vigor and Energy Run Low in Spring Unless You Use

DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD

It may be the stomach, the heart, the lungs, the filtering or excretory organs, but if there is a weak point it is likely to show up at this time of year.

The blood is thin and watery. It fails to supply proper nourishment. The all-essential nerve force is lacking, and you feel the effects first in your weakest organ.

Your trouble may take the form of indigestion, you may have neuralgia or twinges of sciatic rheumatism. The cause is the same—weak blood.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food will help you as nothing else can, because it supplies in condensed and easily assimilated form the elements which are necessary for the strengthening and invigorating of the various organs of the body.

Every dose of this great restorative organ goes to form new, red corpuscles in the blood—to make the blood rich and red. The faltering organs resume their functions, appetite improves, digestion becomes good, and gradually new energy and vigour find their way to every nook and corner of the body. To keep strong and well this spring use Dr Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50 at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

She started up suddenly to enter the house. He knew she was going for her revolver.

"Never mind," he said, "here's mine. What can you do with it?"

"Shoot the block off your flag-halyards."

He smiled his disbelief.

"I don't know the gun," she said dubiously.

"It's a light trigger and you don't have to hold down. Draw fine."

"Yes, yes," she spoke impatiently. "I know automatics—they jam when they get hot—only I don't know yours." She looked at it a moment. "It's cocked. Is there a cartridge in the chamber?"

She fired, and the block remained intact.

"It's a long shot," she said, with the intention of easing her chagrin.

But she bit her lip and fired again. The bullet emitted a sharp shriek as it ricochetted into space. The metal block rattled back and forth. Again and again she fired, till the clip was emptied of its eight cartridges. Six of them were hits. The block still swayed at the gaff end, but it was battered out of all usefulness. Sheldon was astonished. It was better than he or even Hugie Drummond could have done. The women he had known, when they sporadically fired a rifle or revolver, usually shrieked, shut their eyes, and blazed away into space.

"That's really good shooting—for a woman," he said. "You only missed it twice, and it was a strange weapon."

"But I can't make out the two misses," she complained. "The gun worked beautifully, too. Give me another clip and I'll hit it eight times for anything you wish."

"I don't doubt it. Now I'll have to get a new block. Viaburi! Here you fella, catch one fella block along store-room."

"I'll wager you can't do it eight out of eight—anything you wish," she challenged.

"No fear of my taking it on," was his answer. "Who taught you to shoot?"

"Oh, my father, at first, and then Von, and his cow-boys. He was a shot—Dad, I mean, though Von was splendid, too."

Sheldon wondered secretly who Von was, and he speculated as to whether it was Von who two years previously had led her to believe that nothing remained for her but matrimony.

"What part of the United States is your home?" he asked. "Chicago or Wyoming? or somewhere out there? You know you haven't told me a thing about yourself. All that I know is that you are Miss Joan Lackland from anywhere."

"You'd have to go farther west to find my stamping grounds."

"Ah, let me see—Nevada?"

She shook her head.

"California?"

"Still farther west."

"It can't be, or else I've forgotten my geography."

"It's your politics," she laughed. "Don't you remember 'Annexation'?"

"The Philippines!" he cried triumphantly.

"No, Hawaii. I was born there. It is a beautiful land. My, I'm almost homesick for it already. Not that I haven't been away. I was in New York when the crash came. But I do think it is the sweetest spot on earth,—Hawaii, I mean."

"Then what under the sun are you doing down here in this God-forsaken place?" he asked. "Only fools come here," he added bitterly.

"Nielsen wasn't a fool, was he?" she queried. "As I understood, he made three millions here."

"Only too true, and that fact is responsible for my being here."

"And for me, too," she said. "Dad heard about him in the Marquesas and so we started. Only poor Dad didn't get here."

"He—your father—died?" he faltered.

She nodded, and her eyes grew soft and moist.

"I might as well begin at the beginning." She lifted her head with a proud air of dismissing sadness after the manner of a woman qualified to wear a Baden-Powell and a long-barrelled Colt's. "I was born at Hilo. That's on the island of Hawaii—the biggest and best in the whole group. I was brought up the way most girls in Hawaii are brought up. They live in the open, and they know how to ride and swim before they know what six-times-six is. As for me, I can't remember when I first got on a horse nor when I learned to swim. That came before my A B C's. Dad owned cattle ranches on Hawaii and Maui—big ones, for the islands. Hokuna had two hundred thousand acres alone. It extended in between Mauna Kea and Mauna Loa, and it was there I learned to shoot goats and wild cattle. On Molokai they have big spotted deer. Von was the manager of Hokuna. He had two daughters about my own age, and I always spent the hot season there, and, once a whole year. The three of us were like Indians. Not that we ran wild exactly, but that we were wild to run wild. There were always the governnesses, you know, and lessons, and sewing, and housekeeping; but I'm afraid we were too often bribed to our tasks with promises of horses or of cattle drives.

"Von had been in the army, and Dad was an old sea-dog, and they were both stern disciplinarians; only the two girls had no mother, and neither had I and they were two men after all. They spoiled us terribly. You see, they didn't have any wives, and they made chums of us—when our tasks were done. We had to learn to do everything about the house twice as well as the native servants did it—that was so that we should know how to manage some day. And we always made the cocktails, which was too-holy a rite for any servant. Then, too, we were never allowed anything we could not take care of ourselves. Of course the cow-boys always roped and saddled our horses, but we had to be able ourselves to go out in the paddock and rope our horses—"

"What do you mean by 'rope'?" Sheldon asked.

"To lariat them, to lasso them. And Dad and Von timed us in the saddling and made a most rigid examination of the result. It was the same way with our revolvers and rifles. The house-boys always cleaned them and greased them; but we had to learn how in order to see that they did it properly. More than once, at first, one or the other of us had our rifles taken away for a week just because of a tiny speck of rust. We had to know how to build fires in the driving rain, too, out of wet wood, when we camped out, which was the hardest thing of all—except drumming, I do believe. We learned more from Dad and Von than from the governesses; Dad taught us French and Von, German. We learned both languages passably well, and we learned them wholly in the saddle or in camp.

"In the cool season the girls used to come down and visit me in Hilo, where Dad had two houses, one at the beach; or the three of us used to go down to our place in Puna, and that meant canoes and boats and fishing and swimming. Then, too, Dad belonged to the Royal Hawaiian Yacht Club, and took us racing and cruising. Dad could never get away from the sea, you know. When I was fourteen I was Dad's actual housekeeper, with entire power over the servants, and I am very proud of that period of my life. And when I was sixteen we three girls were all sent up to California to Mills Seminary, which was quite fashionable and stifling. How we used to long for home! We didn't chum with the other girls, who called us little cannibals, just because we came from the Sandwich Islands, and who made invidious remarks about our ancestors banqueting on Captain Cook—which was historically untrue, and, besides, our ancestors hadn't lived in Hawaii.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

IN a recent novel, Elizabeth, the young heroine, in a moment of insane anger with the man she is engaged to and really loves, marries a man for whom she cares nothing.

Of her state of mind afterwards the author writes:

"She would fall to thinking with vague amazement that the irremediable catastrophe was out of all proportion to its cause. It was monstrous that a crazy moment should ruin a whole life—two whole lives—hers and David's. It was as if a pebble should deflect a river from its course and make it turn and overflow a landscape.

"Suddenly it seemed to her as she looked across the roaring gulf that separated her from the past that all her life had been just a sunny slope down to the edge of the gulf. All these 'harmless' tempers which had had no results had pushed her to this result.

* * * It is not the pebble that turns the current. It is the easy slope that invites it. All her life Elizabeth had been inviting this moment—just as some of us are to-day inviting baleful to-morrows. When we shall look back from the depths of these to-morrows and see what we have done, then will we call on the mountains to fall on us and the hills to cover us."

I quote these paragraphs because I think they contain a lesson that more people need than will read the novel. There are no isolated wrong deeds.

There are no wrong deeds without consequences. We give away to temper, we tell a lie, we fail a friend, we are cruel or mean or impure in any way and perhaps nothing happens.

And we think we are fortunate because there are no consequences to our acts.

But we are wrong.

There are always consequences.

You think perhaps I mean merely the effect upon the character, and you think you do not need to worry about such vague spiritual consequences as long as there are no material ones. I do mean that, but I mean much more than that. Every act you do affects your character and ultimately your character affects your life. Just as surely as you get the spiritual results you will also get the material consequences.

In another passage in this wonderful novel the author says of Elizabeth—"She grasped at the realisation — which comes to most of us human creatures sooner or later—that sins may be forgiven, but consequences are eternal."

That is something we all fail to realize until we have to. We are slow to appreciate that although our yielding to this and that and the other small temptation brings no perceptible consequences, it is slowly but surely paving the way for some larger yielding that shall bring life-changing consequences.

The only way you can escape the consequences for weak and wicked acts is to neutralize them by good and strong acts.

You cannot prevent the acid from hurting your hand by trying to wash it off, but yo ucan save yourself from serious burn by promptly neutralizing it with an alkali.

To-day is the day for those of us who need it to apply the alkali of self control and good deeds to our characters.

RAIN HAS HURT HAY

Considerable hay has been destroyed in Peterborough county as a result of the recent rains. Mr. R. H. Leary who has been travelling around in all sections of the county purchasing horses for the western trade, informs the Examiner. Rain has come so frequently recently that the farmers have been unable to get their hay in and a great quantity will be ruined as a result.

FINED $100 AND COSTS

(Lindsay Warder.)

The young man named Slade who shot a section hand with a revolver while passing through Hastings a few days ago came up before Magistrate Jackson this morning and was fined $100, which included the costs. Detective Scott, of the G.T.R., and Robert Douglas, the section man who was shot, were present. J. E. Weldon appeared for the accused. The magistrate stated that he took into consideration the young man's good character, and dealt with him as leniently as possible.

COMPANY RIFLE PRACTICE FOR 57TH REGIMENT

A sugegation has been made to the Rifle committee of the 57th Regiment to arrange for company target practice and the matter is now being considered by the committee. Owing to the hot weather, probably, there are practically very few turning out to practice, and a large number have not put in the necessary number of practices. Every Tuesday, Thursday and Friday nights the practice room is open and lighted for practice, and there is an official in charge of the scores, but at present there is no definite arrangement made for each company to drill on a special night arranged for it. This is now being considered.

CORONATION PROCESSION

When the Coronation procession was trailing its glorious length through the streets of London and holding the breathless attention of the hundreds of thousands gathered from all parts of the world to witness its historical grandeur, a little group of Canada's leading citizens occupied one of the best stands. They were unanimously of the opinion that it was the most striking spectacle they had ever seen. When they were informed that it was to be reproduced in every detail at the Canadian National Exhibition their enthusiasm was boundless. It touched their national pride that Canada possessed an institution of such magnitude that it could undertake the reproduction of the greatest procession of the 20th century and of such reputation that the undertaking of it would mean its fulfilment to the last letter.

PRIZES ON VIEW

The prizes for the big tournament of the Peterborough Lawn Bowling Club are all on exhibition in the window of R. J. Soden's bookstore with the exception of the Stratton trophy, which, it is expected, will be placed with the others in the course of a few days. The tournament will be held on August 7 and 8 and promises to be the biggest event of its kind ever held here. Thirty-two outside rinks are already assured which makes it certain that there will be the keenest kind of a fight for the splendid prizes hung up for the event.

RESUMING WORK

Work has been resumed on the Cordova gold mines, which have been shut down for some years owing to the mine having been flooded. Some twenty-five men are at work there at the present time, and the Examiner is informed that it is the intention of the operating company to have the old mine pumped out.

SUCCESSFUL OUTING HELD AT RICE LAKE YESTERDAY

Choir of Roman Catholic Churches, Altar Boys, Successful Pupils and Others Spent a Pleasant Day at Gore's Landing

WAS GREAT SUCCESS

The annual outing given to the church workers by St. Peter's Cathedral and the Sacred Heart church took place yesterday, and proved a very enjoyable event. The assembly, which was composed of the choirs, altar boys, ushers, successful students and all those who assisted at the T.A.S. picnic, numbered no less than 290.

The steamer Stoney Lake left Wolfe street wharf at 8.30 and, calling at the street railway wharf for more passengers, left that place about 9.

The day was a beautiful one and those who did not remain on the upper deck to gaze at the magnificent scenery for which the river is famous, indulged in sundry amusements on the lower.

About 12 o'clock Gore's Landing was reached, where the passengers landed for dinner, after which various sources of amusement were indulged in. Some held a small conversazione, others played ball, while several found opportunities for taking snapshots.

Leaving Gore's Landing about 3 o'clock the party proceeded round the lake and ultimately back to the river. The city was reached about 7 o'clock, when all were scattered more completely than might have been the case, on account of a rain storm. However, the day was a great success, and for this success credit is due to the captain and crew of the steamer, as, although the steamer contained such a large complement of passengers, everything passed off satisfactory and perfect order prevailed.

5 BOXES CURED PSORIASIS

Mrs. Nettie Massey, Consecon, Ont., writes: "Three doctors described my trouble as psoriasis. And one said I could never be cured. The disease spread all over me, even on my face and head, and the itching and burning was hard to bear. I used eight boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and am entirely cured—not a sore to be seen. I can hardly praise this Ointment enough."

THE LUCKY WINNERS

The lot presented by Mr. J. T. O'Connell in connection with the Sacred Heart social was drawn for on Monday evening, with the result that Mr. George Wiskin, of Thomas street, city, was successful, winning the lot with ticket 1158.

The draw for a trip to St. Anne's also took place at the same time, and the prize fell to ticket 1984, which is still awaiting the owner.

RELIEF AND SUPPLIES WANTED IN PORCUPINE

Newspaper Man on the Ground Describes the Conditions as They are at Present---Major Bennett of Peterboro is Hard at Work at Cochrane---Convicts Fight Fire to Save Their Prison

PORCUPINE, ONT., JULY 18.—"Shake hands!" It was Cyril Young, chairman of the Relief committee, who spoke, being delighted at a reduction in the number of dead in the forest fire.

The death list has been reduced to 60. Owing to a clerical error at the West Dome, a man reported missing never existed. Another name has been discovered duplicated, and an unidentified body was repeated in the list by mistake, after identification. This reduces the list from 63 as it stood this morning, to 60, as it stands to-night. The two bodies reported at the Frederick House yesterday had been confused with two living men who returned to that section from Porcupine.

It may be now that the maximum death list has been reached, although three men on the Powell have not been found. Search parties in Deloro have found no bodies. No new deaths were reported to-day.

Seventy-five men dispossessed by fire were put to work on the Government road to-day, making 150 in all. They are paid two dollars a day and board. G. W. Bennett, of Toronto, Provincial Superintendent of Government Roads, is here in charge. The prisoners are at work since March on the extension of the road to Mattagami.

Prisoners Fought Fire.

There were seventy-five of them, condemned to the Porcupine road for offences in New Ontario, under the petty code, chiefly in connection with the manipulation of booze. It seems they were scared, but they didn't run. They fought the fire with great energy, and saved their prison, if such a thing as a camp in the woods can be considered a prison.

A prospector confessed that the average carelessness in regard to camp fires has been the cause of the incalculable destruction which has just swept over the entire Porcupine mining district. This man, who is an English miner from South Africa, was prospecting with a companion at the headquarters of the Kemiskotia River, sixty miles from Porcupine, near Flying Post, in the Sudbury district. His main camp was destroyed. While they were away they had a pack with them containing sufficient supplies for a few days. "We started a week ago Saturday behind the fire, to follow it to Porcupine, prospecting all the way," said he. They got in here on Sunday, having zig-zagged north and south through Pharaud, Hillary, Childerhouse, Reynolds, Denton, Whitesides, Carscallen, Keefer and McKeown townships, coming out at Joe Moore's on the Mattagami.

Many Townships Burned.

"We got a canoe there," he said, "and followed down to Timmin's Landing, coming across to Porcupine by road. All the townships we were in were burned, except in swamps and odd patches, and out in the unsurveyed district of Sudbury it was the same."

"In Reynolds the muskeg moss was burnt two feet down to the water in some places and wouldn't bear us to cross."

Tis man says he saw five moose horns and bones and also two families of bears safe in the swamps. The men swam across the rivers and lakes at narrows with their packs on a couple of logs. He had applied to the relief committee for boots as his oil tan moccasins are worn right through the soles. The relief stores couldn't accommodate him. They have no boots or footwear of any kind.

"This particular Porcupine fire started travelling in Keefer township," said he. "We sat across the lake and watched it. It was the biggest one of them all."

More Food is Needed.

The distributors of relief at South Porcupine have almost reached the end of their tether. They want more food. The T. Eaton carload lot has been exhausted. In Golden City, too, they have been forced to draw upon their fund of cash and buy relief supplies for Pottsville from the merchants. Fortunately, they now have funds to work with, the total receipts to date amounting to $6,250. What the Porcupine wants now after food supplies is boots, good stout, snag-proof, water-tight boots. It would like some clothing also, especially in the cases of some of the ladies.

An English gentlewoman of refinement to-day was seen in a torn cow-breakfast hat and somebody's discarded wrapper, at the relief station in Golden City.

"Not come yet," they told her when she asked for boots.

Mr. Gibbon says credit should be relief is wearing the clothes in which he came through the baptism of fire and the three-hour test of manhood in the water.

"They are all I've got in the world," laughed he. "My money was in my suit case too."

Mr. iGbbon says credit should be given to Mr. McGill, of the Lyric Theatre, who found him on the street in Golden City at ten o'clock at night. Mr. McGill threw the theatre open to refugees and beds were made by placing two seats together, where the sleepers lay head to head, two to a bench. Even the stage was utilized. There were no blankets in town to spare, however, and everybody lay in wet clothes.

Over 30 Children There.

At 12.30 the manager and the young lady who handles the ticket office came in with a basket of biscuits and a pot of coffee. In the morning another round was served for breakfast. There are eight women in South Porcupine to-day and between 30 and 40 children. Most of them need boots and some of the women would doubtless be thankful for a change of wardrobe.

Madame Valee, the French woman who has escaped from the Dome with a brood of eight children and was buried with them in the ditch while the fire passed, declares that three of them were in their bare feet, and others attest to it. For men, in addition to boots, overalls are needed.

WM. MERCER WAS KILLED

Port Hope Man Killed at Canning Factory

NUMEROUS INJURIES

PORT HOPE, JULY 19.—Mr. William Mercer who resides just north of the G.T.R. viaduct met with an accident while at work in the Canning Factory about six o'clock last night which proved fatal.

Mr. Mercer was engaged in the back room cooking peas in one of the retorts and it is thought he neglected to fasten the door of the retort securely. When the steam reached a certain pressure the door was blown off, breaking in two pieces and striking Mr. Mercer with great force. The forty-five cans of peas which were in the retort at the time of the explosion, were also strewn in every direction and it is thought that many of these struck him.

The injuries were numerous and very severe. Both bones of the right forearm were broken with a compound fracture of the leg leg below the knee. There was also a compound fracture of the left knee cap, the left thigh was broken, the left arm and left forearm and left forearm were broken and also the upper six ribs of the left side. Drs. McKinley and Forest were called and did everything possible for the injured man, but he passed away this morning at six o'clock. Notwithstanding his numerous injuries and severe shock to his system the deceased remained conscious all the time and talked quite freely.

At the request of the family, Coroner McKinley has ordered an inquest and the chief is empanelling a jury to-day.

WELCOME, LAURIER!

To his loved home, comes Canada's great son;
Honours well earned; he seeks no brief respite,
From public life, filled with much work well done.

Across the sea, when at the Capital
Of that great Mother of free Parliaments—
'Mid England's best—surrounded by them all—
Statesmen well schooled to mend a nation's rents—

He speaks, and lo! approval's voice is heard
From those at home, and those across the sea;
While proud old Europe hangs upon his word,
His deed will live with millions yet to be.

And Laurier returns victorious;
Not like the Roman conqueror of old;
Nor seeks to make his name more glorious but by the ways which Justice doth enfold.

Long may he live to guard a nation's trust,
Long be his name revered by rich and poor,
it must
Against much evil shut a nation's door.
Long may his influence last;

MAN WHO HAD LOVE INTRIGUES WITH NO LESS THAN FORTY-TWO WOMEN

Is Convicted of Bigamy and the Presiding Judge Calls Him the Biggest Scoundrel Living

AN INTERESTING CASE

LONDON, July 19.—"I do not think the earth contains another such scoundrel as the prisoner," said Judge Rentoul yesterday at the Old Bailey, at the conclusion of the trial of "George William Lucid alias Leslie," for obtaining money from women whom he had promised to marry, and for committing bigamy with Ethel Selfe at a Brighton registry office.

In defence to the charge of bigamy prisoner said that there was a great mystery connected with his married life which he did not want to speak about. It was of a delicate character. As a matter of fact, the marriage with Miss Selfe, which was alleged to constitute the bigamy he was accused of, was valid. It was true, as the police said, that he had previously married a Mrs. Ransome, but at that time he had a wife alive. That wife died, but the alliance between himself and Mrs. Ransome was, of course, invalid, and therefore his marriage with Miss Selfe was legal.

"Miss Brandon has used that plot 11 times in her novels," commented the Judge.

After prisoner had been found guilty, counsel said he could tell the court something about the delicate domestic relations the prisoner had spoken about. It was true that the prisoner had married Mrs. Ransome—and from her he got £1,500. When the money was gone he left the woman. At the prisoner's lodging 2,700 letters from different women were found, in most of which sums of money were mentioned. The letters showed that he had received £385 from the women, in addition to sums the amount of which was not definitely stated in the letters.

In 1909 the prisoner was communicating with twenty-three different women, in the following year thirty-five, and this year forty-two. Since prisoner had been arrested a letter from an illiterate person had been sent to the prisoner's lodging containing two £5 notes.

A previous conviction of seven years' penal servitude, passed at Reading, was proved against the prisoner. This he denied, but the police said they were certain, for his fingerprints were taken.

"LOWEST DEPTHS OF DEPRAVITY"

Inspector Tapenden said the prisoner's name was Patrick Moran, and he was the son of a well-to-do Tipperary farmer. He joined an Irish regiment and married at Devonport in 1889, but eventually deserted his wife, leaving her with two children.

In 1892 when in the Berkshire Regiment, he was sentenced to seven years' penal servitude for forgery and for stealing postal orders. When accused of the theft he tried to put the blame on his fellow officers. His wife died while he was in prison.

The officer added that prisoner, between his release on ticket-of-leave in 1898 and 1906, when he again married, obtained £1,100 from ten different women under promises of marriage, and in 1907 he married a well-to-do Bristol lady. This was a second bigamy, of which the court had not heard. Some frauds of his also led to the closing of a Catholic Sailors' Home at Plymouth.

"Are you a Catholic?" asked the Judge of the prisoner, and the man replied, "I do not wish to give any details."

"The reason I ask," explained his lordship, "is that when an Irish Catholic, whose attachment to his religion is so well known, commits a fraud on his religious body, he has reached the lowest depth of human depravity."

Judge Rentoul referred to the "heartless and cold-blooded character" of the frauds, an esentenced prisoner to seven years' penal servitude "I have hope," added the Judge, "that the suffragettes will change the law and make such crimes a flogging offence, without giving the judge any option."

"You will hear more of this," exclaimed the prisoner as he was taken from the dock.

MORE EQUIPMENT FOR FIRE DEP'T

The Fire Department has received two new ladders from the Walkerville ladder factory. These ladders were ordered by the Fire, Water and Light committee during the early part of the year. They are 12 and 20 feet in length respectively and are to be used in the interior of private dwelling when necessary. They are very light and neat in construction and can be handled inside of dwelling houses where it is necessary to climb into the attics without running the risk of damaging the walls and furniture. The ladders are of the folding variety and weigh only 25 lbs. One of them will be placed on the hook and ladder waggon and the other in the Chief's light rig. When responding to chimney fires or light calls in future it will not be necessary to take out the heavy apparatus.

WON BY NAME

ST. LOUIS, July 19.—"Pappagiannakopoulos."

Can you pronounce it?

Well, it is rather difficult; but one woman at least succeeded in twisting it out.

Her name was Mrs. Ora Hinman. Now it is not. They live at No. 1101 Chestnut Street.

Gust Pappagiannakopoulos was so pleased when she pronounced it that his otherwise sombre face lighted up with a smile. In fact, he was so happy over it and so pleased with the woman who pronounced it correctly that he proposed marriage.

At least, marriage was the result.

From a name of only six letters to one of twenty is assuming a good deal of responsibility, but Mrs Hinman expressed herself as enough in love with its possessor to make the change.

The Grand Trunk Will Use Phones On Entire System

The Toronto Globe to-day has the following:

It was announced by Mr. W. W. Ashald, Superintendent of Grand Trunk telegraphs, Montreal, last night at the Queen's Hotel, that the company would adopt in the near future the despatching of trains by telephone over its entire system, displacing the telegraph for this purpose.

The company has had two telephone circuits in operation during the past eighteen months and these have given entire satisfaction. These circuits embrace the northern division, with one despatcher, from North Parkdale to Burlington Junction via Allandale, a distance of 140 miles, and the division from Allandale to North Bay, a distance of 185 miles, with one despatcher.

The entire system of the railway totals above 4,700 miles, and the telephone despatching department will include 31 circuits. The same number of operatives will be required as in the present telegraph service Mr. Ashald said that the telephone system was much superior to the telegraph and in flexibility of operation it was considered much safer.

Arough estimate of the cost of installing the system and placing it in operation is $105 a mile. This will bring the entire cost of installation for the system to around $500,000.

"We use a copper metallic circuit," said Mr. Ashald, "having two wires of No 9 gauge of hard group copper. Each wire weighs 210 pounds per mile. It costs 75 per cent. more than the telegraph to install, but the railways consider it so much superior to the telegraph that they readily adopt the telephone." A special telephone will be used.

Mr. Ashald also estimates that the telephone saves 50 per cent. over the telegraph in time. In issuing orders over the telephones the numbers are first given and then spelled out, as "two-three" for twenty three, and the names of towns are first pronounced and then spelled so that the possibility of mistakes is avoided. This check cannot be obtained by telegraph.

The new system has not yet been tried on the northern division and as a consequence there has been no local change as yet.

Forging Lawyer And Rich Beauty Are In Flight Across Ocean

MONTREAL, July 19.—With the St. Lawrence River once more furnishing the stage setting, a criminal drama not unlike that which centred around the noted Dr. Crippen, except that theft instead of murder furnishes the basis, seems to be drawing towards a climax.

According to information which has been received at the local German Consulate in the Commercial Union Building, Wilhelm Johann Gustav Schlottman, of Wismar, Germany, wanted by the police of that city on a charge of having obtained cash to the amount of over $30,000 on forged cheques, is supposed to be now on the water heading in the direction of Montreal.

ELOPED WITH GIRL

Travelling with Schlottman, who was a prominent lawyer in his native city, is said to be Miss Karla Meschatt, the daughter of a Wismar merchant, who has been missing from her home since a day or two previous to Schlottman's disappearance.

While most of the money which Schlottman is said to have carried away from Germany with him, was the result of cleverly forged cheques in the name of some of his clients, it is understood that charges of embezzlement are also to be laid against the man whose action has wrecked the happiness of two homes, that of the girl and his own.

The local police authorities, as well as those at Quebec, have been notified to be on the lookout for Schlottman, who is described as being thirty-seven years of age, about five feet eight inches in height, with a strong, thick-set face, heavy moustache, slightly bald, blue eyes, florid complexion, and always wearing a binocle.

GIRL IS BEAUTY

The Meschatt girl, only twenty-three years of age, and who from her description might have stepped out of one of Laura Jean Libbey's novels, is portrayed — "description" would be too meagre a word for beauty such as hers—as possessing a slender figure, blue eyes, dark brown hair, a small mouth, and a fresh complexion. It is further pointed out that she walks with short, mincing steps.

The German police are inclined to think that the couple may have booked for Canada under the impression that they could enter this country more easily than they could gain admission to the United States through the port of New York or Boston.

Until the whereabouts of the fugitives are known, the passengers of every vessel, continental ones especially, will be closely scrutinised while landing, both here and at the Ancient Capital.

MASONIC GRAND LODGE MEETING AT ST. KITTS FEATURES OF THE REPORT

ST. CATHARINES, JULY 19.—This city opened its arms to close upon one thousand delegates to the 56th annual communication of the Grand Lodge of Ontario, A. F. & A. M., which opened in the Armouries here to-day. Decorations in profusion adorn the principal thoroughfares, and the spirit of hospitality is everywhere pronounced, except in some of the hotels, where rates have been raised on account of the crowded condition o fthe city. In the store windows in many places are artistically arranged the working tools of Masons, and emblems in plenty are everywhere seen. Accommodation is at a premium. In the majority of the hotels from four to six are jammed into a room that usually accommodates one, and all are charged the regular rate. 'A la coronation' House where the rate is $1.50, an extra dollar is tacked on if the room is to be occupied by one person only. Private homes are coming to the relief of the delegates, while many of the visiting craft seek shelter at Niagara Falls and elsewhere.

The local committee made an effort to prevent any increase in hotel rates, and provided much in the way of entertainment for the visitors. The local Masons did themselves proud, but could not control the smaller hotels, which boosted rates.

The Board of General Purposes has recommended a grant of $1,000 to the Porcupine and Cochrane fire sufferers. The delegates were yesterday driven in automobiles to the Tittenhouse Experimental Farm, through the fruit country, a distance of 12 miles, over 100 indulged some time in berry picking.

The annual address of Grand Master D. F. MacWatt was submitted to Grand Lodge. He appealed to the Grand Lodge to take up the question of a proper meeting place for the annual assembly. Matters are getting into such condition that armouries seem to be the only place that afford the necessary accommodation, and even these cannot be secured without large expenses and incurrence for the short time they are required. He stated that the Grand Lodge is far too large to meet in any other city, but Toronto, unless the membership is reduced by the elimination of the past masters. Even then it would, he said, take years to cut this vote out entirely. He stated that the new ballot is disapproved of by a large number of lodges, and eight lodges are yet to be supplied.

Satisfaction was expressed that the 'amende honorable' had been made and the best of fraternal relationship re-established with Michigan.

Financial Statistics.

He paid a tribute to the officers of Grand Lodge for their assistance during the past year. During the year he made 43 official visits, entailing the travel of 13,000 miles; he consecrated University Lodge, Toronto, and Electric Lodge at Hamilton, besides attending the Grand Lodges of Michigan and the Grand Lodge of Quebec. It was his privilege to lay eight corner stones and attend twelve lodges of instruction.

The Grand Master occupied some time with the financial end of the year's work. The membership of the craft in this grand district on May 31, 1910, numbered 46,000, and on May 31, 1911, it numbered 48,500, an increase of 2,500 for the year, with a total of 413 lodges on the register. The total receipts for the year aggregated $42,368, an increase of $1,176, compared with the previous one; expenditures for ordinary purposes were $16,797, leaving a surplus of $25,588, as against $26,030 for last year.

Grants to the benevolent fund amounted to $26,275, against $24,129, besides $3,920 from the interest of the semi-annual centennial funds, making the total grants for benevolence this year $30,195 against $26,676 for 1910.

Referring to the centennial fund the Grand Master said 280 of the 413 lodges had paid their full quota, and to-day the aggregate sum paid in is $93,125, leaving $6,875 yet to come in. A model set of by-laws is suggested for the general benefit of the craft that shall have the approval of the Grand Lodge.

Toronto Central Temple Suggested.

The statement of Grand Secretary R. W. Bro. E. L. Gunn, of Hamilton, shows the revenue to have been $68,235 for the year. Of this sum $77,369 was from lodges and $21,595 matured and paid debentures. There is a cash balance on hand of approximately $500. The amount received in dues was $22,922, and from initiation $10,263. The statement of M. W. Bro. E. T. Malone, Toronto, shows the assets of the Grand Lodge to be $112,896, of which $108,760 represents investments in municipal and other debentures bearing interest from 4 to 5 percent.

R. W. Bro. W. N. Yongston submitted a flowery report on the condition of Masonry. He directs attention to the value of history, and suggests that if members of the craft would follow from afar the example set by M. W. Bro. John Ross Robertson, whose munificence has this year again won the gratitude of every Mason in the presentation of another historic picture, that of the late Bro. W. J. Hughan, of England, a grand constructive work well begun would be continued.

In this report the hope is cherished that a central temple Masonic in the City of Toronto will soon be an accomplished fact.

A recommendation is made that a special committee of experienced members should take up and deal with the vexed question of ballots, and formulate regulations that would prevent injustice being done.

Messrs. H. R. H. Kenner, John Crane, W. H. Walkey and Walter Stocker are Peterborough delegates to the big Masonic convention.

THE LIFE STORY OF A CANADIAN BIRDMAN

J. A. McCurdy can justly lay claim to the title of one of the premier aviators of the world. His experience in aviation runs contemporary with that of the Wrights and Glen H. Curtiss. Indeed, he was identified with Mr. Curtiss in his earliest experimental work in aviation, and together with Charles F. Willard, with whom he is now associated, was flying almost as soon as Curtiss himself.

Mr. McCurdy is a god-son of Dr. Alexander Graham Bell, inventor of the telephone, and eminent in science. Together with Dr. Alexander Graham Bell, Lieut. Thomas E. Selfridge, Captain Thomas S. Baldwin and Glen H. Curtiss, Mr. McCurdy took part in the pioneer work of the Aerial Experimental Association. Therefore, he is one of the few aviators whose experience dates back to the earliest period of the history of the heavier-than-air flying machine. He designed the "Silver Dart," the last machine built by the Experimental Association. Previous to that he had flown the "White Wings." This was more than three years ago, and is counted ancient history in the brief analysis of aviation.

Mr. McCurdy has the further distinction of being the only man who has successfully carried on experiments in sending and receiving wireless messages while in flight. He is a practical telegrapher and electrician, as well as one of the greatest experts on gas engines in this country.

Mr. McCurdy is a graduate of the University of Toronto, Canada, and served as president of the Aero Club of Canada. He holds nearly all the aviation records in his native country.

Mr. McCurdy became an aviator through what might be called a mere accident. When he left the university, he took up the work of civil engineering, and together with F. W. Baldwin, another youthful engineer, undertook to erect on the estate of Dr. Bell at Braddock, Nova Scotia, a tetrahedral tower for use in kite experiments. While engaged in this work the young engineer became interested in Dr. Bell's experiments in the problem of mechanical flight. Their work brought them into close association, and finally they formed the Aerial Experimental Association, with Dr. Bell as chairman. They were joined later by Lieut. Thomas E. Selfridge of the United States Army, an enthusiast on the problem of aviation. Lieut. Selfridge became secretary of the Association Glen H. Curtiss later joined them and took a prominent part in the work of the Association.

One of the plans of this organization was that each member should design a machine which should be built by the Association. The first one was "Red Wings," designed by Lieut. Selfridge. "White Wings," designed by Baldwin, came next, and it was in this machine that Mr. McCurdy made his first flight. Following "White Wings" Curtiss designed the "June Bug," and in this, also, Mr. McCurdy made a number of flights. The last machine, built by the Experimental Association was the "Silver Dart," designed and flown by Mr. McCurdy.

Mr. McCurdy became known throughout the United States as an expert exhibition flyer during the years 1910 and 1911. He made flights in almost every city east of the Mississippi and as far south as Havana, Cuba. He flew under all sorts of conditions and from all sorts of grounds. Everywhere his work was regarded as both spectacular and sane. That is, he does not believe in doing "stunts," arguing that such things do not advance the science of aviation, but only demonstrate the acrobatic possibilities of an aeroplane. In short, he believes in advancing the science of aviation from an educational standpoint, that is, to demonstrate to the public at large the possibilities of an aeroplane from a practical standpoint. He has carried passengers at a great many places and always with success and safety to the passenger. "I will go up if McCurdy will take me," is a common expression with the timid, wherever McCurdy flies. In fact, he has become known throughout the country as one of the safest men operating an aeroplane.

Perhaps the greatest flight ever made by Mr. McCurdy was from Key West, Florida, to Havana, Cuba, a distance of 90 miles over the ocean. This flight was made last February, under the supervision of the United States Government, which furnished a patrol of torpedo boats to follow the route of the aviator. These patrols were stationed ten miles apart and were notified by wireless when Mr. McCurdy made his start.

While Mr. McCurdy, on this memorable flight, did not succeed in landing on the Isle of Cuba, having been forced to come down in the harbor of Havana because his fuel ran out, yet he demonstrated, in the longest water flight ever made in the history of aviation, the absolute practicability of the aeroplane.

Mr. McCurdy made some memorable flights in Washington, D. C., last March, in demonstrating an aeroplane sold to the United States Government for the War Department. He flew around Washington Monument, over the city, and landed near the White House. His flights were watched by all the distinguished officials of the Government, as well as foreign ambassadors and military attaches. The aerial evolutions on these flights brought Mr. McCurdy prominently before the representatives of foreign governments as an expert aviator, and he was warmly congratulated by many of these officials.

In Havana, Cuba, Mr. McCurdy won the prize of $5,000 for the flight around Morro Castle. At many of the Southern cities he made over-city flights, and one of his familiar and spectacular stunts has been the racing of automobiles on circular tracks. At many places he has been able to make the circuit of a mile track in less than a minute.

Mr. McCurdy will exhibit at the aviation meeting in Hamilton, July 27 to Aug. 1.

FUNERAL OF MRS. BROWNE

The funeral of the late Mrs. Browne was held from the family residence, George street, to St. John's church, and thence to Little Lake cemetery yesterday afternoon. A large number attended to pay their last respects to one who had been popular with everyone. Representatives of the Pattern makers' Association attended in a body and several members of Marathon Lodge, Knights of Pythias were also present. An impressive service was held in St. John's church, conducted by Rev. Canon Davidson, who made a feeling reference to the valuable services rendered St. John's by the deceased. Mr. R. J. Devey, the organist, presided at the organ. The pallbearers were Messrs. Fred, Robert, George and Archie Browne, sons of the deceased, Mr. R. McGill Hood, a son-in-law, and Mr. Chas. Seymour, grandson.

Many beautiful floral tributes testified to the esteem in which the deceased was held. Among them were the following: Large pillow "Mother" from members of the family; large cross "Grandma" from the grand-children; anchor from pattern makers of Wm. Hamilton Co.; gates ajar from Examiner employees; wreath from Porcelain Department of C.G.E.; basket from young ladies of Miss Wesley's department of the Cressman Co.; bouquet, Mrs. E. G. Wesley; basket, Miss Lucy Anderson; bouquet, Mrs. Cuffe and family; anchor from Review employees; wreath from staff of the Cressman Company store; sheath bouquet, Mrs. Dillon and Miss Campbell; sheaf of wheat from brothers and sisters, Lindsay; sheaf of wheat from Marathon Lodge, Knights of Pythias; flowers from St. John's altar.

ACCIDENT AVERTED

Last night an automobile nearly collided with a street car on George street. The automobile tried to turn into Brock street, when the car skidded completely around before the operator could regain control. A street car was coming down George street and only the quickness of the motorman averted a serious accident.

TREATY IS RATIFIED

One Anglo American Pact is Approved by the United States —Senate Will Arbitrate All Claims

SIGNED IMMEDIATELY

Washington, July 20.—The treaty between the United States and Great Britain, providing for the arbitration of pecuniary claims between the two countries, in accordance with the general arbitration treaty, was ratified by the Senate in executive session yesterday.

The treaty provides that within four months each of the Governments may submit to the other any claims which it desires shall be passed upon, the only condition being that the claims shall be grouped. All claims not submitted within the time specified are to be barred.

A tribunal of three members, one of whom is to be chosen by the United States, another by Great Britain, and the third by the first two, is provided for. It is to sit in Washington.

With the treaty there was submitted a long list of shipping claims against the British Government, and a much shorter list against this Government, consisting in the main of Canadian demands for the refund of hay duty

Many of the claims are of long standing.

The treaty was not acted upon by the committee on foreign relations until yesterday, and was ratified as soon as reported, an unusual proceeding. There was no debate.

STORES ROBBED.

Burglars at Athens, Ont., Got Away With Jewelry.

Brockville, July 20.—By the use of skeleton keys the stores of T. S. Kendrick and H. Knowlton in Athens, were entered during the night. In the former the till was raffled, but the intruders only got a few coppers. Mr. Knowlton, who keeps a jewelry store, did not fare so well. All the valuable jewelry was left in the safe unlocked, making access to it the easiest kind of a job. There are missing one dozen gold watches, one tray of watches belonging to customers, one tray of opal rings, one tray of diamond rings, a number of gold chains and lockets and $75 in cash.

The burglars overlooked a quantity of valuable goods which would have appealed to their thieving proclivities had they been experts. For this reason it is believed that the burglars were amateurs, well acquainted with the both premises, particularly as the floor of the Knowlton store, being freshly painted, was only marked in two places, showing that the visitors picked their steps.

Cholera Is Suspected.

Montreal, July 20.—The steamship Bendo, from Bombay, arrived yesterday with an emergency crew aboard. She called at Baltimore, Md., to discharge, and was given a clean bill of health. At Quebec she was held for two cases of suspected cholera, and the whole crew were landed, and the Canadian Government put on an emergency crew to bring her to Montreal The two suspects and the crew are at Grosse Isle yet.

Eleanor Robson's Loss.

New York, July 20.—When Mrs. August Belmont, who was Eleanor Robson, the actress, arrived here yesterday on the Olympic, the customs inspectors deprived her of a fifteen thousand dollar diamond studded bow-knot pin, which was sent to the appraisers stores for valuation. Mrs. Belmont believed that the duty had been paid on the pin when she obtained it. The customs officers thought otherwise.

Hoboes on the Rampage.

Kingston, July 20.—Hoboes were on the rampage about Newboro, where C.N.R. construction work is proceeding. Two highwaymen tried to hold up Dr. G. F. Ackland in a Portland swamp. One man caught the horse's head and another tried to catch the hind wheel, but the frightened horse plunged forward.

You Should Tremble And Shudder

When an unscrupulous druggist offers you a substitute for DR. FOWLER'S Extract of Wild Strawberry.

If you are suddenly attacked by DIARRHOEA, DYSENTERY, COLIC, CRAMPS OR PAINS IN THE STOMACH, CHOLERA MORBUS, SUMMER COMPLAINT, or any LOOSENESS OF THE BOWELS, do not experiment with some new and untried remedy, but get one that has stood the test of time.

For 65 years this wonderful medicine has been used in thousands of homes in Canada, and has given universal satisfaction. When you want a bottle of "Dr. Fowler's," insist on being given what you ask for, as these no-name, no-reputation preparations may be dangerous to your health.

Mr. J. Castle, Totonka, Man., writes: "Just a word in favor of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, which I used last summer for Cramps in the Stomach and Diarrhoea. I was very sick for a week and not able to do anything until I purchased a bottle of the above remedy, and after three or four doses I was as well as ever."

The price is 35 cents per bottle. See that the name, The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont., appears on the label, as we are the manufacturers and sole proprietors of this remedy.

BLOCKING BUSINESS

Opposition Members Discuss Anything But Reciprocity—Member For Leeds Refers to the Coal Strike

TAKING OF CENSUS

Ottawa, July 20.—In the Parliamentary battle the Government still holds the position of vantage. The keen contest of political sagacity continued again yesterday. Again the Government forced the fighting, with insistence upon proceeding with public business. Sir Wilfrid Laurier remained steadily in his place. The Premier was in great fettle, good-tempered, courteous, but firm in his determination to make progress with the legislation. The Opposition on the other hand, is having a hard time to preserve its equanimity. Mr. J. D. Taylor's peevish outbreak Tuesday night against having to proceed with the reciprocity debate was followed yesterday by a heated exclamation by Mr. George Taylor, in discussing the coal strikes of the west, that it would be better for the Government to drive the strikers to work at the point of the bayonet" than to allow a coal famine to strike the districts.

When the House met yesterday afternoon it was seen that the ranks of the members had been largely augmented over night. Mr. Monk and the Nationalists were in their places. There were more Ontario members on hand, and the Maritime contingent was almost full strength.

Mr. Fielding, in reply to a question from George Gordon (Nipissing) regarding the Porcupine fire sufferers, reminded Mr. Gordon that Mr. Smythe, the member for East Algoma, had drawn the matter to the attention of the Government on Tuesday, and that he had made a statement to the effect that the question was engaging the attention of the Government.

When Mr. Fielding moved the House into the committee on the reciprocity resolutions at 3.20, A. S. Goodeve (Kootenay), introduced a discussion on the question of the western coal strike, inquiring if the Government had received the report of the conciliation board and what action was proposed to take.

Mr. Goodeve said that the situation caused by the strike was serious, and promised to be worse if a settlement was not reached before the cold weather set in. If no relief is given in way of coal supplies, settlers would freeze to death on the prairies during the winter months.

Hon. Mackenzie King, after laying on the table a report of the conciliation board, said he was surprised to hear the member from the Kootenay discuss this industrial situation from the standpoint of party policy. The moment either party commenced to make political capital out of the situation, the difficulties in the way of a settlement would be increased.

The main question in dispute was that of the open and closed shop, the workmen and the operators taking diametrically opposite views. It was quite possible, therefore, that the strike might develop into a test endurance.

J. G. Turriff (Assiniboia) said the Opposition members were paying more attention to the political side of the question. They made no suggestion as to how the difficulty might be settled.

The discussion then drifted into a general criticism of the Labor Department, Messrs. Blain, Middleboro, Reid and Perley, all condemning it. Dr. Reid said that to his knowledge the Department had never settled one strike and should be abolished.

Uriah Wilson (Lennox and Addington), who retires with the present Parliament, sang his swan-song yesterday and added more fuel to the reciprocity debate. He based his judgment on the assumption that reciprocity would diminish Canada's trade with England. He thought that England should give some compensating consideration for the preference.

E. Gus Porter (East Hastings) quoted a mass of statistics to show that Canadian farmers receive more for their products than do those of the United States. It would, he said, be the height of folly for the farmers of Canada to cast in their lot with those of the United States.

Hon. Sydney Fisher, Minister of Agriculture, was vigorously assailed in the Commons yesterday afternoon over the census figures. In reply to an interpellation by Mr. Borden on Tuesday the Minister stated that the final figures would not likely be available before October. About 28 per cent. of the enumerators had not made their returns, but the bureau was keeping up with the work of tabulation.

G. H. Perley (Argenteuil) led the attack. He quoted from a local paper a severe criticism on the manner in which the work had been done here, and declared that the system of paying five cents per name was not calculated to encourage enterprise. He said whole parishes had been omitted in Montreal.

Mr. Fisher characterized the criticism of his Department as reckless and unfounded. People who thought they had been omitted should notify the census commissioners. As a matter of fact the Department had received few complaints.

Mr. Borden created some amusement by wanting to know if he had been counted in as a citizen of Canada. Until June 15 no enumerator had called upon him. He found it impossible to believe that complaints from all over the country were without foundation.

Mr. Emmerson observed that the Maritime Provinces were vitally interested in the correctness of the census, and he was satisfied that it would be found the population had been correctly enumerated.

One of the names mentioned for elevation to the Lords as "a vetp peer" is that of Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

Mr. Charles Savard of Hull, who went through the Porcupine fire, says he saw the bodies of seven Poles who were burned to death.

Tom Cheney, of Petrolea, Grand Trunk brakeman, injured while shunting at Guelph Tuesday morning, died there yesterday. An inquest will be held.

The census returns for the town of Ingersoll show the population to be about 4,780, which represent an increase of about 400 since the last decennial census.

The street car strike at Oporto, Portugal, has reached an acute stage, and the leaders are trying to launch a general strike. Troops fired on the rioters yesterday to disperse them.

Senator Bristow, of Kansas, proposed an amendment yesterday to the Canadian reciprocity bill, imposing a duty of 30 per cent. on rubber sponges, and 25 per cent. on other rubber goods not now provided for.

Master Giles Wright of Newboro, Ont., was with his grandfather, Thos. McCann, in a meadow. The farmer was cutting hay and, unobserved, the lad walked into the knives of the machine and had two legs badly mangled.

Avoid Gambling Charge.

Albany, N.Y., July 20.—The Gillins bill to relieve directors of racing associations from liability for gambling carried on at race tracks without their knowledge, passed the Senate yesterday by a vote of 25 to 22. It has not passed the Assembly.

WILL ACCEPT THE VETO

Lords to Yield to the Inevitable, Says Unionist Paper—Fifty New Peers Will Probably be Created

TELEGRAPH'S REMARKS

London, July 20.—The Daily Telegraph, a staunch Unionist paper, in to-day's editorial, says not only that the House of Lords will pass the third reading of the veto bill to-day without division, but that when the Government bill is returned to the Upper Chamber, shorn of the Lords' amendments, they will pass that also, for the simple reason "that there is really no practicable choice," and because it would form an evil and dangerous precedent to bring the crown into the struggle and it would be impossible for the King to withhold his consent if the Ministers requested the creation of peers.

Practically the whole Unionist press has now fallen into line with The Telegraph in the admission that this is the only reasonable policy for the Lords to follow, and that the "no surrender" policy would be suicidal."

Long meetings of the Cabinet and also the Unionist leaders, including Balfour and Lansdowne, Selborne, Carson, Salisbury and others, were held yesterday for the purpose of making final arrangements for the coming debates. Premier Asquith has postponed his visit to Scotland on account of the crisis, and urgent whips have been issued to all parties for Monday's sitting of the House of Commons. On that date the Prime Minister will move the excision of the Lords' amendments, and he is expected to make an important pronouncement on the Ministerial intentions. According to persistent reports, whatever happens fifty new peers will be created before the bill is sent back to the House of Lords, as an earnest of the Government's intentions, should there be a disposition on the part of the peers to display obduracy.

It is explained that the present Government has created much fewer than the customary number of peerages in recent years, and that therefore the creation of fifty now would little more than restore the balance.

That the creation of peers may yet be necessary is indicated by an editorial in The Morning Post, which still counsels a firm policy of no surrender.

Crisis Settled Peaceably?

London, July 20.—The announcement yesterday that A. J. Balfour, leader of the Opposition in the House of Commons, will go to Gastein to take the cure early in August, is regarded in the lobby of the Lower House as particularly significant, and is widely accepted as an indication of a peaceful settlement of the constitutional crisis.

At the same time a denial was issued by the Unionist leader that the condition of his health necessitated the trip. This disposes of the suggestion that he was obeying the orders of his physician and is taken as confirmation of the belief that he does not anticipate any vital political disturbance over the Veto Bill such as would be created by a deadlock of the two chambers and the appointment of a large number of peers.

Every Bone Broken.

Port Hope, July 20.—In the canning factory here on Tuesday night there was a most distressing accident in the steam cooking department, which cost the life of one of the employes, Wm. Mercer, 250 years of age.

He was standing with another man by the side of one of the retorts, which was turned against him with such force as to break almost every bone in his body. He died yesterday morning after twelve hours of most excruciating agony. He leaves a wife and grown-up family.

Dr. McKinley and a jury held an inquest yesterday afternoon, and no blame was attached to the authorities or to the factory. There were about one hundred cans in the retort at the time, and the steam was of sufficient intensity to force open the door, which may not have been properly fastened.

Bloodhounds Seek Murderer.

Richmond, Va., July 20.—Bloodhounds yesterday are aiding in the hunt for the man who on Tuesday night shot and killed Mrs. Harry C. Beattie, jr., as she was riding with her husband in an automobile.

Young Beattie stopped the car when an unidentified man, evidently an anti-automobile fanatic, stood stubbornly in the middle of the road. When he asked the man to make way, the latter with a surly retort raised a shot gun and fired at close range.

WYETH'S SAGE AND SULPHUR HAIR REMEDY

Here's the Proof

For two or three years my hair had be n falling out and getting quite thin, until the top of my head was entirely bald. About four months ago I commenced using Sage and Sulphur. The first bottle seemed to do some good and I kept using it regularly, until now I have used four bottles. The whole top of my head is now fairly covered with hair and it keeps coming in thicker. I shall keep on using it a while longer, as I notice a constant improvement.

LAST PRACTICE TO-NIGHT FOR SATURDAY'S MIDLAND LEAGUE FIXTURE HERE

Rain interfered with the practice of the Peterborough Baseball Club last night, but Manager Quinlan wants to see every member of the team out in uniform at 6.30 o'clock to-night at Riverside Park, as this is the final workout before Saturday's big Midland League game here with Bowmanville. The fans are very much interested in the week-end pastime owing to the closeness of the last two games between the two teams and they realise that Saturday's game should be a hummer all along the line. Big Beith of the Bowmanville team is the McConnell of the League as far as the Petes are concerned, but the local players are going to try to drive him to the woods in the same manner as Joe Kelley's slugging Leafs chased the Rochester phenom to the stable on Tuesday. Beith has beaten Peterborough once and came very near doing it on the other occasion on which the two teams have met. It should be a pitcher's battle between him and Quinlan and the duel should be a red-hot one. Jimmy O'Hearne the Petes' second sacker will be an absentee, but otherwise the local team will be about the same as last Saturday, although the line-up will not be definitely known until after to-night's practice. Saturday's game is billed to start sharp at 3 o'clock, and it is altogether likely that Jack Rosevear, of Port Hope, will umpire. The prices will be the same as usual. Gentlemen 25c., ladies 15c. and children 10c.

ALEXANDER GETS REVENGE ON PITTSBURG PIRATES

PHILADELPHIA, JULY 19.— The bitter fight in the second game of the double header between the Pirates and Phillies yesterday has some history attached to it. Grover Alexander never pitched so hard to win in his young life, and when Paskert came over with the winning run Alexander waited him at the plate with outstretched arms. There was reason. Last fall Pittsburg drafted young Alexander, then let him out. The Phils purchased him from a New York State League club, and the Pirate management laughed at the Quakers for plucking lemons. After the start of the present season, when Alexander practically won every game he went into, Philadelphia turned the laugh on Pittsburg. More especially so, when Alex himself beat the Pirates twice in five days. The report was sent out from Pittsburg that Dreyfuss knew Alexander was a good pitcher, but he had a "champagne taste" and could not be depended upon. When this got abroad, the twenty-year-old phenom grew furious, and swore the Pirates would never beat him as long as he was able to pitch. He beat Clarke's men for the fifth time this season yesterday, though he had to go ten innings to do it.

It was also Alexander's twentieth victory out of twenty-three games pitched. He is far and away ahead of any other twirler in the National League.

What Is The Matter With Local Sport Followers ?

"What is the matter with the people of Peterborough in regard to sports?" was the query that was hurled at the Examiner sporting editor last night by a local gentleman who for many years has been a loyal supporter of Peterborough teams in the different lines of athletic activity. There does not seem to be any of the old time enthusiasm left and our teams are poorly supported. With once f the best teams we have had in years we can only get between 400 and 500 people out for a game out of a population of 18,000 and if you will notice carefully it's the same little loyal bunch that goes every week. Association football has been revived with great success as far as the game and players go but the attendance has been pitifully small, only a handful turning out to the games. What is the matter? Years ago they used to shut up the stores when there was a big game on, but there is none of that feeling left.

McFarland's Matches Are Called Off

CHICAGO, JULY 19.—Packey McFarland's matches with Matt. Wells and Ad. Wolgast, yesterday considered practically settled, are fading rapidly to-day and may vanish before the week is over.

The Wells bout, supposedly signed for and all arrangements out of the way, has been halted by the demand of George McDonald, manager of the Briton, that Charley White refree the contest. McDonald also wants a change made in the financial stipulations.

Emil Thiery, manager for McFarland, calls McDonald's demand for an eastern referee in Milwaukee preposterous, and will not agree to it, and has served notice on the English lightweight that he must be content to fight under the original terms or negotiations with him will be dropped permanently.

WOLGAST A FIERCE BODY PUNCHER

"If Wells is the hard body puncher that they say he is, he and Wolgast would make a great battle," remarked a ring veteran, when discussing the merits of the British champ. "He must have learned a whole lot since he last visited this country. I saw him in a couple of preliminary goes around New York, and he impressed me as being a husky youth, but nothing very much out of the common. I think that Wolgast is the fiercest body puncher in the ring to-day. He has won all his battles by battering the ribs and stomach of an opponent, not alone in the clinches, but by wading in with his punch and sending the whole weight of his frame into the blow. You don't see many of the present fighters pay so much attention to the body while boxing at long range. They usually wait until a clinch occurs, and then hang on and wrestle around, taking an occasional rap with the right over the kidneys. And that's why so many boxing bouts nowadays degenerate into mere hugging matches.

"It will be remembered by those who saw Welsh in action in this country that he was always anxious about guarding his face, but that his stomach defence was not particularly good. Dick Green, the Chicago boxer, who seconded Wells in his fight for the English championship, declares that Wells devoted a large part of his time while training to perfecting a body wallop that afterward made serious trouble for Fred's mid-section.

"It was George Dawson who first introduced the kidney punch into this country. But he didn't deliver it like the scores of imitators who tried to follow his example. Dawson didn't wait for the clinch. He would slip a left lead, getting well under it, and then smash his right down with sledge-hammer force over the spot where it hurt the most. After the delivery he stepped back quickly, and gave his man no chance to clinch. A very few of those visitations over the kidneys were sufficient to take all the fight out of Dawson's opponent, no matter how game he happened to be. Tommy Ryan got hep to the kidney punch after his six-round bout with Dawson at the old Battery D, but he never could use it to as good effect as the tricky Australian.

"Some of the best scrappers of the past won most of their battles by virtue of punches delivered on the body. One hears a lot about Kid McCoy's famous corkscrew blow for the jaw. But it wasn't with that that McCoy achieved most of his victories. His most deadly punch consisted of a fake lead with the left for the jaw, and the instant his opponent blocked high McCoy changed the course of the left and brought it down over the liver like the slash of a whip. Ask any man who ever fought the Kid and he will tell you that the liver punch was the one that hurt him most.

"Bob Fitzsimmons had the heart and solar plexus blows timed to such a nicety that he seldom failed to get anybody he tried them on. Yet today you hear more about Fitz's right punch to the jaw than anything else he used, although it was the solar plexus punch that he whipped J. Corbett with, and won the championship. Fitz was a pupil of Jerry Foley—Australasia's grand old man in the ring—and it was from Jerry that he learned the trick of body punishment. Look back at any of the old London prize ring records, and it can be seen that the champion of those days won the majority of their contests by paying particular attention to body punching.

"Jim Jeffries always got a pile of credit for being a terrific body puncher, but he was nothing of the kind. Jim was a freak, pure and simple, in regard to size and weight, and in these respects he outclassed every man he battled, until he met Johnson. Tom Sharkey told me that when he lost to Jeffries in their second battle—the one in New York which decided the championship—the big fellow rarely got home with the right body punch which was supposed to have broken the sailor's ribs. Instead, he waited for Tom's rushes, ducked under Sharkey's left, and drove his shoulder straight into the latter's side. When it is remembered that Jeffries outweighed the sailor by fully thirty pounds, one can readily understand how Tom's ribs must have suffered from the collision.

POINT EDWARD MAN CAME TO CITY BY MISTAKE

A Russian, named Frank Miller, arrived in the city this morning on the C. P. R. from Point Edward, and found, to his dismay, when he arrived that it is was Peterborough instead of Pittsburg, he was in. He was conveyed to the Police Station by a representative of the Morning Times, where he explained the circumstances. He told the authorities that he had a brother in Pittsburg, and was going to him, and did not discover that his ticket was to Peterborough instead of Pittsburg. He made arrangements this afternoon for the trip to Pittsburg.

C. P. R. WILL DESPATCH TRAINS BY TELEPHONE SYSTEM

The new system of train dispatching by telephone is rapidly superseding the telegraph. The C. P. R. have already several thousand miles of through line and are rapidly equipping the entire system.

Last week the system was installed at the local C. P. R. depot and in conversation with Mr. E. L. Bowes, the operator, the Examiner was informed that the system was giving excellent satisfaction.

An Article, which recently appeared in the Toronto World, regarding the system, is as follows:

The telephone system of train control, a system that has been found much more accurate and faster than the telegraph, is quite likely to entirely supersede the letter method on the railway lines of Canada.

The C. P. R. have now 4,000 miles of through line from coast to coast equipped, although there are three short divisions not completely finished. The telephone system operated on the C. P. R. is known as the Gill Selector Telephone Train Despatching System, and the Grand Trunk and Canadian Northern officials are now considering its installation on their lines. The G. T. R. have already installed three circuits.

The telephone system has been found more economical in operation than the telegraph, is speedier, a matter of vital importance in train control, and is also much more effective and reliable than the old style way.

There is but little difference between the railway telephone and the commercial one, although the railroad demands a much higher degree of efficiency, existing in the method of calling, and on the Gill system there is a small machine about three inches square, called the selector, that differentiates the railway system.

Each operator on the railroad has this selector as part of his equipment, and they are all keyed differently. The despatcher has a call board to which are connected all the selectors within a hundred miles each side of him. When he wishes to call a certain station, all the selectors in his division will work, but silently, and only the station that he is calling, through the button on his call board will get his signal. The selector works this signal, usually a bell, and which in most cases keeps ringing until the man wanted, answers. There is no chance of a station man not hearing his call, and this method of signalling has been found an effective accident preventer.

This little selector will some day be used on the farmers' line in the country, where, when one man is wanted, every phone on the line rings. The selective system would but ring the bell of the phone required.

Another feature of the railroad telephone system is that the despatcher may be connected with every semaphore on his division, and can set them from his desk although the one he wants "closed" is 200 miles away. This phase of the telephone has not yet reached Canada, but is coming.

PAINTING TOP OF CITY CLOCK

Swinging from a thread-like rope, one hundred feet from the ground, and with the rope and a paint can in one hand and a paint brush in the other, Mr. Will Keller, a well known local painter, performed a feat this morning which won the admiration of a large number of people who stood watching him, and who held their breath as he changed his position, lest he slip from his high perch and drop a hundred feet to be smashed to pieces on the ground below. The place in question was the top of the cupola on the city clock tower. It was impossible to erect a scaffold on which to paint this peak and the feat had to be performed by means of a rope. A loop was tied on the end of the rope and it was placed over the peak by means of a long stick. This done Mr. Keller began his climb up the rope, a distance of about 15 feet with a paint can in his hand. He managed to gain the top, where he put his arm around the little peak, which by the way is five feet in height and stuck on there while he painted it. He had to put his arms around it and slide down when changing his position, and this movement was made before the eyes of a large number of interested citizens, who watched him from the street below. The tower is a little over a hundred feet high from a recent measurement. The contract of painting the tower is with Mr. L. Hally, but Mr. Keller performed the before mentioned feat, which required no small amount of nerve. Mr. Keller stated to an Examiner reporter that it was a pretty 'ticklish' job, to use his own words, but he had no fear of falling.

FUNERAL WAS LARGELY ATTENDED

The funeral of the late Mr. Samuel Thompson took place this afternoon from the residence of Mrs. King, corner of Dublin and Rubidge street, to Little Lake Cemetery. The Loyal Orange Lodge, of which deceased was a member, turned out in a body to pay their last respects. The floral tributes were many and beautiful. Rev. Mr. Brown conducted a very solemn and impressive funeral service. The funeral arrangements were in charge of the brethren.

CASE WAS ADJOURNED

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, JULY 20.—At the close of the hearing of the case this morning against Wm. Lindsay, charged with conspiring to secure the charter of the Farmers Bank, Magistrate Denison said he had heard enough to send Lindsay on to trial, but adjourned until to-morrow to get Dawver Laid law's evidence.

CANADIANS LOSE

Special to The Examiner:

BISLEY CAMP, ENG., JULY 20. (Flashed)—After having won in the first stage for the Kalapore Cup, the Canadians faded away and lost to the Mother Country. At the conclusion the score was tied, but the Mother Country, having made the best scores in the long distances, was declared a winner.

BISLEY CAMP, ENG., JULY 20.—In the first stage of the shooting for the Kalapore Cup, the Canadians led at three hundred yards with the Mother country second and New Zealand third. At five hundred yards the Canadians were first, South Africa second and the Mother country third.

Trent Canal Guide Book.

—Just issued from the Examiner presses, a most comprehensive and artistic reference and guide book of the Trent Canal, containing a host of valuable and hitherto unpublished information concerning the waterway, compiled by Mr. E. S. Clarry. This book gives precisely the information about the Canal that is so much in demand. Containing as it does, charts of the lakes throughout the system from Orillia and Barrie on Lake Simcoe to Healey's Falls on the Trent, with the main steamer channel clearly indicated it will be of invaluable assistance to the owners of power boats. The maps and charts which the guide book contains are alone worth many times the price of the publication, and they will be appreciated by all navigators in the district. The book is beautifully illustrated by artistic photographs of many points of interest along the system and will be much in demand, if only for souvenir purposes. It is now on sale at Trebilcock Bros. Peterborough Book Store.

OBITUARY

At the home of Miss Hayes, "Skibbereen Farm," Otonabee, there passed away Mrs. Anne Sara Simpson of Chicago. Mrs. Simpson came here with Miss Hayes four weeks ago. The deceased has been an invalid for some years and Miss Hayes has been her faithful and beloved attendant. Mrs. Simpson was a member of Temple Baptist Church of Chicago. Mr. Howard Sard Simpson, the only son of the departed, with his aunt, Mrs. Margaret Sard Hughes arrived at noon to-day, and left on the 4.28 train with the remains.

CORNELIUS CULLING.

The death occurred this morning at 563 Albert street, of Mr. Cornelius Culling, aged 85 years.

The deceased was born in Norfolk, England, and came to Canada (locating in Peterborough) in 1870. He has seen many changes in the city during his time. From stumps and undergrowth he saw the south portion of the city grow into a busy locality, and remembered when both the C.P.R. and G.T.R. tracks were laid in that district.

Having been with Mr. McWhinnie for the long period of 29 years, he was well known on George street, on account of his passing to and from his business.

Mr. Culling, who was a constant attendant of All Saints' church, is survived by three sons, Jack of Philadelphia, William of Toronto, and Edward of Chicago, and four daughters, Mrs. Daynard, Mrs. Fred Shepherd, both of Peterborough, Mrs. J. E. Noble of Toronto and Miss Anna living at home.

The funeral will take place from the family residence, 563 Albert street to the Little Lake cemetery on Saturday at 3.30.

AMY F. REID.

Miss Amy F. Reid died at the residence of her uncle, Mr. W. C. Bourn, of 174 McDonnell street, last evening.

The deceased, who was 23 years of age, was on the staff of the Bell Telephone Co., and was a constant attendant of All Saints' Church.

She leaves to mourn her loss her father, R. H. Reid, one sister, Florence, and two brothers, James and Reginald, all of Vermillion, Alta., one brother, P. A. Reid, of Camrose, Alta., and one sister at Red Deer. Also her mother and one brother, Wallace, who are living at Peterborough.

The funeral will take place from 174 McDonnell street, on Saturday. Service at the house at 2 o'clock, afterwards proceeding to Little Lake Cemetery, for interment.

Battle in Commons Rages Over the Chinese Case—J. D. Taylor of Westminster Killing Time

READING NEWSPAPERS

Ottawa, July 21.—For a few moments last night the Parliamentary battle came to close quarters. After Mr. J. D. Taylor and Dr. Sproule had concluded their speeches calling for the production of the report of Mr. Justice Murphy of the Supreme Court on the administration of the Chinese immigration act, Sir Wilfrid Laurier rose.

"I did not rise to reply to my friend from New Westminster," he observed, "because I had concluded that his speech was not made for the purpose of killing time in obstruction. (Hear, hear.) He has spoken three or four hours, while a request for information could have been preferred within ten minutes." The member for Centre Grey having preferred the request within fifteen or twenty minutes, the Premier gave him the information asked for. The report of Mr. Justice Murphy had been transmitted to the Minister of Trade and Commerce, and was forwarded by him to the Minister of Justice, with whom the Premier was in conference concerning it.

On the motion that the Speaker leave the chair and the House go into committee on the reciprocity resolutions, J. D. Taylor (New Westminster) charged the Government with delay in bringing forward the report of Judge Murphy on the Chinese immigration frauds in British Columbia. Mr. Taylor proceeded to censure the members of the Cabinet, and declared that a scandal was involved which affected $1,000,000 of the public money. It included members of the Cabinet, consular officers in China, and implicated the customs department in opium smuggling frauds, as well as Chinese frauds, he declared. The circumstances, said Mr. Taylor, had been explained by the press of the country for the past three years, and involved the various members of the Government, Prime Minister, Minister of Customs, Minister of Interior, Minister of Trade and Commerce, Minister of Labor, and Minister of Inland Revenue. All these gentlemen had been put in possession of the details, in which they might have shown some personal interest, but none had come forward to explain the report of the commissioner or determine upon any course of action.

The member for New Westminster then went on to read facts adduced in evidence, published in the British Columbia newspapers, which, in the absence of the report, were sufficiently well authenticated to be heard. He reviewed the appointment of the commission on Nov. 14, and traced the investigation, which extended over some months, reading long extracts of evidence. He said that the report of the commissioner had been in the hands of the Government for over two months, and quoted a telegram from Hon. Wm. Templeman to his party friends, regretting the turn events were taking.

The attention of the House was at low water mark during the entire afternoon and Mr. Taylor had to voice indignation. His final retort was that those who were doing most of the ar-

MASONIC GRAND LODGE ELECTS ITS OFFICERS

Aubrey White of Toronto Becomes Grand Master---Next Session of the Grand Lodge Will be Held in Toronto---The Other Officers Elected

St. Catharines, July 21.—The Masonic Grand Lodge of Canada for the Province of Ontario yesterday afternoon completed the business of the 45th annual convention and adjourned to meet next year in Toronto. Delegates voted in large numbers for the Queen City, in preference to either Hamilton or Port Arthur. They evidently had had sufficient of the smaller city hotel accommodation.

When the meeting opens next year, a Toronto man will occupy both the grand master's and deputy's chair. Deputy White having been elevated to the chief position, and W. D. McPherson having been chosen over three opponents to fill the position of deputy grand master. But for the fact that McPherson was a Toronto man, he would have probably been elected on the first ballot, as many were loath to give both honors to Toronto. However, McPherson won out on his merits, and it is most likely that for the next four years the Masonic grand master will reside in Toronto, as it is the custom to give the grand master two terms.

The officers elected for the year are: Grand master, Aubrey White, Toronto; deputy grand master, W. D. McPherson, Toronto; grand secretary, R. L. Gunn, Hamilton; grand treasurer, W. T. Malone, Toronto; grand senior warden, J. A. Grobb, St. Catharines; grand junior warden, T. G. Davis, London; grand chaplain, Rev. S. A. Wood, Chesterville; grand registrar, A. W. Peth, Windsor; board of general purposes, W. M. Ponton, Belleville; W. J. Drope, Grimsby; Frederick Guest, St. Thomas; W. H. Wardrope, Hamilton.

The grand master appointed the following to the board of general purposes: George Naylor, Ingersoll, G. S. May, Ottawa; C. W. Haentschell, Haileybury; R. H. Revell, Walkerville; J. A. McFadden, Toronto.

corrupting were the beneficiaries of the frauds.

On a cry of "order" from the Prime Minister, the member for New Westminster explained that no personal reference was meant.

The debate continued after supper recess, when Sir Wilfrid Laurier made an explanation that Mr. Justice Murphy, the commissioner, had recommended the prosecution of certain parties, but these parties were not in the country. He also asked that his report be not made public until these men had been prosecuted. Sir Wilfrid promised to take the matter up with the Minister of Justice and make a statement to the House, and suggested that Mr. Taylor had brought the question up for the purpose of wasting time.

Quickly the member for New Westminster resented the imputation. "I give it a positive denial," he declared. "I did it in pursuance of my duty to a number of citizens of Vancouver, who are my constituents. I asked for this report on two previous occasions without making any remarks at all on the subject."

'Phones for G.T.R.

Toronto, July 21.—Believing that less mistakes are made over the telephone than by telegraph, the Grand Trunk Railway has decided to instal a telephone system over its entire line for the use of despatching trains.

W. W. Ashald, superintendent of the G.T.R. telegraphs, Montreal, said that two circuits now in use on the northern division are giving splendid satisfaction.

Didn't Want Hospital.

Kingston, July 21.—It having become known that the residence of the late Col. Strausbenzie, in Portsmouth, was considered the most desirable site for the Sir Oliver Mowat Memorial Hospital for Consumptives, the council of the village has entered a protest against the sanitarium being within its limits. Reeve Baiden threatens to sue for damages in case the site is chosen.

Drank Water From Fly Pad.

Kingston, July 21.—The 10-months-old child of Patrick Whalen of Tamworth drank the poisoned water from a fly pad and died in a few hours after.

SITUATION CRITICAL.

Portuguese Crowds Cheer Monarchy and Stone Troops.

Lisbon, July 21.—The Minister of Finance yesterday asked the Cortes for credits of $1,560,000 for the national defence, and for $100,000 for the work of the Foreign Office.

When a detachment of the twentieth regiment arrived at Guimaraes, where it had been sent as a precautionary measure to prevent outbreaks, the soldiers were greeted with hostility by the people, who jammed the streets and cheered for the church and the monarchy.

Army officers who tried to harangue the people were stoned by a mob, and forced to seek refuge in the house of Governor Salgado, which was immediately surrounded and besieged until reinforcements arrived.

Capt. Couciere, the royalist leader, is reported as continuing his preparations for an invasion of the frontier.

Advices from Coimbra report fighting on the streets there, as a result of the counter demonstrations.

Bait Pirates Punished.

St. John's, Nfld., July 21.—Pleading guilty in court here yesterday to charges of taking bait illegally at Cape Race, seventeen members of the crew of the Gloucester, Mass., fishing schooner Arethusa were fined $50 each or three months' imprisonment and their dories were confiscated.

They are anchored at the French island of St. Pierre, and it is believed here that the owners of the vessels will pay the fines of their men.

The Arethusa, one of the largest and best vessels of the Gloucester fishing fleet, is owned by Cunningham & Thompson and is commanded by Capt. Clayton Morrisey.

Disappeared From Home.

Beamsville, July 21.—Residents of this town and vicinity have been puzzled by the disappearance of Miss Allie Hooker from the home of her cousin, Mrs. Daniel Konkle, with whom she had been staying.

Miss Hooker left home a week ago Wednesday night and has not been heard of or seen since.

She is only nineteen years old, but is exceptionally tall and wears her hair up, so that she appears older. She has dark hair and grey eyes.

Wireless at Eight Cents a Word

London, July 21.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—At the annual meeting of the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Co. yesterday, Signor Marconi said he would probably carry into effect the intention of accepting the plan for English transatlantic messages at fourpence a word.

Referring to Premier Ward's scheme broached at the Imperial Conference, he said he would have preferred to carry out his own scheme, but would be satisfied if the negotiations resulted in their erecting stations on behalf of the Government.

Auto Racer Killed.

Milwaukee, Wis., July 21.—Louis Strang, of Racine, Wis., probably the best known automobile racer in Wisconsin, was killed at Blue River, Wis., yesterday afternoon.

He was driving a car in the State Reliability tour, the car jumping an embankment.

Senator Bailey's Fear.

Washington, D.C., July 21.—Senator Bailey of Texas, speaking against the Canadian reciprocity bill in the Senate yesterday, expressed the fear that in giving trade concessions to Canada, the United States would become involved in trade disputes with other countries.

$10,000 Addition to Plant.

Niagara Falls, Ont., July 21.—Work started yesterday on a $10,000 addition to the American Cyanide Co.'s plant here. The company, which is the largest of its kind in Canada, intends doubling its output within a year.

Blackburn Back In Game.

Chicago, July 21.—Russel Blackburn, the $11,000 short stop of the Chicago American League baseball team, formerly in the Eastern League, who has been out of the game since early in the spring following a surgical operation on his knee cap, has recovered, and will join his team in a few days.

VETO BILL PASSED

Amended Version Accepted by the Lords Without Division—Will Now be Shorn Again

MORLEY'S ANNOUNCEMENT

London, July 21.—The House of Lords passed the third reading of the Parliament bill, otherwise known as the veto bill, without division yesterday, with only three hours debate. The insurgent peers failed to do any harm. The threats of the extremist lords to throw out the bill at this stage and precipitate a crisis proved a bluff. One solitary peer, Baron Stanmore, raised his voice to demand a vote. He found no single supporter in his role of Horatius-at-the-bridge.

Lord Morely of Blackburn, for the Government, and Lord Lansdowne, leader of the Opposition, repeated some familiar arguments for and against the measure. Lord Halsbury, leader of the extremists, threatened a fight if the House of Commons rejects the amendments.

The future of the measure may be predicted last night with reasonable certainty. Premier Asquith in the House of Commons on Monday will move the rejection of the Lords' amendments en bloc. This done, the Prime Minister will announce that if the Lords persist there will be no course open for him but to tender the King certain advice, which will ensure the passage of the bill. It would not be in accordance with the constitutional etiquette to specify the nature of the advice, but it is understood that that means the creation of Liberal peers.

The House of Lords will meet on Wednesday or Thursday, and Lord Lansdowne will move the acceptance of the bill, predicting its repeal as soon as the Unionists return to office. If the extremists rally around Halsbury, and vote for the rejection of the bill, Lord Lansdowne is expected to summon his followers to vote for it. It is not anticipated that Halsbury will find more than fifty, perhaps not more than a score, to make the last stand, and the greatest constitutional revision in most a century will be accomplished.

Three considerations have impelled the peers to swallow this bitter medicine—a desire to save their own caste from cheapening, to shield the King from an embarrassing position, and to prevent the immediate enactment of extreme radical measures, such as home rule and the disestablishment of the Welsh church. What the ultimate effect of the humiliation will be on the Unionist party lies in the lap of the future.

The scene yesterday in the ancient chamber was more funereal than belligerent. The only dramatic touch was furnished by Lord Halsbury, whose voice, despite his 88 years, rang with passion and indignation as he denounced the passage of the old regime.

The other speakers were diplomatic rather than oratorical. Lord Morely suavely hoped that this Parliamentary operation would be accomplished without further social shock, and everyone understood that social shock meant dissolution of the peerage by the infusion of new blood. Lord Lansdowne replied with equal suavity that the Unionists must oppose the bill as proposed by the House of Commons as long as they were free agents. Everyone interpreted this to mean that they would not consider themselves free agents when the threat of doubling the peerage was definitely held over their heads.

Mr. Balfour has summoned a meeting of the leaders of both Houses for to-day for the purpose of considering the question of future policy.

Engine Fell on House.

Buffalo, N.Y., July 21.—A New York Central locomotive fell on a house in this city early yesterday, shook the occupants out of bed and set the house on fire. The accident occurred during a heavy rainstorm. A switch engine, derailed by a washout, plunged over an embankment and landed on the house occupied by John Overfield, his wife and two children. No one was badly hurt.

Addington Conservatives nominated W. D. Black as their provincial candidate at the next general election.

The steamer Senator has arrived at Seattle from Nome and St. Michael with $80,000 in gold and $250,000 worth of furs.

Four men were killed, two injured and another is unaccounted for as a result of the wreck of a fast freight train at Bryant station, near Pittsburg.

A royal residence in Ireland has been suggested in the highest quarters, says the Dublin correspondent of The Times, and the idea has been accepted.

The Schwaben I., the newest Zeppelin dirigible balloon, left Friedrichshafl, Germany, yesterday morning for Lucerne, Switzerland, carrying eight passengers.

Damage estimated at half a million has been caused by forest fires at Squamish, according to a despatch brought to Vancouver by the Government launch Skinner.

Fether's Hotel and the Hotel Rockville, summer hostelries at Sharon Springs, N.Y., were destroyed by fire late Wednesday night. More than 100 guests lost their effects.

Another ship from the cholera country anchored in quarantine at New York yesterday. The new-comer was the steamer Principe di Piemonte, from Genoa and Naples.

Mr. R. L. Borden's complaint in the House of Commons yesterday that so far as he knew he and his household had not been counted in the census has been investigated, with the result that it is stated that the leader of the Opposition was counted Claims Misrepresentation.

Chatham, Ont., July 21.—Acting for Mrs. W. J. Strong, J. M. Pike, K.C., has issued a writ against her husband and his father, Anthony Strong, to set aside releases of a dowry signed in December and January last, relating to several houses and lots on Waverley road, Toronto, which she claims were obtained from her by her husband under misrepresentations, and without any consideration or independent advice on her part. The property is valued at about $7,000, and includes lots 108, 110 and 112 on Waverley road. She claims these were conveyed by her husband to his father, Anthony Strong, who is now living in one of them and she asks to have set aside and declared null and void the releases of dower obtained from her and an injunction restraining them from mortgaging or selling the lands in the meantime.

Will They Have Enough Hands?

Toronto, July 21.—The Canadian Northern Railway head office received another crop report yesterday, which said that the amount of rain and sunshine had been so favorable that a record yield will undoubtedly be the result.

The C.N.R. is worrying about the prospective insufficiency in the number of harvest hands. The suggestion has been made that European lands be called upon to supply the need.

Several difficulties, however, present themselves. In the first place, if the men were obtained, what would become of them during the winter? This, with difficulties regarding immigration regulations, has so far kept the railways and Government from taking any action along this line.

Bad Auto Accident.

Utica, N.Y., July 21.—Four men on route from Boston to Toronto by automobile, ran into a tree at Wampseville, west of the city, yesterday, and as a result two are in a hospital at Oneida with bad injuries. The men refused absolutely to give their names and one removed the license number from the car after the accident. Three of them are believed to be Toronto men. One of them has both legs broken, and another a broken knee-cap and internal injuries. The other two escaped with a shaking up. The force of the impact was so bad that the front of the machine was bent about the tree.

Car Breaks Boy's Leg.

Toronto, July 21.—Harold Kirfoot, aged 13, of 25 Blong avenue, was struck by the fender of a street car yesterday afternoon, and had his leg broken. He was carried into Dr. Fish's surgery.

Ignited Gas Well.

Chatham, July 21.—Lightning struck a gas well on the farm of Joyce Bros., a short distance south of Merlin, during the storm on Wednesday night. The bolt broke the cap off and ignited the enormous pressure of gas. The roar could be heard for miles around and the illumination was so bright that a newspaper could easily be read a half mile from the burning well. The gas is still burning in a gigantic jet, and all efforts to put out the fire have so far proved unavailing. Lightning also struck the Park street Methodist Church, knocking out a chunk of the wall and damaging the roof.

Tied for Kelapore.

Bisley, Eng., July 21.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—Canada and the Mother Country team tied for the Kolapore Cup with an aggregate of 789, but the home team won, on account of having secured the biggest score at the longest range. Canada's last shot was an outer by Freeborn. The home team had to make five bulls to tie and got them.

Canada's scoring at 600 yards was as follows: F. Morris 30, Bibby 32, W. Morris 36, Russell 33, Trainor 29, Clifford 33, Mortimer 28, Freeborn 26. Total—269.

Held Up by Brigands.

Grand Forks, N.D., July 21.—Train No. 2, the eastbound "North Coast Limited," on the Northern Pacific Railway, was held up by three masked robbers near Buffalo, North Dakota, about 11 o'clock Wednesday night. The robbers secured about $500 in cash by going through the passengers, and shot Engineer Olson of Fargo twice in order to make him stop the train. They made a successful escape in an automobile which they had awaiting them near the scene of the robbery.

"Dead" Man Is Alive.

Ottawa, July 21.—That Edward Therein, the Ottawa man listed among the dead at Porcupine, is alive and progressing favorably, though suffering from burns on his face, hands, arms and back, was the good news to his father, Joseph Therein, here, through a letter from the New Liskeard Hospital.

His son was first reported as dead, next day as seriously injured, and again later as dead.

Youngest Were Leaders.

Kingston, July 21.—Out of 184 candidates writing here at the entrance examinations 137 were successful. The highest marks obtained were 568, 15 going over the 500 mark. The youngest among those writing were the leaders.

THE Cost of Glasses
When you think of having your eyes examined and of the possibility of wearing glasses, the matter of cost naturally arises.
As in everything else, good work, careful skilful work, is apt to cost more than work less good.
There is nothing you buy for your personal use that you ought to be more careful about, that you can afford to have the best of, than these glasses that you are going to depend on to preserve and assist your eyesight.
The reason we have succeeded so well and our business has grown so satisfactorily is that the best work is given in every case and a reasonable price is charged.
All Work including the Lens Grinding is done on the Premises and Fully Guaranteed.

By JACK LONDON

"I was three years at Mills Seminary, with trips home, of course, and two years in New York; and then Dad went smash in a sugar plantation on Maui. The report of the engineers had not been right. Then Dad had built a railroad that was called 'Lackland's folly'—it will pay, ultimately, though. But it contributed to the smash. The Pelauau Ditch was the finishing blow. And nothing would have happened, anyway, if it hadn't been for that big money panic in Wall street. Dear good Dad! He never let me know. But I read about the crash in a newspaper, and hurried home. It was before that, though, that people had been dinging into my ears that marriage was all any woman could get out of life, and good-by to romance. Instead of which, with Dad's failure, I fell right into romance."

"How long ago was that?" Sheldon asked.

"Last year—the year of the panic."

"Let me see," Sheldon pondered with an air of gravity. "Sixteen plus five, plus one, equals twenty-two. You were born in 1887?"

"Yes; but it is not nice of you."

"I am really sorry," he said, "but the problem was so obvious."

"Can't you ever say nice things? Or is it the way you English have?" There was a snap in her gray eyes, and her lips quivered suspiciously for a moment. "I should recommend Mr. Sheldon, that you read Gertrude Atherton's American Wives and English Husbands."

"Thank you, I have. It's over there." He pointed at the generously filled book-shelves. "But I am afraid it is rather partisan."

"Anything un-English is bound to be," she retorted. "I never have liked the English anyway. The last one I knew was an overseer. Dad was compelled to discharge him."

"One swallow doesn't make a summer."

"But that Englishman made lots of trouble—there! And now, please, don't make me any more absurd than I already am."

"I'm trying not to."

"Oh, for that matter—" She tossed her head, opened her mouth to complete the retort, then changed her mind. "I shall go on with my history. Dad had practically nothing left, and he decided to return to the sea. He'd always loved it, and I half believe that he was glad things had happened as they did. He was like a boy again, busy with plans and preparations from morning till night. He used to sit up half the night talking things over with me. That was after I had shown him that I was really resolved to go along.

"He had made his start, you know, in the South Seas,—pearls and pearl shells,—and he was sure that more fortunes, in trove of one sort and another, were to be picked up. Cocoanut planting was his particular idea, with trading, and maybe pearling, along with other things, until the plantation should come into bearing. He traded off his yacht for a schooner, the Miele, and away we went. I took care of him and studied navigation. He was his own skipper. We had a Danish mate, Mr. Ericson, and a mixed crew of Japanese and Hawaiians. We went up and down the Line Islands, first, until Dad was heartsick. Everything was changed. They had been annexed, and divided by one power or another, while big companies had stepped in and gobbled land, trading rights, fishing rights, everything.

"Next we sailed for the Marquesas. They were beautiful, but the natives were nearly extinct. Dad was cut up when he learned that the French charged an export duty on copra — he called it mediaeval—but he liked the land. There was a valley of fifteen thousand acres on Nukahiva, half enclosing a perfect anchorage, which he fell in love with and bought for twelve hundred Chili dollars. But the French taxation was outrageous (that was why the land was so cheap), and worst of all, we could obtain no labour. What kanakas there were wouldn't work, and the officials seemed to sit up nights thinking out new obstacles to put in our way.

"Six months was enough for Dad. The situation was hopeless. 'We'll go to the Solomons,' he said, 'and get a whiff of English rule. And if there are no openings there, we'll go on to the Bismarck Archipelago. I'll wager the Admiralties are not yet civilized.' All preparations were made, things packed on board, and a new crew of Marquesans and Tahitians shipped. We were just ready to start to Tahiti, where a lot of repairs and refitting for the Miele were necessary, when poor Dad came down sick and died."

"And you were left all alone?" Joan nodded.

"Very much alone. I had no brothers nor sisters, and all Dad's people were drowned in a Kansas cloudburst. That happened when he was a little boy. Of course, I could go back to Von. There's always a home there waiting for me. But why should I go? Besides, there were Dad's plans, and I felt that it devolved upon me to carry them out. It seemed a fine thing to do. Also, I wanted to carry them out. And—here I am.

"Take my advice and never go to Tahiti. It is a lovely place, and so are the natives, but the white people! Now Barabbas lived in Tahiti. Thieves, robbers, and liars—that is what they are. The honest men wouldn't require the fingers of one hand to count. The fact that I was a woman only simplified matters with them. They robbed me on every pretext, and they lied without pretext or need. Poor Mr. Ericson was corrupted. He joined the robbers and O. K.'d all their demands even up to a thousand per cent. If they robbed me of ten francs, his share was three. One bill of fifteen hundred francs I paid, netted him five hundred francs. All this, of course, I learned afterward. But the Miele was old, the repairs had to be made, and I was charged not three prices, but seven prices.

"I never shall know how much Ericson got out of it. He lived ashore in a nicely furnished house. The shipwrights were giving it to him rent-free. Fruit, vegetables, fish, meat, and ice came to this house every day, and he paid for none of it. It was a part of his graft from the various merchants. And all the while, with tears in his eyes, he bemoaned the vile treatment I was receiving from the gang. No, I did not fall among thieves. I went to Tahiti.

"But when the robbers fell to cheating one another, I got my first clews to the state of affairs. One of the robbed robbers came to me after dark with facts, figures, and assertions. I knew I was ruined if I went to law. The judges were corrupt like everything else. But I did do one thing. In the dead of night I went to Ericson's house. I had the same revolver I've got now, and I made him stay in bed while I overhauled things. Nineteen hundred and odd francs was what I carried away with me. He never complained to the police, and he never came back on board. As for the rest of the gang, they laughed and snapped their fingers at me. There were two Americans in the place, and they warned me to leave the law alone unless I wanted to leave the Miele behind as well.

"Then I sent to New Zealand and got a German mate. He had a master's certificate, and was on the ship's papers as captain, but I was a better navigator than he, and I was really captain myself. I lost her, too, but it's no reflection on my seamanship. We were drifting four days outside there in dead calms. Then the Nor'wester caught on and drove us on the lee shore. We made sail and tried to claw off, when the rotten work of the Tahiti shipwrights became manifest. Our jib-boom and all our head-stays were carried away. Our only chance was to turn and run through the passage between Florida and Ysabel. And when we were safely through, in the twilight, we herethe chart shows fourteen fathoms as the shoalest water, we smashed on a coral patch. The poor old Miele struck only once and then went clear; but it was too much for her, and we just had time to clear away in the boat when she went down. The German mate was drowned. We lay all night to a sea-drag, and next morning sighted your place here."

"I suppose you will go back to Von now?" Sheldon queried.

"Nothing of the sort. Dad planned to go to the Solomons. I shall look about for some land and start a small plantation. Do you know of any good land around here? Cheap?

"By George, you Yankees are remarkable, really remarkable," said Sheldon "I should never have dreamed of such a venture."

"Adventure," Joan corrected him.

"That's right—adventure it is. And if you'd gone ashore on Malaita instead of Guadalcanar, you'd have been kai-kai'd long ago, along with your noble Tahitian sailors."

Joan shuddered.

"To tell the truth," she confessed, "we were very much afraid to land on Guadalcanar. I read in the Sailing Directions that the natives were treacherous and hostile. Some day I should like to go to Malaita. Are there any plantations there?"

"Not one. Not a white trader, even."

"Then I shall go over on a recruiting vessel some time."

"Impossible!" Sheldon cried. "It is no place for a woman."

"I shall go just the same," she repeated.

"But no self-respecting woman—"

"Be careful," she warned him. "I shall go some day, and then you may be sorry for the names you have called me."

CHAPTER VI.

Tempest.

It was the first time Sheldon had been at close quarters with an American girl, and he would have wondered if all American girls were like Joan Lackland had he not had wit enough to realize that she was not at all typical. Her quick mind and changing moods bewildered him, while her outlook on life was so different from what he conceived a woman's outlook should be, that he was more often than not at sixes and sevens with her. He could never anticipate what she would say or do next. Of only one thing he was sure and that was that whatever she said or did was bound to be unexpected and unsuspected. There seemed, too, something hysterical in her make-up. Her temper was quick and stormy, and she relied too much on herself, and too little on him, which did not approximate at all to his ideal of woman's conduct when a man was around. Her assumption of equality with him was disconcerting, and at times he half-consciously resented the impudence and bizarreness of her intrusion upon him—rising out of the sea in a howling nor'wester, fresh from poking her revolver under Ericson's nose, protected by her gang of huge Polynesian sailors, and settling down in Berande like any shipwrecked sailor. It was all on a par with her Baden-Powell and the long 38 Colt's.

At any rate, she did not look the part. And that was what he could not forgive. Had she been short-haired, heavy-jawed, large-muscled, hard-bitten, and utterly unlovely in every way, all would have been well. Instead of which she was hopelessly and deliciously feminine. Her hair worried him, it was so generously beautiful. And she was so slenderly and prettily the woman—the girl, rather—that it cut him like a knife to see her, with quick, comprehensive eyes and sharply imperative voice, superintend the lauching of the whale boat through the surf. In imagination he could see her roping a horse and it always made him shudder. Then, too, she was so many-sided. Her knowledge of literature and art surprised him, while deep down was the feeling that a girl who knew such things had no right to know how to rig tackles, heave up anchors, and sail schooners around the South Seas. Such things in her brain were like so many oaths on her lips. While for such a girl to insist that she was going on a recruiting cruise around Malaita was positive self-sacrifice.

When Blood Was Impure

The Old-fashioned Doctor Brought Relief by Bleeding

To-day We Keep the Blood Pure by Using

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

The doctor of a century or two ago was accustomed to free his patient of an excess of poisoned blood by the cruel process of bleeding.

We would not stand for that heroic treatment to-day, because we understand better the work of the liver and kidneys and how to awaken them to their duty of filtering poisons from the blood.

These are the only organs of the body which filter poisons from the blood, and so cleanse the system of the foul waste matter which causes pains, aches and dangerous diseases, and there is no way you can so quickly bring the liver and kidneys into action as by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Don't imagine that a liquid medicine is necessary to purify the blood. The supreme test is, "Does the treatment awaken the action of the liver and invigorate the kidneys?" Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are unique in their combined action on the liver, kidneys and bowels, and on this account wonderfully successful as a means of purifying the blood.

The whole digestive and excretory system is cleansed and invigorated by this treatment. The appetite is sharpened, digestion improves, and the tired, languid feelings of a poisoned system give way to new health and vigour. One pill a dose. 25 cents a box at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Clean Within!

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills Purify the Blood and Prolong Life

Pilgrave health at 70 due to Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

If as much intelligent care were given to keeping the body clean and pure within as well as without we would see more healthy, vigorous old men and women. The daily bath does its part by keeping the pores of the skin open so that they throw off much of the body's impurities, but it is even more important that the bowels and kidneys should be kept regular and active.

If the bowels fail, as they often do late in life, to move regularly at least once a day, the waste matter from the food accumulates, decays, poisons the system and upsets the stomach.

If the kidneys are sluggish the impurities which they should filter from the blood remain and cause rheumatism.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills regulate the bowels, stimulate the kidneys and open up the pores of the skin. The result is a body clean within—pure, red blood—good digestion—and a hale and hearty old age.

Three generations have proved the value of Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, and their sale is steadily increasing all over the world.

SPRAYING OF WEEDS

From Farm and Dairy.

Editor, Farm and Dairy,—Anent your good advice as to destruction of weeds by spraying, I would like some sceptic to have compared the straw of my crop of the season 1909 with the season of 1910, and the evidence would have converted him.

In 1909 I was almost despairing, since my farm was so infested with wild mustard. I believe 60 per cent. of the weight of each load of grain was mustard stalks. I wrote to the nearest experimental farm, and was advised to get a sprayer and use either iron sulphate or Bluestone. I bought a sprayer in Ontario, and had it shipped here, the freight being about 45 per cent. of original cost of sprayer.

Several of my neighbors ridiculed the idea. The old adage, "A fool and his money, etc.," went the rounds, for the machine cost me, delivered here, about $200 and English bluestone cost me about 12½c. a lb. I used about 20 lbs. to the acre, dissolved in 60 gallons of water (first dissolved in about five gallons of hot water and then put into tank, holding about 60 gallons of cold).

I sprayed only once, doing about 70 acres in two afternoons, and the machine fully paid for itself in that short time in the extra grain I had, to say nothing of the small percentage of mustard to come up the following year, for this year very little is showing and I am going after it tomorrow with sprayer again. The spray rod is 21 feet long, with 12 nozzles about 21 inches apart.

I would advise every farmer, whose mustard land has got beyond the hand-pulling stage, to invest in a spray-motor. He'll have to sooner or later anyway if he ever gets rid of it; and in the meantime it would be paying for itself very quickly.

In killing the mustard, many Canadian thistles were also very much weakened, and the grain was not hurt a particle.—"B.C. Subscriber."

Success in dairying comes not by any mere chance. Those about to start in the business will do much to ensure success if they give heed to the following words of counsel:

Start right where you are.

Take the herd you now have.

Both work and study are essential to success.

The head of every herd is the sire.

No matter what you may have in that line, get something better, and get it right away.

Look about you until you find something just as much better as you possibly can.

With this, start.

Make it your business to save the best calves from your sire, and from your best cows; that have actually proved by the pail and the test that they are the best.

Have every cow tested.

Turn off the poor cows as fast as you have something better to put in their places.

Meanwhile, if you have a chance to buy a choice cow out of the herd of some neighbor, or if you have the money to spare, go to some reliable dealer in the kind of stock you like best and buy now and then a nice cow.

Shape all your plans to be ready for success when it comes.

Build the best buildings you can.

Have the stables as warm, as light, and as well aired as you can.

Do a lot of real hard thinking.

Attack all these problems with the courage of a veteran soldier.

Study the art of feeding.

Grow crops that will enable you to get the best out of your cows.

Keep cheerful and do not get discouraged if you sometimes have poor luck.

In the end you will win—and it is the end that counts.

HOW THE WEST IS BOOMING

From Farm and Dairy.

Mr. George F. Marsh, who is well known to Farm and Dairy readers from having written a special series of articles about alfalfa, which were published in these columns during the early and late spring months, has recently returned from a trip through Western Canada, taking in amongst other places, Winnipeg, Saskatoon, Edmonton, Calgary, Moosejaw and Regina. He returned by way of Fort William, and called a few days ago at the office of Farm and Dairy. The first greeting being over, we asked —"What did you see out west that you liked better than Ontario?" "That trip made me much better satisfied with old Ontario," he replied. "The west is a great country, but you must not overlook the fact that it has its disadvantages."

Our editor having a few years ago spent some months in the West, travelling it from Winnipeg through to the coast, and making many side trips from the main line of travel, is tolerably familiar with conditions in Western Canada, and could appreciate many of the remarks passed by Mr. Marsh, some of which were not altogether complimentary to the west. Believing that Farm and Dairy readers would care to know something of Mr. Marsh's impressions gained while on his trip, we shall give them here to some extent. Those of our readers who are planning to take in the harvest excursion this year will find it interesting to make special note of what Mr. Marsh has to say, with a view to proving his impressions in their own experience.

IMPRESSIONS OF HOMESTEADING

Settling down to give us the benefit of his trip, Mr. Marsh said:

"The homestead business did not appeal to me at all. Consider the chances one takes when homesteading! Some strike it rich, I know, but I shall tell you of a college friend of mine that I visited out there. He is one that we may term as 'having struck it rich.' He was formerly from Exeter, Huron Co., Ont. A few years ago he took his young wife and his family of little ones out on the prairie. Of late years he has trailed it 25 miles to the station; just now, new railway construction has placed a station three miles off on one side of him, and four miles on another side. This railroad will shortly set him up in fine shape. He will win out with 800 acres of good land.

"But let me tell you a little more about this friend. The first year he was out there he was 80 miles from a railway station, and he teamed his lumber for his house that 80 miles, and hauled coal that distance in the winter time, with the thermometer registering 60 degrees below zero. Supposing he had required a doctor for his family: Had he been in Ontario it would have cost him $2, but there it would have been $100. Before a man goes west he should consider these things. And then to live out there it costs a lot that one does not at first recognise. For example, it takes an awful time to go any place; the distances are great. It costs so much to travel anywhere; a livery is very expensive, making it so that one does not care to travel much that way."

A COUNTRY FOR MONIED MEN

While on this strain, Mr. Marsh said that the country appealed to him as being one especially adapted for men with lots of money, who would do things on a big scale, use steam plows, and be able to escape the hardships which the ordinary man must out there endure. He thought it a poor place for men with small means. The friend about whom the foregoing deals, is located about 100 miles west from Saskatoon. In addition to other difficulties, he had a large problem to solve in getting water. He dug two very deep wells somewhere between 80 and 90 feet each. From the first he got no water at all, while with the second he got but a meagre supply, and will require to supplement it before he can accommodate more stock.

"I visited another friend near Carbon," continued Mr. Marsh. "He is only 60 miles from Calgary. People talk about high prices for produce out west. But can you imagine my surprise when I found that he was getting only 15c. a lb. for his butter? In Calgary the price ruled at from 38 to 40 cents. It struck me that they seemed to have the noose around the farmers' necks out in the west worse than is the case in Ontario. The farmers out there will probably make out well in time, but then as to their life—I consider it awful in some respects.

LAND VALUES LIKE FAIRY TALES

"Real estate values, in the cities especially, out west seem like fairy tales. Much of the farm land is priced as high as $25 an acre, the lots at this price being several miles from the railway.

"The only thing with the people out there is the almighty dollar. In this regard it is bad enough with us in Ontario.

"A fellow gets a new idea about the prairie land when one sees it. I was surprised to find that it grew no hay save in the sloughs. In a district supposed to be a hay country, out from Calgary, they cut hay only once in three years, setting two years old hay, and then they get only one ton to the acre. They tell about pasturing animals out all winter, while the temperature goes to 60 below zero. One can hardly believe it. On enquiry, one finds that this cannot be done where one is paying for the land. The old time ranchers got their land for next to nothing, and where the stock pastures out in winter nowadays it is on some vacant land alongside of a farmstead in actual operation.

"I saw a lot of disadvantages to the west. Perhaps if I had been out there some weeks later and had seen the harvest I might have thought differently of things. But one thing that struck me as being extremely funny was that every man out there that has any land, wants to sell. There seems to be not a man who counts on staying there; they all want to make their pile of money and get out. A man will talk up the advantages of the country, and before you leave him he will be wanting to sell out to you.

"As I have mentioned, I was surprised to find how high the prices of land were quoted. It kind of took my breath away. At $10 to $12 their prairie land might look like a good speculation, but at $25 an acre and bare unimproved land at that—land on which one would need to put in wells, improvements, and so forth—it means that you would have to get down and work it. As to the real estate values in the cities, they are marvellous. It may be all right, and perhaps it may be good buying yet I am afraid that the last man who gets it will find himself possessed of property which he cannot unload at the price.

"I came bac kto Ontario convinced that we are going to see Ontario land come up in price, and that soon. There is not much free homestead land left. It was a surprise to me to find this out. All of the good land has been picked up, and it is only here and there that homesteads are to be had, and these have been well picked over. It is because of this fact that land is being held at so stiff a price. Away up in the Peace River country, however, I understand that this condition I have just stated does not prevail.

With Ontario it is going to be shortly like it has lately been in New York State and in Pennsylvania. The people have been coming back from the west and buying land over there, and it will be the same thing here before long. Out west they are never sure of a crop, and then, as many of them will tell you, when you get your cheque for it, you are not sure of its value until you get your money for it."

MR. MARSH DIDN'T BUY LAND

"Did you buy any land?" we enquired of Mr. Marsh. "Well, I didn't," he replied. "I thought I'd come back home to Ontario and put any surplus money I had into planting on my home farm 50 acres with apple trees. At least I decided to think about it at any rate.

"I did not see the irrigated land in Alberta," continued Mr. Marsh. "The other dry sections out there other than those being irrigated, look to me as though they will be great alfalfa land, and some day will be used for producing seed. The interest that is being taken in alfalfa out there is apparent from the fact that the Saskatchewan government has put up $6,000 in cash for prizes in alfalfa competitions, which shows that they have some faith in alfalfa.

"Among other drawbacks as I noted them in the western country will be their roads. I could see this as I was travelling much by stage. It was all right in the olden days on the open trail, but now that the open trail has given way to road allowances, the roads are terrible, and at certain seasons of the year it must be that they are well nigh impassable.

THE LOT OF WOMENFOLK

"It struck me that the women out west have it the hardest. Their lot in many cases is an extremely hard one, and it is they who are going to the insane asylums and dying young. Most of the women who are going out there haven't any idea of the things with which they will have to contend.

"Possibly I am too pessimistic in forming my impressions," concluded Mr. Marsh. "I know that many men who have taken the same trip as I have taken come back and talk quite differently. But as for me, Ontario, with her unbounded possibilities, looks good enough and much better than before I took that western trip. They are going to have a good crop out west this year all right enough—that is, the prospects point that way just now; but notwithstanding, again, I reiterate, Ontario looks good to me." This, we might point out, includes New Ontario, which is near home, is well watered and wooded, and the coming country for settlers.

WOMEN COLONELS

Kings, princes, and dukes are frequently made hon. colonels of various battalions and regiments, although, as a rule, the actual command is held by an officer belonging to the corps. Now, however, there are even women colonels attached to some of the Prussian regiments, and these frequently ride at the head of their troops on state occasions.

Mothers of to-day are taking the right stand in regard to "sweets" for children. They use discrimination. They know that "sweets" like are foods in the best sense of the word.

There is nutriment—solid, substantial flesh-and-strength-forming substance—in Cowan's Maple Buds, just as there is in milk and brown bread. THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

MY dear Miss Cameron:—Having noticed that you occasionally ask for suggestions from your readers, I thought I would write to you.

"Sometime ago I was greatly troubled with insomnia and the physical evils consequent thereto and, after trying different remedies and undergoing the usual doctoring with no results, I finally tried the very simple plan of sleeping on a pillow of hops, and much to my surprise was speedily cured of this nerve-racking complaint.

"Should any of your readers complain to you of the same difficulty, you would be doing a world of good by suggesting this scheme, which is all the better because it is devoid of drugs, and does not appear to leave any after effect which most drugs do.

"I have recommended this plan to several friends who were similarly benefitted. I would add, however, that a friend, a physician, tells me that different persons often require different treatment and that he seldom found two cases exactly alike. Nevertheless I firmly think the use of hop pillows for this malady is worth a trial."

Three cheers for that man!

I don't know whether his remedy is valuable or not, but I do know HE IS, because he is the kind of man the world needs more of, the kind of man who cannot make a [illegible] keeping a benefit or blessing without feeling an obligation to pass it on to the rest of the world.

I trust both his remedy and his example will prove of value.

* * * * * * *

Here is a suggestion for the "put-away season" from a clever housemother who is the wonder of the mothers of the neighbourhood for her skill in the art of freshening and making over half worn clothes.

"When I put away my winter dresses I always put them away clean, because it's much harder to get the dirt out when things have been lying dirty all summer. It doesn't matter how much I hate to do it now—I'll hate it just as much in the fall.

"But you asked me how it was I managed to make the children's half worn clothes look as good as new and what I started to say was this: Very often instead of sponging or naptha cleansing our woolen clothes, I wash them in soap and water.

"People seem to think that dark clothes don't get dirty because you don't see the dirt, but it's really there just the same and I don't think it's healthy. Just imagine if you wore a white dress day in day out all winter what it would look like. And then remember that the same amount of dirt is on your dark blue serge, only it doesn't show and it's enough to make you sick. And besides that side of it, dirt rots clothes and it makes them wear out more quickly. Now naptha takes spots out but it doesn't clean things like soap and water. So when I have a dress to make over I rip it up and then wash the pieces thoroughly in soap and water. That's what makes my made-over things look new. Sometimes when I want to freshen up an old dress I take the skirt to pieces and wash it and sometimes when I have an old dress that I'm not afraid of shrinking, I put it right in the tub just as it is and give it a good scrub.

"Have been" would be much better.

Ruth Cameron

"MAMA AND PAPA ARE DEAD, THEY'RE ALL BLOODY"

Prattling Little Children Tell of Terrible Tragedy---Husband Fatally Hacked His Wife with a Hatchet and Then Mortally Injures Himself

Special to The Examiner:

Willow Grove, Pa., July 19.—While 30,000 people were disporting themselves at the various amusements or listening to the music of the concert orchestra in Willow Grove Park at 8.15 o'clock last evening, W. Gord cawas hacking his wife Grisell to death with an ax, then taking his own life with the weapon at Park Guard Moore Krier's home, in Grove avenue, very near by. It was a gruesome, gory tragedy, based on some sort of domestic trouble, and only the two little daughters of the dying pair, children scarcely older than infants—can prattle the unintelligible story of how it all came about, for they alone were at home with their parents when the imaginary quarrel began.

The tragedy took place on the first floor of the Krier home, a two-storey double frame house, a quarter-mile from Willow Grove Park. Krier is a guard at the Park, and Mrs. Gordon came to his employ two months ago from some place in New Jersey, which the authorities have been unable to yet locate. She brought with her a little daughter, Edna Viola, four years old. She had little to say of their antecedents, and last Sunday she and the child visited their former home in New Jersey.

Later yesterday the father and the older child, Helen Augusta, came to Willow Grove on a visit to the Kriers. This evening Krier was at the Park and the Gordon family of four were home in the house.

Everything was quiet, about 6 o'clock Mrs. Root, the next neighbor, was on the porch when she heard a single scream: then the two children, Edna and Helen, hand in hand, ran from the house, crying, toward Nohm's store. At the store they cried to some men:

"Mamma is dead; papa is dead; they are all bloody!"

Half a dozen men responded. At the Krier home Mrs. Root had heard no struggle, because all the doors were locked.

In the hallway lay Mrs. Gordon, faintly breathing and huddled in a heap. Terrible gashes were on her head and face; one ear and the side of her head had been split upon by another blow, and both wrists and arms were covered with jagged wounds. She was unconscious, and only faintly breathing, and death was seemingly but a question of moments.

In the dining-room was a pool of blood, which came from the woman's wounds as she had struggled to reach the front door and open it, apparently to get aid. The walls were spotted with blood.

In the kitchen, lying flat on his face, was Gordon, dying from self-inflicted wounds. He had hacked at himself with the same weapon. He was faintly breathing, but in a dying condition.

Seeing that life still existed, Chief Lever rushed for doctors; but none could be immediately found in or about Willow Grove, and more than half an hour elapsed before a physician could be located in the meantime the bodies lay as they were after the tragedy.

Little Edna and Helen, terrified and with bloodstains on their dresses, were seated in a big yard swing at the Root home. Edna could not tell what it all meant, but alternately cried and smiled when talking of her father and mother. Helen, however, knew more. In her childish way she cried pathetically to a reporter:

"My mamma died; my papa died. They had a fight, and he hit her with Mr. Krier's hatchet, oh, so many times! Then the blood hit me, and she fell. I was scared.

"Then papa hit himself many times, and he fell down, too; so we ran for help."

In telling her story, Helen motioned with her hands to show how Gordon had hit his wife and then himself.

Asked where the Gordons' home had been in New Jersey, she said she did not know the name of the place; but it was near a big swab farm, and that her uncle Will lived there. She wound up her story by telling that her father and mother had quarrelled before the man used the axe, and then pathetically asked:

"I wonder if Uncle Will will take us now, since mamma has died?"

Later developments ascertained by the police indicate that the woman made an attempt to fight off the husband. A blood-stained knife of the kitchen variety, was found, and the police believe the woman tried to fight off the man with this weapon, as some of the wounds on the man are like knife wounds.

Daily Short Story

"Success"

Mrs. Waltham reverenced success with the ardour of the one who has not met it. Success, for her, spelled so much more than the material things for which it stood. The story of one who had won against great odds, flushed her eager face and sent her hands clinching together. She felt the thrill of the victor hundreds of miles, perhaps, from the scene of action.

It was hard, feeling as she did, to be married to a colorless little man, untalented and obscure, who never had, never would amount to anything, he did his duty with the unfailing exactitude of the stupid, to whom splendid mistake were as unknown as splendid achievements.

Other people looked on her marriage as a singularly happy one. They envied conditions which she scorned. Sometimes they said pityingly: "It's too bad the Waltham's have no children; it would have been an ideal home for a child."

The words, after they were agreed to by the listener, were usually followed by "But what would you? One person can't have everything; I should think she would feel like throwing a ring into the sea as it is."

Perhaps the hands of little children might have pulled the scales from the mother's eyes—might have made the desert of her life blossom as the rose. But they had never been given. There was not even a little grave to come back to. And at forty years she was a disappointed woman, with unfulfilled dreams looking darkeningly from her dark eyes.

There had been many opportunities for Amos Waltham to distinguish himself. There had been the Spanish war, with its exodus of brave men. Thrilled for her soul herself, she had waited for him to declare himself. But he watched with his kindly gray eyes, boys and men march away as if it were the most natural thing in the world to be an onlooker only. She waited an interminable time for him to propose going. At last she spoke, not altogether concealing the scorn that she felt.

"Why don't you go, Amos? If I were a man I'd be away before sunset."

And he had answered in his grave, abstracted fashion, not perceiving the contempt in her tone: "Because, dear, I think I can be of more use where I am."

Afterward she found out some of the hundred little things he had done. As president of the small country bank he had been able to make loans to some of the destitute whose patriotic supporters were away in the field; he had broken bad news; he had delivered good news intact. He had kept an eye, by letter and influence, on many a mother's wild son, drunken with his first liberty. His wife heard of many things—not from him—without a spark of pride or approbation.

"All little things," she mused bitterly; all little, little things, which a woman could have done as well as he."

In the course of time, when the war boys, chastened and out of health, returned, he busied himself finding a means of livelihood for them. The incident was closed. But his wife remembered, and some others.

His wife never forgot. She never could forget. She had grown to despise him, and she showed it openly now. He mused over it at times, not bitterly, but as if it were something that could be explained if he had but the ability. And he showered her with the luxuries that the growing bank gave forth. She winced sometimes at the never-ending gifts. He sighed sometimes that they were unavailing. They had everything and nothing. He was poorer than the poorest depositor in his bank.

The panic of 1907-1908 at first bid fair not to touch him. People had confidence in him in the stability of the old bank. It would weather the storm. And the run came without warning. The long line extended as far as eye could see one morning when he came down.

All that day they drew and drew and drew. He was glad when the hour of closing came. There was no harm done if there was no more of it—if the confidence of the people would hold for a few more days. He said nothing to his wife when he went home. Confidences had ceased between them and he would not burden her with the weight of care he carried. Perhaps there would be more of it, he thought with a sigh.

But in the morning, the long, unbroken line still stood. He groaned as he heard the click of passing coins. They were ruined, or nearly, now. From time to time some clerk came to him, where he sat with his head in his hands and told him how near the end was.

It was afternoon when the door opened softly again. He did not look up. The last messenger had told him that but a few hundred remained. This one would say that nothing did. But the messenger did not speak. He looked up into his wife's face, glowing with a light to which it had long been a stranger. She knelt down beside him and took his cold hands in her own.

"Amos ——" she began.

He interrupted her. "The house is gone; my insurance policy; every dollar I had. Still, like the horse leech's daughter, they cry, 'More! More!' I beggared you unwillingly, but I had to do it."

She pressed his irresponsive hand. "Your good name above everything! We had to save your good name."

Even in this crisis, as near as it had drawn them, how different the viewpoint.

"No," he said, "not my good name, but the confidence of the people who trusted me. I fought for them."

His wife fell to sobbing, her head against his knee. "The bank is saved, Amos. The cashier says so. I threw my diamonds in the scale, and they turned it. We—it—will be all right now."

"Then why do you cry?" his patient eyes questioned her.

She answered as if he had spoken. "Oh, I'm crying, Amos, because it has taken me so long to see the success you've made of your life. The—the putting others first—you know, Amos. It is so rare. And perhaps that's why no wife was ever so proud before."

GREAT EXTENSION OF FRUIT GROWING

From Farm and Dairy.

C. B. Barss, Exp. Station, Minn.

It is an interesting fact that the great extension of fruit growing, in all parts of the country, has been attended, not by a decline in prices, but by a very considerable advance. The question whether or not the multiplication of orchards and berry patches will have the effect of producing a glut, so as to render profitless the labor and expenditures of the fruit grower, seems, then, very likely to meet a negative reply.

In the first place the demand for all the fruits of North America is world-wide. The world's appetite for them is insatiable; and as the facilities for distributing them are better systematized through intelligent cooperative arrangements between growers and transportation agencies, and selling agencies in the cities, it seems as though the problem is to be, not how to get rid of surpluses but how to get enough of any kind of good fruit.

In years of great abundance in American apple orchards, good apples have sold in Mexico at 15 cents a piece. In London they have retailed at 25 cents a piece. Other fruits, capable of bearing transportation for long distances, have commanded proportionately high prices. Of course, these prices have been for choice fruit. In New York and Boston, even 10 and 15 cents a piece has been readily obtainable for choice apples.

Such exceptional figures as these above quoted are not, however, necessary as a basis for profitable fruit growing. The moderate prices paid by the mass of American consumers are sufficiently high for that; as in thousands of houses our people are learning to prefer fruit, at such moderate prices, to many another article of food which they have heretofore demanded.

ANOTHER MARKET—HOME CANNING

The improvement of canning processes and the cheapening of apparatus has also its effect in insuring a market for fruits. Fruit farmers are not now dependent on "canneries." Recent inventions enable them to do the canning themselves.

It would seem, then that the grower need only see to it that his fruit is of good quality, attractively put up and intelligently marketed, to be certain of a reasonable reward. But the day when neglected orchards and bushes could be depended on to produce saleable crops has passed. The grower of to-day must be equipped by study for battling with insect pests; must be insistent in cultivation and in the use of the sprayer; and must, in short, give as close attention to his trees as the stockman does to his cattle, the doctor to his patients, or the merchant to keeping his stock of goods fresh and in saleable condition.

WILL LEAVE FOR THE OLD COUNTRY

From Farm and Dairy.

Mr. G. G. Publow, Chief Dairy Instructor for Eastern Ontario, will leave Montreal on July 15th on a trip to the Old Country to look into matters connected with the dairy business. He will travel on the Scotian of the Allan Line, and land at Glasgow. During a stay of a few weeks he will look into methods of manufacture and marketing butter and cheese and will gather information he may think useful for application in this country.

The excessively hot weather which has been prevailing in eastern Ontario during the past week is very injurious to the quality of cheese shipped in ordinary cars. With a view of preventing such injury, as far as possible, the Dairy and Cold Storage Commissioner has notified the railway companies that if the number of refrigerator cars supplied to shippers, under the arrangement whereby the Department of Agriculture pays the icing charges, should exceed the limit fixed in the agreement, no objection will be raised by the department while the present heat continues.

At the Farmers' Friend Cheese Factory last year 1,689,175 pounds of milk were manufactured into 153,649 pounds of cheese. The proceeds from the sale of this cheese were $16,485.37.

I have recently met with some of our American cheese and butter makers. I find that they are fairly well qualified in butter making, but from a Canadian standard know practically nothing about cheese.—Ralph Watson, Peterboro Co., Ont.

When Time To Thin Apples

From Farm and Dairy.

W. J. Green, Ohio Agri. Exp. Station

The time to thin apples would be when the apples are about the size of marbles, if it were not for the fact that one of the objects of thinning is to remove defective fruit. All apples showing stings of any kind, hail marks, spots of scab, spray or frost injury, or any other deformity should be removed even though the crop may be light. Evidently this cannot be done properly until the fruit is nearly half grown. The over-loaded trees should be thinned first, however, taking care to take off fruits which have any sort of deformity.

The amount of good fruit to take off is not subject to a hard and fast rule, but is should always be a little more than seems necessary. Last season the removal of half the fruit from heavily loaded trees was not sufficient. When a tree with a spread of branches of 25 or 30 feet gives promise of a crop of more than 20 bushels, thinning is needed to keep within that limit. Some trees may easily hold a crop of more than 20 bushels, but rarely is this the case if none but first-class fruit is desired. When we have followed the rule of allowing the apples to remain as near together as six to eight inches, too many have been left. Nothing short of observation and practice will enable anyone to thin apples properly, and the error is nearly always on the side of leaving too many.

PARALYZED LIMBS

To-day it is sleeplessness, headaches, digestive trouble, and irritability. Next thing you know some form of paralysis has developed. Mr. Alex. Rosenburger, 19 Moore Street, St. Catharines, Ont. writes: "Nervous trouble developed into paralysis of the limbs so that I became helpless. Doctors failed me, but after using 60 boxes of Dr Chase's Nerve Food I resumed work, and now feel better than I did for 20 years."

WHEN ANIMALS ARE STRUCK BY LIGHTNING

From Farm and Dairy.

When animals are struck by lightning the shock usually kills them instantly, but where they are mildly struck and they continue to live, they are usually in a partially paralyzed condition. Paralysis is brought on by the shock to the nervous system and they naturally lose control of certain parts of the body or limbs.

There is great danger of live wires falling from electric lines onto wire fences. This will charge the entire fence with electricity, and if an animal comes in contact with it, it is usually instant death. The writer recently observed a case of this kind where the entire fence surrounding the small paddock was charged by a fallen wire during an electrical storm. Three cows were killed in their tracks while coming in contact with the fence. A cat attempting to jump through the fence was instantly killed and roasted while partly through the fence.

Where an animal has been shocked by lightning or electricity, and has not been killed it is advisable to administer to it such ingredients as will have a tendency to tone up the nervous system. It is advisable to give a laxative, stimulant and tonic. —Dr. David Roberts in Kimball's Dairy Farmer.

THE WEAKEST POINT IN CREAMERY BUSINESS

From Farm and Dairy.

G. G. Publow, Chief Dairy Instructor, Kingston, Ont.

The weakest point in our creamery business is the condition of the cream as it is received at the factory. It is delivered over-ripe. The cause for this is that cream is not delivered often enough and it is not cooled to a sufficiently low temperature after it is separated. If fine flavor is to be had in butter, the butter maker must have absolute control of the fermentation. He cannot have this control with sour cream. Cream should be delivered while sweet.

The temperature to which cream should be cooled after separation and the temperature at which it should be kept depends on how often it is delivered. If delivered only twice a week, cream should be cooled to 45 degrees; at least below 50 degrees immediately after separating. The fresh cream should not be mixed with that from previous separation until it is thoroughly cooled. When mixed, the whole should be kept cool until delivered. Cream should be delivered in individual cream cans. This system gives an advantage to the butter maker over inspection of the cream by the cream hauler by placing him in position to give information. All told, individual cans are to be strongly recommended.

SOMETHING ABOUT BAKING

From Farm and Dairy.

For baking purposes, eggs should always be cold. If the whites do not easily become stiff, add a pinch of salt. Remember that it is impossible to beat whites to a stiff froth if the very least particle of yolk gets into them.

If pancakes stick to the griddle, grease it, sprinkle well with salt and rub hard with a cloth; then grease again, and there will be no further trouble.

Add a tablespoonful of melted lard or butter to the pancake batter and you will not need to grease the griddle at all, except possibly a very little before you bake the first batch. The kitchen will then be free from smoke.

To test an oven for bread, put in a piece of white paper, and if it turns a light brown in five minutes, the oven is right.

If the heat is too great above a baking pan, lay a piece of brown paper over the top of the pan; if too great beneath slip an asbestos pad under the pan.

In baking cake, look at it often, and if the cake is browning on top before it has risen as high as it should, the heat is too great; throw open the oven door at once. Don't fear that your cake will fall. Two minutes will cool off any oven. This rule must be observed, even when baking angel cake. The old rule that cake must be in the oven fifteen minutes before the door was opened was the cause of many a failure.

A pudding should always be quite stiff before it is removed from the oven, else it will fall.

WHEN GLASS BOTTLE CANNOT BE OPENED

From Farm and Dairy.

When a glass bottle stopper cannot be loosened by any ordinary means, hold the neck of the bottle over the flame of a candle or match, turning it until all sides are heated, and it can then be easily removed.—L.T.

When making tomato soup or gravies, to avoid curdling always pour the liquid into the thickening instead of the thickening into the liquid.—E.C.F.

When scrubbing pine floors to a pail of hot soapsuds, add two tablespoons of borax. This whitens the floors and keeps hands from getting rough.

To place feather bone in a thin collar leave an inch of tape at the top and bottom of the collar, turn it back, and stitch to form little pockets at the top and bottom, and slip the bones in the pockets. This saves ripping them off when the dress is laundered. They need to be only about inch deep on sheer collars.—L.T.

An empty crochet silk spool nailed to the floor or skirting boards at the back of the door and painted the color of the woodwork makes a convenient door-stop.

When mending a torn sheet, if it is a straight tear, sew a piece of linen tape on right side; turn and sew edge of goods on other side. This is strong will not pucker, and is neater than setting in a piece of goods.—E.D.

To remove rust stains from linen or white goods boil article in cold water, adding a small quantity of salts of lemon. Letting this boil one hour stains will entirely disappear.—E.Y.S.

Salt moistened with vinegar will remove burnt marks from enamelled saucepans and dishes, but don't forget they should be soaked in cold soda water for a few hours first to loosen the stains. A tablespoonful or so of concentrated lye boiled for a short time in the burnt utensil will also remove the scorch.—T.L.D.

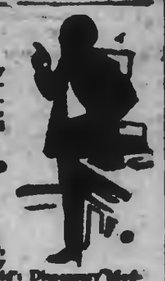
HANDLING SAMPLE BOTTLES EASILY

From Farm and Dairy.

Mr. Campbell, at the Central Smith cheese factory, Peterboro Co., has a most convenient arrangement for handling the composite sample bottles. Instead of having the patron's number on each bottle, the bottles are arranged 12 on a shelf, the shelves being made just long enough to hold the 12 bottles and no more. The numbers of the bottles are stamped on the front of the shelf. When a bottle is taken down, therefore, to receive a sample of milk, there is only one space vacant in which to put it back, and the bottles cannot possibly get mixed. Also there is no trouble with the numbers getting washed off—or of the bottles getting turned on the shelf making it impossible to see the number readily.

In removing the test bottles from the weighing stand to the tester, a wooden trough is used, just long enough to hold the 12 bottles. The numbers of each bottle are stamped on the trough also. Mr. Campbell finds this method of handling the test bottles much more convenient than the method he formerly practised of having the numbers glued on each bottle.

When You Think



Of the pain which many women experience with every month it makes the gentleness and kindness always associated with womankind seem to be almost a miracle. While in general no women rebels against what she regards as a natural necessity there is no woman who would not gladly be free from this recurring period of pain.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription makes weak women strong and sick women well, and gives them freedom from pain. It establishes regularity, subdues inflammation, heals ulceration and cures female weakness.

MARKET REPORTS

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Close Higher—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, July 20.—Belief in some quarters that there would be a decided falling off soon in receipts from the winter crop, made wheat buyers to-day more active. The close was strong at 1 1-8c to 1 5-8c net advance. Corn at the close showed a gain of 1 3-4c to 2 1-8 and 2 1-4c over last night, and oats a rise of 7-8c. The outcome for hog products varied from 2 1-2c lower to 30c increase in cost.

The Liverpool market closed to-day ¼d lower to ⅝d higher than yesterday on wheat, and ⅝d lower on corn. Berlin closed ¼c lower on wheat, Paris ⅛c up 1/16 higher, Antwerp unchanged.

LIVERPOOL, July 20.—Closing: Wheat, spot steady; No. 2 Manitoba, 7s 5½d; futures firm; July, 6s 10⅝d; Oct., 6s 8⅝d; Dec., 6s 8¼d. Flour, winter patents, 27s. Hops in London (Pacific coast), £7 to£7 10s.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, July 20.—Owing to the advance of 1c per bushel in prices for wheat at Winnipeg, all foreign bids were out of line for Manitoba grades, but the demand was good for American red milling wheat and considerable business was worked, which resulted in ocean freight engagements being made for 800,000 bushels. American corn was stronger with cargo lots of number three yellow offering to arrive at 69c afloat. Oats were quiet and steady. There was some enquiry from European sources for spring wheat flour, but little business resulted. The local trade is fairly active. There is considerable demand for bran and shorts from all sources, and higher prices are talked of in the near future.

Oats—Canadian western No. 2, 42½c to 43c car lots ex-store; extra No. 1 feed, 41½c to 42½c; No. 2 C.W., 41c to 41½c.

Flour, Manitoba spring wheat patents, firsts, $5.30; seconds, $4.80; winter wheat patents, $4.60 to $4.75; strong bakers', $4.40; straight rollers, $4.10 to $4.25; in bags, $1.85 to $2.

Millfeed—Bran, Ontario, $21 to $22; Manitoba, $20 to $21; middlings, Ontario, $23.50 to $24; shorts, Manitoba, $23; moullie, $28 to $31.

Dressed hogs (abattoir), $10.25 to $10.50 per 100 lbs.; beef, plate, half barrels, 200 lbs., $7.50; barrels, 200 lbs., $14.50; tierces, 300 lbs., $21.50.

Lard—Compound tierces, 375 lbs., 9½c; boxes, 50 lbs. net (parchment lined), 9¾c; tubs, 50 lbs. net, grained, two handles, 9¾c; pails, wood, 20 lbs. net, 10c; tin pails, 20 lbs. gross, 9¾c.

Pork—Heavy Canada short cut mess, barrels, 35 to 45 pieces, $25.50; half-barrels, $13.50; Canada short cut and back pork, 45 to 55 pieces, barrels, $22.50; Canada clear pork, barrels, 30 to 35 pieces, $21; bean pork, small pieces, but fat, barrels, $16.

Eggs—Selected, 21½c; cars, fresh, 17½c; No. 1 stock, 15½c.

Cheese—Westerns, 11⅝c to 11¾c; easterns, 11⅛c to 11½c.

Butter—Choicest, 23½c to 23c.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Toronto Live Stock.

TORONTO, July 20.—The railways reported 68 carloads of live stock at the City Yards, consisting of 632 cattle, 2255 hogs, 638 sheep and lambs, 132 calves and 1 horse.

Butchers.

George Rowntree bought 540 cattle for the Harris Abattoir Co. at the following prices on Wednesday and Thursday: Butchers' steers and heifers, at $6.35 to $6.90; a few choice cattle of export weights at $6.90 to $6.20; cows, at $4 to $5; canners, at $1.25 to $2.25.

Stockers and Feeders.

Feeders, 800 to 900 lbs. each, sold at $5 to $5.40; stockers, $3.80 to $4.75.

Milkers and Springers.

There being no buyers from Montreal or Quebec, trade in milkers and springers was the dullest of the season and prices declined about $10 per head on an average. Milkers were the hardest hit. Prices ranged all the way from $30 to $80 each, the sales given below.

Veal Calves.

Prices for veal calves remained steady at $4 to $8.50 per cwt.

Sheep and Lamb.

Sheep light, ewes and yearlings sold at $4.50 to $5; heavy ewes, $3.50 to $4; rams, $2.75 to $3 per cwt. Lambs were a little firmer, selling at $7 to $8 per cwt. Drovers should go easy, as should there be heavy deliveries it is not at all likely that the latter price will prevail next week.

Hogs.

The bulk of the hogs have been bought during the week at about $7.25, f.o.b., cars, at country points. Selects, fed and watered, sold at $7.60 to $7.65, and $7.30 to $7.35 to drovers for hogs, f.o.b., cars, at country points, and we heard of one deck being sold at $7.40, f.o.b., cars.

Expect Big Time.

Kingston, July 21.—The City Council and committee of citizens are making elaborate preparations for the old boys' reunion on July 29, 30 and 31. Big delegations of former Kingstonians are expected from Chicago, Toronto, Ottawa, Montreal, Rochester, Watertown and elsewhere. Sports, parades, receptions and a generally fine welcome will be features during the home-coming. Thousands are expected.

Thrown Off Rig.

Listowel, July 21.—Jacob Gottfried, a delivery boy, engaged by the Zurbrigg Bakery, while standing on top of the delivery wagon outside the race course watching the ponies, was thrown off the rig when the horses became frightened and had his arm broken, as well as being otherwise painfully injured.

Her Harem Skirt.

I have a brand new harem skirt
Of satin rich and black,
With beaded gimp around the legs
And buttons up the back.
Each day I take it from the box
In which it folded lies
To gaze upon its sable sheen
With fascinated eyes.

I shake it out and smooth it down
On sofa, chair or bed.
Its shining, bifurcated length
Admiringly I spread.
Then for its narrow box again
I mournfully prepare it,
Because I haven't got the nerve
To put it on and wear it.

Youth's Appetite.

There's a youngster in Boston whose appetite is a constant source of amazement to his family and relatives.

On one occasion this lad was taken to spend the day with an uncle in the suburbs. At dinner he ate so much that finally it became actually necessary to forbid him to eat any more. Later, when the family were taking their ease on the porch the irrepressible William pulled something from his pocket and began gnawing it.

"What have you there?" demanded his father.

"Only a dog biscuit," came in apologetic tone from Willie.

"Where did you get it?"

Same Old Dope

The sap will soon be running,
And the farmers soon will go
With their axes and their kettles
To the woods to get the flow.
Soon the syrup and the sugar
Will be coming in once more.
Soon the "almost pure" and "mapleine stuff"
Will be peddled at the store.

Soon the country kids will gambol
Round the kettle as it boils
And will eat their fill of sugar

Like I used to get of old,
But I'll only get the "near-stuff"
That the grocer's clerk has sold.

Second Annual Extraordinary Introduction Sale of Spectacles and Eyeglasses

From Factory to Face

For Seven Days, Beginning Saturday, July 22nd, we will sell our regular $3.00 and $5.00 Gold Filled Spectacles and Eyeglasses with lenses for $1

Such a startling announcement makes you ask how we do it.

The Reason We Do This

We wish to further introduce ourselves to the spectacle-wearing public, and have secured two hundred (200) dozen pair, all told, embracing all kinds of glasses, every style to fit all eyes and faces. These glasses are the same as are sold regularly for $3.00 and $5.

We have engaged the Directors of The International College of Ophthalmology to be in attendance to insure you a first-class examination. They will use just as much care in fitting them to your eyes as though you were to pay regular price. When you come to inspect them, that's the kind you'll find them to be, and every pair will be replaced by the manufacturers should they not give entire satisfaction.

Remember this Sale Will Only Last SEVEN DAYS
From SATURDAY, JULY 22nd, to SATURDAY, JULY 29th, inclusive

What You Get For Your Money

A gold-filled frame perfectly fitted to your face with proper lenses by our experts, any style you desire—reading or distance glasses that will serve you for years' protection and rest from tired, strained eyes, freedom from headache and like pains that come from defective vision—the satisfaction that you have all this and save a nice sum of money.

In order to serve all promptly during this wonderful sale, we have specially engaged the Directors of the International College of Opthalmology.

Each and every customer will thus get a scientific examination of their eyes and the glasses properly adjusted.

NOTICE—These frames are absolutely Gold Filled, not Gold Plated. They occupy the same place in the optical trade as Rogers Bros.' "1847" does in the silverware trade, or Elgin or Waltham do in the Watch line.

Remember This Sale Begins on Saturday, July 22nd and will only last until Saturday, July 29th

In the Meantime See Our Window Display

Lowest price for compound lenses ground especially to order. Come early and get choice selection. Saturday, July 22nd to Saturday, July 29th, for the factory to the face prices.

GORDON CAMPBELL BACK AFTER EXCITING EXPERIENCE IN THE PORCUPINE FIRE

With Big Squad of Russian Labourers He Was Saved by Taking Refuge in a Sink-Hole When They Were Besieged by the Fire For Many Hours---Foreigners Were in a Panic When Car of Dynamite Exploded

Gordon (Pete) Campbell, the well known Peterborough athlete arrived home from Porcupine last night, looking none the worse for his exciting experience in the recent fire horror, in which he escaped death by taking refuge in a sink-hole with sixty Russian labourers and remaining there for many hours. To the Examiner "Pete" stated that it was an experience that he will not soon forget. He was employed at Camp No. 5 1-2, about a mile from Golden City, and was the only Anglo-Saxon in camp when the fire reached them. On the approach of the fire an effort was made to save the camp, but the Russians refused to take any chances, and the attempt was abandoned. It would have been useless in any event as the fire swept over the site of the camp, entirely destroying the buildings. The men made their way to the sink-hole nearby, which was filled with water and here they were safe although decidedly uncomfortable, the smoke being very bad. When the fire reached the edge of the hole they had to get into the water, but this was only for a few minutes. The remainder of the time they lay on the logs, covered with wet blankets, their chief difficulty being in keeping from suffocating. The Russians were terribly alarmed, and when a car of dynamite exploded a mile and a half way they thought the end of the world was at hand, and set up a terrible clamour. Very few could speak English, but they were all almost too fluent in their own language at this stage.

The siege lasted for many hours, as it was impossible to tell of the conditions outside and it was thought more prudent to remain where they were safe. Finally, however, a man came along and informed them that they would be able to get through safely and they left their refuge, reaching Golden City next day. For a long time it was impossible to get a telegraph message through to the outside world and when the lines were repaired the newspaper correspondents monopolized them in order to get their despatches through to their respective papers. This accounts for the delay in the word of Mr. Campbell's safety reaching here, which caused so much anxiety among his many friends in Peterborough.

"Pete" is looking fit and well, and says he never felt in better condition than he does at the present time. He has been playing some baseball in the North, with the Golden City team, and says that that town has some team. Grey, the pitcher, is a Princeton College player, pitching for the Tigers at the time Bobby Vaughan of the Torontos, was on the nine.

Mr. Campbell leaves to-night for New York, to meet his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Campbell, who are expected to arrive to-morrow from their trip to England. He will accompany them back to Peterborough next week.

POLICE ARE BAFFLED BY THE MYSTERIOUS SLAYING OF WOMAN IN AN AUTOMOBILE

Husband Tells His Story to the Authorities But a Vigorous Hunt by Search Parties Fails to Discover Any Trace of the Strange Man Whom He Declares Fired the Fatal Shot---The Police Are Completely off the Scent and Affair is Still a Complete Mystery

Special to The Examiner

RICHMOND, VA., JULY 20—On the ownership of a shotgun of an ordinary type to-day hinges the solution of the sensationally mysterious slaying of Mrs. Louise Owen Beattie, Jr., wife of the Manchester banker, who, according to the story told by her husband, was shot down while seated behind him in their automobile.

The murder is the most myster jous in the history of the State. Despite the efforts of more than a thousand searchers no one has seen a trace of the man who, according to Beattie, blocked the Midlothian pike on Tuesday night, and when asked to give up half of the road, raised his shotgun and fired directly into the Beattie automobile, instantly killing Mrs. Beattie. The woods surrounding the turnpike for more than five miles have been thoroughly searched without revealing the slightest clue.

Bloodhounds Balked.

Two packs of bloodhounds brought to the scene within six hours after the crime was committed, wandered aimlessly around two pools of blood in the middle of the Hard Turn Pike and then turned their muzzles skyward and bayed loudly and long. It was plain that they were unable to pick up a trail that could be followed.

The coroner has possession of the blood-stained automobile, the suit of clothes worn by Beattie and the shotgun. He is trying to trace the gun, and if its ownership can be established the slayer will be found.

Married Last August.

The Beatties were married last August. They have a two-weeks old baby, and, according to Beattie, the fact that it was not in its mother's arms when she was killed was due to its having been asleep when they started on the ill-fated night ride.

Beattie says they were returning from a fifteen-mile run, when, at a lonely spot in the pike, he saw a man jump from the bushes into the middle of the highway. He jammed the brakes on as the figure, dimly visible in the darkness, demanded with an oath, to know if he was trying to run over him.

"I told him there was room enough for both," said Beattie to the coroner, "and tried to pass him. He seemed drunk and very surly. I noticed he had a shotgun in his hand. Without a woment's warning he raised the gun and fired. The muzzle was not more than a yard from my wife. As he fired I leaped from the car and grappled with him. I seized the gun and he struck me a fearful blow on the nose, rendering me momentarily unconscious. When I recovered he was gone, and with one arm around my dead wife I drove fifteen miles through the darkness."

Two Pools of Blood.

Beattie has an abrasion on his nose. There were two pools of blood in the road some distance apart. This whatever blood soaked through the is also puzzling the coroner, as bottom of the automobile should have been caught by the drip pan.

The charge of shot entered Mrs. Beattie's face in a spot not more than an inch and a half in diameter, the muzzle of the gun having been held so close to her head that wads and all entered the wound.

Detectives arrested Irving Brown, a negro who lived near the scene, and whose father said he had a gun similar to that with which the crime was committed, but Brown gave so good an account of himself that he was soon discharged.

MUSICAL PIERROTS TELL OF THEIR EXPERIENCE IN PORCUPINE CATASTROPHE

Vaudeville Team Now Playing at the Royal Were in Golden City at time of the Disaster---Buried Their Trunks Containing Costumes and Outfit Where They Saw the Fire Was Coming Closer

Two more survivors of the awful holocaust which swept over the Porcupine district last week, have arrived in the city. They are known as The Musical Pierrots, and are here to fill an engagement at the Royal Theatre. Monsieur Pierrot related the following story to the Examiner this morning:

We were playing at the Lyric Theatre, Golden City, and on the day of the fire, about 10 o'clock, a dense smoke began to blow over Golden City and the Lake. No particular notice was taken of this, as it was a common occurrence for bush fires to start in the north country. About one o'clock things began to take a decided change for the worse and by 3 o'clock the fire had assumed fearful proportions.

We were all huddled together, at the theatre, and for about one hour me thought our time had come. We were hemmed in on one side by the Lake and on the other by a wall of fire. The smoke was suffocating us, and we found it very difficult to breathe. Everybody had their valuables piled on the road, such as safes, cash registers, etc., but the only means of escape was by wading out into the lake. To make matters worse dynamite explosions were taking place on all sides of us, making it extremely hazardous for us to venture on the streets.

Buried the Trunks.

I, myself, spent about two hours burying a large trunk that we had with us. But, fortunately, this precaution was not necessary. The fire passed around us, leaving Golden City practically as it was. This occurred on Friday. We remained in Golden City for ten days and completed our engagement. In spite of the terrible nature of the catastrophe the people still continued to patronize the theatre and we were favoured with fairly large audiences.

Water Was Scarce.

For the first few days after the fire free provisions were distributed among the hungry crowd, who lined up. The worst difficulty was experienced in procuring drinking water. All the wells were dried up, while the water in the lake was unfit to drink, being of a reddish hue, during the progress of the fire the water in the lake dropped three feet.

A Gruesome Task.

The work of disposing of the dead was a gruesome task that had to be performed by the survivors. The remains of those who had perished were to be seen on all sides. I would estimate that over 200 persons met their death. One lot of fifty coffins were shipped in and were quickly followed by a similar lot of fifty. Lists were posted up for m day to day giving the names of those who were missing, a large number of which will never be accounted for.

Seven bodies were shipped on the train that carried us to Toronto. After completing our engagement at Golden City we were billed for Cobalt, but cancelled our engagement on account of the risk that we would be subject to, similar to the one already experienced in Golden City.

We were very thankful at having gotten out alive. Our experience was a horrible one.

INQUIRY DEMANDED INTO DEATH OF ENGINEER SMITH

Special to The Examiner:

PORT COLBORNE, ONT., JULY 21.—There will likely be a searching investigation into the facts regarding the midnight fatality when Engineer Chas. Smith was drowned. The railway company and canal people demand that the responsibility for the accident be fixed. The traffic on the canal is still tied up and great difficulty is experienced by wrecking crews getting the engine out of the canal bed.

ASQUITH WILL NOT CHANGE MAIN TERMS OF VETO BILL

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, JULY 21.—At the Cabinet Council this morning it is understood, it was decided that on Monday Premier Asquith would grant certain minor concessions in the Veto bill, but would maintain unalterably the main terms of the measure and would not send the bill again to Lords until he is ready to announce the names of new peers to be created to carry the government bill through. The Unionists had a caucus also at the house of Balfour, and decided to carry on the fighting to the last ditch.

VIOLENT SCENES AT THE TRIAL OF THE CAMORRA

Special to The Examiner.

VITEBO, ITALY, JULY 21.—One of the most violent scenes ever witnessed in the Italian courts occurred this morning at the Camorrist trial, when Enrico Alfano and Gennaro Abbatagge were thrown bodily out of the room by Caribineers. Some of the spectators drew knives threateningly and were seized by the police. In the midst of the hubbub Fabroni, who was chosen by the government to uproot the Camorra, stood calmly and declared loudly that he couldn't be intimidated by all the Camorra in existence. The court adjourned amid rioting and disorder.

GOVERNMENT TO PRESS RECIPROCITY RESOLUTIONS

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, ONT., JULY 1.—That it is the intention of the government to press reciprocity resolutions before anything else, at least for the present, was clearly announced by Mr. Fielding this morning. There are members who assert that the session will end on August 10, the day after the Senate resumes, and that elections will be over by the second week in October at the latest.

W. J. LINDSAY COMMITTED ON CHARGE OF CONSPIRACY

Special to The Examiner.

TORONTO, ONT., JULY 21.—Magistrate Denison this morning committed W. J. Lindsay for trial at the assizes on the charge of conspiring with W. R. Travers and others to obtain by fraud a treasury certificate for the Farmers' Bank from the Dominion Government. Bail, consisting of two $4,000 securities was renewed.

W. R. Travers, the convicted general manager of the bank, was in court. His face looked haggard and flabby and as he sat with bent shoulders in court, his eyes roved nervously about the room with a hunted expression.

NEW OUTFITS FOR CARRIERS

Government Will Issue Summer Clothing For the Mail Carriers Who Will Now be Able to Shed Their Heavy Coats

WILL BE A BOON

OTTAWA, JULY 20.—A natty hot-weather uniform for the letter-carriers in all Canadian cities is being issued by the Postoffice Department. Instead of the present hot and tight-fitting blue coats, the mail carriers will be provided with blue blouses of light material with gilt buttons and gold braid trimmings. Light and cool helmets, white in colour, will also replace the present heavy headgear. This humane reform has been inaugurated in response to many requests received lately from the letter-carriers for a saner hot-weather uniform.

TRAINER WELL UP

BISLEY, JULY 21.—Private Trainer, Canadian, who was first in the first stage of the King's prize, was second in the second stage and is still well up among the possible winners.

Moon College, Toronto, will find us.

ANOTHER MOTOR CAR SMASH-UP

Special to The Examiner

MONTREAL, Q., JULY 21. —Geo. Leduc is dying of a fractured skull, and four other people are seriously injured as the result of Leduc's auto crashing into a telegraph pole while going at forty miles an hour at 1.30 this morning.

PRESENTED WITH BEAUTIFUL RING

And yet another evidence of the high esteem in which Mr. E. C. Srigley of the Collegiate Commercial staff, was held, manifested itself one evening this week, when he was presented with a beautiful gold ring by the Senior Commercial Class. A number of the girls of Commercial 2 gathered at his house and presented him with the beautiful present. Mr. Srigley expressed his sincere appreciation for their extreme kindness, in a neat speech, in which he thanked them for the kindness they had shown, and wished them the greatest success. Mr. Srigley leaves for Windsor in about a month's time.

LEG WAS BROKEN

Mr. Wm. Scott of East City Fell While Descending a Ladder Sustaining Painful Injuries

IS IN HOSPITAL

Mr. W. Scott of Hunter street, east, was the victim of a somewhat serious accident last evening.

He was descending a ladder on his business premises on Robinson St., East City, and when about five feet from the ground he slipped and fell. After being instantly picked up by two of his men he was taken to his home, and Dr. Neal, who was immediately sent for, arrived with his assistant shortly afterwards. It was then found that Mr. Scott had sustained a broken leg, besides minor injuries.

After passing a painful night Mr. Scott was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital this morning for further treatment.

SECTION FOREMEN WRITING RULES

A recent order has been issued on the Grand Trunk Railway System compelling all section foremen to study the rules, and also to be able to write the rules at any time. To-day, Mr. W. J. Lyons, despatcher, Lindsay, is in the city, conducting the examination of the local foremen. He will pass along the line and the foremen of the various sections will write. The rules consist of signal definitions, and rules which must be followed by foremen under general conditions, also in time of accidents. There are about 100 in all.

FOR BALD HEADS

A Treatment That Costs Nothing If It Fails.

We want you to try three large bottles of Rexall "93" Hair Tonic on our personal guarantee that the trial will not cost you a penny if it does not give you absolute satisfaction. That's proof of our faith in this remedy, and it should indisputably demonstrate that we know what we are talking about when we say that Rexall "93" Hair Tonic will grow hair on bald heads, except where baldness has been of such long duration that the roots of the hair are entirely dead, the follicles closed and grown over, and the scalp is glazed.

Remember, we are basing our statements upon what has already been accomplished by the use of Rexall "93" Hair Tonic, and we have the right to assume that what it has done for thousands of others it will do for you. In any event you cannot lose anything by giving it a trial on our liberal guarantee. Two sizes, 50c. and $1.00. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in this community only at our store, McDermid and Jury.

DEATH WAS VERY SUDDEN

Mrs. Thos. Harrison of Fraserville Taken Ill on the Way to City This Morning and Died in a Few Minutes

WELL KNOWN RESIDENT

Apparently in as good health as ever, Mrs. Thomas Harrison of Fraserville, left her home this morning in company with her husband to drive to Peterborough, and within 30 minutes afterwards, she was dead, from heart failure. Mr. and Mrs. Harrison had only gone about a mile and one-half on their journey when Mrs. Harrison was seized, apparently with convulsions, and told her husband she was going to die. He immediately drove home and a doctor was summoned by telephone, but within a few minutes after her arrival at the house Mrs. Harrison passed away.

She was a well-known resident of Fraserville, where she had lived for the past ten years. Her maiden name was Emma Victoria McLeod, and she was born at Hoxton, near Orillia, where nearly all the surviving relatives live. Her husband and one son, Robert James, are left to mourn her loss. Three brothers and four sisters, living near Orillia, also survive. She was thirty years of age and was an adherent of the Methodist church. A host of friends in the district will be shocked and grieved to learn of her tragically sudden death.

The remains will leave Fraserville at 8 o'clock to-morrow for Hoxton, where the funeral will take place on Sunday.

WILL HAVE A REPRESENTATIVE HERE

Mr. W. J. Kent, druggist, at the corner of George and Hunter streets, has made arrangements with the celebrated International College of Ophthalmology, Toronto, by which a representative of that famous firm will be in Peterborough the week of July 22 to 29 prepared to test eyes and fit persons needing them with proper glasses. The firm is so well known throughout Canada that little need be said in their praise. When it is stated that last year in Canada they fitted no less than ten thousand people, some idea of the immensity of the operations carried on by them may be had. In Peterborough alone last year five hundred people were fitted with glasses, and their work has been pronounced eminently satisfactory in every case. No better endorsation of the merits of their work could be given than the fact that the International College of Ophthalmology has fitted nearly all the representatives of Canada shooting in the rifle matches at Bisley and Wimbledon. Surely no person has to be more careful about his eyes than a crack shot and the fact that the greater number of Canada's team have patronized the International College, speaks well for the efficiency of their work and the merit of their products. Their specialist will be at Kent's drug store on Saturday and all next week.

PORTSMOUTH, JULY 21. — The boiler of the torpedo boat destroyer "Kangaroo" blew up to-day, killing two men and injuring 15.

DIED IN LOCKPORT

A former resident of Peterborough passed away in Lockport, N.Y., on Sunday last, July 16, in the person of Minnie Flaherty, wife of Mr. Henry Hemmes and daughter of the late Edward Flaherty, of Peterborough. The deceased was very well known and highly respected in this city and her many friends will be sorry to learn of her death. She is survived by her husband, one son Edward, four brothers, John and Fred in Peterborough, Frank in Galt and Hugh in Port Arthur and two sisters, Maggie and Lizzie in Fort William.

The funeral took place in Lockport on Wednesday from the family residence, 34 Frost street, to St. Michael's Cathedral and thence to the cemetery. Messrs. Fred and John Flaherty of Peterborough went to Lockport for the funeral.

FRIDAY, JULY 21, 1911

WASTING THE WORLD.

Mr. Chiozza Money, M.P., a well-known writer on economic subjects, has written a striking article for the London Daily News, the theme of which is that man has been wasting the world, says the Toronto Star. It is a very small world, as we freely admit when we are talking of the railway, the telegraph, the fast steamship, and other contrivances for making space seem smaller. Yet men deal with it as if it were a world of infinite magnitude and resources.

"Is it virgin soil? Then plough and sow and reap until crops refuse to rise, and then pass on to fields and pastures new. Is it timber? Then cut it down, regardless of the fact that the passing of two generations of men will not give back to the world the magnificent trees of which you have robbed it. Is it rubber? Then sap it and sustain it red with homicidal hands, and taste the joys of a rubber boom, piling waste on waste, and robbery on robbery. Is it coal? Then mine it hastily, guiltily, at whatever cost of life and limb, so the miners may rot in hovels on the hillside (is not one bed enough for three men, seeing that each work only eight hours a day?) even while there me few, even in a land which knows seven months of winter, who can afford to heat their bedrooms?

In Canada, as in the United States, there has, in recent years, been an awakening to the truth that no country possesses inexhaustible resources—a truth which ought to be self-evident, but is disguised while a small population has access to enormous riches in the form of forests, mines, and fertile soil. Mankind also still labours under the delusion that money is wealth, and rejoices greatly when it hears that a crop of wheat, or a gold mine, or a forest, produces returns that can be measured in dollars. But the scarcity and dearness of food are gradually bringing men back to sounder thinking. Hence the modern doctrine of the conservation of resources.

AS TO REDISTRIBUTION.

Those members of the Opposition in Parliament who are echoing their leader's demand for a redistribution before an election, says the Ottawa Citizen, while at the same time asserting that they will not allow the public business to proceed until there has been an election, seem to forget or at least do not wish to remember, that a redistribution measure is not one which can be passed in a few days or even a few weeks. The whole history of Canadian politics shows that a redistribution bill has always been one of the most contentious measures introduced into Parliament.

It is inevitable that it should be so; because no matter how fair may be the intentions of the men who draft such a bill some member is bound to be dissatisfied, either because his constituency is being wiped out or some additions are made to it which do not satisfy his campaign ambitions. Such a member is bound to protest and protest loud and long, and when he is multiplied by a dozen or so, the possibilities of debate are visible.

Every redistribution bill passed by the Canadian House of Commons has required months of consideration and weeks of debate. Why should the redistribution bill which will follow this year's census be any different to its predecessors? The fact is that it would be absolutely impossible to pass such a bill inside three months from the date of its introduction and the Conservatives know it. They want to pose as being desirous of securing an early redistribution so that they may escape the anger of the Western people, but at the same time they refuse to let the business of Parliament go on.

If they are sincere in their desire for a redistribution before an election their course is very simple. They can let the reciprocity bill pass, allow Parliament to be prorogued, and then come back in November when the redistribution bill will be ready for their consideration. But they will not do that. The result will be that they will have to accept the responsibility if an election is found necessary before the redistribution.

A CHOICE OF MARKETS.

The farmers of Canada, if they really want a choice of markets for their produce, should have it. If they do not want it they will have at the next general election, whenever it comes, a chance to say so. They have it in their power to secure free trade in farm products with the United States; they have it at their option to turn down that chance with the full knowledge that many years must elapse before they will ever get such another. It would be folly on the part of any political party to stake its existence on a policy for the farmers, if the farmers are so obtuse as to prefer being shut up to any one market.

In considering this matter the Canadian farmer may as well get rid once for all of the idea that the people of Great Britain will ever put a duty on food stuffs which they must import, for the purpose of giving a preference to colonial products. At the last 3 general elections they have returned majorities of over a hundred each time against proposals to tax the food of the masses. Great Britain could grow all her own food if the land of that country were thrown into cultivation and duties were impose don foreign agricultural produce; but there is no reason to believe that such a policy will ever be adopted by a British Parliament. It is now more than sixty years—two generations — since the "corn laws" were swept away, and on a pobiscite vote, if one were taken today, the popular majority against taxing the people's food would be not merely decisive but enormous.

It is quite true that the price of wheat at Liverpool determines the price of wheat in Canada, for it determines the price also of wheat in the United States; but that state of matters will not last always. The population of United States cities is increasing much more rapidly than the population of the rural districts, and the time is not far distant when that country will be importing instead of exporting wheat. The interval will be still shorter till the time when Canadian hard wheat will be imported much more extensively than it is at present, to improve by mixing with soft wheat the grades of flour in common use.

It may be said, with a measure of truth, that when the people of the United States want Canadian hard wheat, or Canadian high class barley, or Canadian live stock for food purposes, they will be able to get them by paying the duties on these products. But the removal of the duties will materially hasten their introduction into the United States, and in that way give the Canadian farmer of to-day a chance to benefit by free access to a very extensive and valuable market, without interfering in the least with the value of the British market of which nothing can deprive him, and the Canadian farmer is shrewd enough to see this.

The acute trouble into which the Conservatives have fallen in the matter of reciprocity is due to bad leadership. Mr. Borden, as he avowed in his western speeches, is an obscurantist a protectionist, that he has fallen into a pound net and has dragged his party into it with him. The time is not far distant when his supporters will turn and rend him, and will try some other leader—probably with no better success. What a falling off from the Sir John Macdonald of the old days !He would have accepted reciprocity, have held the government responsible for the consequences, and have gone on talking about matters administrative and legislative, depending on the course of time to bring about his opportunity to defeat his opponents. Mr. Borden opposed the National Transcontinental railway; he opposed the British Admiralty as well as the Canadian government on the navy question; and now he is opposing reciprocity. This is all right for the Liberals, if the Conservatives are satisfied.

Mr. Borden found out recently that the farmers of the west understand their own interests perfectly; it will speak little for the farmers of the east if they give themselves over to their party leaders bound hand and foot. The farmers of Central Ontario used to benefit by reciprocity to the extent of hundreds of dollars yearly; they should know better than refuse a chance to profit similarly again. The farmer who once clearly understands that reciprocity means even one hundred dollars a year of additional profit to him on his year's operations, is not likely to allow other people to pull the wool over his eyes.

WHERE TIME IS MONEY

The Colonia Cosme, on the Paraguay, above Asuncion, is one of the most curious in the world.

The members of the colony make or grow everything they want, and import nothing. The workmen have seven hours' work a day, and earn not money, but time. Their wages are hours and half-hours. These they save up till they have a week in hand and then they go off on an excursion

If a man wants a chair or a table he pays for it in hours of work, which are deducted from the balance to his credit.

COOKING ON A LARGE SCALE

The Government is boiling an Indian village in Wyoming.

Everything about the settlemen that can be boiled—tepees, clothing blankets, harness, etc.—is being subjected to that treatment to destroy the traces of small-pox. This village is where a hundred Indians were quarantined while they suffered from small-pox in mild form. There were no deaths, and the quarantine is practically lifted.

This "hot-water disinfection" was resorted to as the Indians more readily understood it!

A FEW INTERESTING FEATURES OF BOOK-KEEPING

Custom, certainly not law, seems to have gradually in recent years invested the mere keeping of a set of books with extraordinary powers of potentiality, says the Ottawa Citizen. If a criminal is charged with a crime he is held to be innocent until he is proven guilty; but if a person is charged with an account in the books of a mercantile firm he is held guilty of the offence until he proves himself innocent. At least this is the gist of innumerable complaints that are heard from time to time from persons who claim to have been put to much trouble and inconvenience by the general existence of the idea that the mere fact that an individual is charged with a debt in the books of a business concern makes him liable to be held guilty of owing the debt until he can prove that the charge was a mistake, or that the debt had already been paid. It may be said that when careful people pay an account they should always get a receipt, and, inferentially, keep all their receipts for seven years, until the debt is outlawed and there is no chance of their having to pay it twice. This is very good in theory, but rather difficult in practice; but under the existing custom even that does not protect the person who endeavors to always pay cash and never get his name "on the books" of any business concern. In fact, the cash customer, under prevailing conditions, is under great disabilities, as compared with credit customers, whose names are perennially "on the books." In fact, it is rather a mistake for people to be cash customers, though occasionally it has its advantages. For instance, the story is told of a well-known citizen who had been a cash customer of a firm for several years, and one day he was surprised to receive quite a bill which did not contain any details except "To Order No. So-and-so." From the dates the account had apparently been standing for some time. He immediately called in and said there must be some mistake, as the account could not be against him, and left it with the clerk. A day or two afterwards he received a sharp letter stating that the account was on the books and was against him and the firm would be obliged by immediate payment. A second call was necessitated, coupled with the suggestion that the account be made out in detail to see what it was for. When the details were received the alleged debtor was quite certain that he had never received the goods, but the firm assumed a stand-pat attitude and calmly asserted that the charges were on their books, were against the alleged debtor, and it was up to him to pay the account. Luckily for the debtor, he was able to show that himself and his family had been abroad during the whole summer, and could, therefore, prove an alibi. In the face of this he insisted on knowing how the account came to be charged to him, and after a good deal of investigation the firm discovered that the goods had been ordered and received by a person who did not even bear a similar name, and whose address they had been unable to discover. For some obscure reason the difficulty had been solved by charging it against the cash customer. Had he not been able to prove an alibi the account would probably have been sued, and if the members of the firm, or their employees, had been as positive as to the identity of the debtor as they were before the alibi was established, they would probably have sworn to it and he would have had to cash in for the delinquent, simply because the charge was "on the books."

Another very common manner in which cash customers get into difficulty is that occasionally circumstances arise under which duplicate articles are ordered to be sent home on approbation. The cash customer, anxious not to get his name "on the books," will return one article the following day and call in to pay for the article which is accepted. Apparently it is the custom in such cases to charge up both articles when they are sent out and it is not an infrequent occurrence that when one is returned and the other paid for the payment is accepted as a cash transaction and never gets on the books. So that, while one article is checked off as returned, the unfortunate would-be cash customer remains charged with the other. Months afterwards he receives the bill and immediately protests that he called in the next day and paid for the article. Regarding it as a cash transaction, he probably neither asked for nor received a receipt. His explanation is received with tolerant sympathy, and an invitation either to produce his receipt, which he never received, or—there is the charge "on the books."

Another incident is related illustrative of the woes of the unfortunate cash customer. An unprominent citizen's letter half had been a cash customer at a large departmental store and had an ambition to purchase a bonnet. Having nearly made up her mind s to the one she wanted, she requested that it be sent home on approbation. After some delay and the apparent institution of enquiries, she was astonished to be informed that the firm regretted very much that the bonnet could not be sent on approbation as her husband's name was not "on the books."

All things considered, the cash customer's lot is not a happy one.

ALONE HE DID IT

A Captain Who for Three Days Ran the Ship Himself

For one man to do the work of twenty with his own hands for three days and nights, and with forty lives under his charge, is a feat that takes some beating. It was done by Captain Morell, who brought the steamship Scindhia home by himself, although the crew considered necessary to work her was twenty-five, including engineers.

With $35,000 worth of cargo and fifteen passengers on board, she broke down in the Atlantic, and was driven hundreds of miles north out of her course. An accident spoiled the fresh water, and distilled water gave the crew dysentery, which, together with mishaps, left the captain without an officer or a man capable of work. The first officer and five of the crew were washed overboard, the two chief engineers were killed in the mishap, and the third only managed to make the damage good before he was laid up.

The captain, when the storm subsided, actually started one of the fires himself, got one of the engines to work at slow speed, and, by superhuman efforts, he managed to navigate the ship and keep her going, backed by great good luck.

He brought the Scindhia homeward round the North of Ireland, getting no wink of sleep for three days and nights; as he was out of the line of traffic, nobody saw his distress signals. He brought his ship to within twenty miles of the Mersey, and there a pilot-boat met him. Once boarded, he collapsed, and slept soundly for twenty-four hours; but he had, says The Mariner, the biggest ovation any merchant captain ever received when he got ashore.

CURIOUS MASCOTS

Singers Who Have Real Faith in Such Company

Madame Patti, who has enraptured all music-lovers, places great belief in an old doll, called "Henriette," which she has treasured as her special talisman since she was seven years of age.

Another great singer with a real faith in mascots is Madame Alice Esty, and she never sings in public without wearing a small green heart attached to a delicate necklace of gold.

The Shah of Persia and a small table, upon which are five splendid portraits, are quite inseparable. This mascot accompanies him everywhere, and is placed close to his pillow while he sleeps. The portrait consists of himself, the late King Edward and his Consort, and the Tsar and Tsaritsa of Russia. The late Baroness Burdett-Coutts was almost convinced that good luck would desert her if she parted with a lucky guinea. This coin was given to her grandfather, who dressed rather carelessly, by a benevolent old gentleman who had mistaken the former for one seeking charity!

Among ladies in French society there is a great desire to possess for "luck" bits of the hangman's rope, and applications are frequently made—but without success—to influential Britons connected with the Home Office to obtain such unpleasant relics from the hangman!

"HA, HA!" HERBS

There is a curious plant that grows in Arabia, and is known by the name of "laughing plant."

This name comes from the fact that anyone who eats its seed cannot control his laughter. The natives of the district where this plant grows dry the seeds, and reduce them to powder. A small dose of this powder makes those who eat it act very much like foolish people! The soberest person will dance, shout, and laugh like a madman, and runs about, cutting the most ridiculous capers for an hour.

At the end of this time the reaction comes. The dancer is exhausted, and a deep sleep comes upon him. After a nap of several hours, he awakens with no recollection of the antics he has performed.

THE EMIGRANT'S OUTFIT

What to Take With You When Leaving the Old Country

"It is nothing short of a misfortune that so many Englishmen should offend Canadian taste by landing in, and persisting in wearing, a costume which Canadians look upon as the acme of absurdity."

So writes Mr. L. O. Armstrong, a well-known Canadian railway official, says Answers. He continues: "I refer principally to the little tweed cap and red leather leggings. Canadians all over the Dominion immediately imbibe an ineradicable prejudice against a man who parades the street in such an outfit. They shun him; he cannot get work. It is, in fact, a terrible handicap, where competition is deadly keen."

Whether the emigrant goes to Canada, Australia, or South Africa, he should avoid any garb which makes him conspicuous. What he wants is quiet-patterned, strong, sensible clothes.

Don't leave smart suits or evening-dress behind, however. There is plenty of social life everywhere in the colonies, and party clothes are essential.

For the rest, the emigrant in purchasing an outfit must be guided by the climate of the country he is going to. In Canada the summers are infinitely hotter and finer than ours, the winters much colder. Therefore, take broad-brimmed felt hats for summer, and very warm underwear for winter.

Wherever you go, you are certain to need a good store of stout flannel shirts. These should be dark in color and of good quality. It will pay you to purchase these at home, and pay the duty on them.

Cotton goods, on the other hand, and boots, are fairly cheap in Canada, so do not overburden your trunks with these.

Some years ago the writer went out to farm in America, and before he started spent twenty pounds on an outfit, which included three suits of white duck, a huge cork solar helmet with pugaree complete, a set of boot mending implements, and a number of white flannel shirts.

And all these, and a good many similar things, he was only too glad to give away soon after his arrival.

Working-clothes suitable for the country can be bought ready-made at cheap prices anywhere in America, either in the States or Canada; therefore, one had much better wait till you reach your destination before purchasing them. If I were going out again I should take three good tweed suits of quiet pattern, one blue serge for better wear, a dozen good flannel shirts, two dozen pairs of strong merino socks, and all the boots I happened to have. I should also have four suits of thick underwear and four of thin, four suits of pyjamas, a good overcoat of dark-blue pilot-cloth, two soft felt hats, one bowler, one straw hat, three or four good knitted ties, some flannel collars, and a warm woollen comforter.

I should carry my goods in a very strong wooden trunk, clamped with iron and provided with two locks, and have in addition a kitbag for articles required on the voyage.

The emigrant must always remember that the more he takes the more he will have to pay in duty and in carriage.

A BERESFORD STORY

Of the many stories told of Lord Charles Beresford, few are better than the following. It is said that he made a wager of $500 with some clubmen that he would drive down Rotten Row in broad daylight. (Vehicles were forbidden in Rotten Row). Those interested posted themselves on the railings in the Park and awaited developments. The first thing to come along was a water-cart. The driver came slowly past to the railings and pretty nearly drenched the waiting ones in the Row. The water-cart man at once became the object of forcible and searching remarks. To the amazement of the bystanders he pushed his oilskin hat back and revealed the beaming face of Charlie Beresford, who said, "Hand over that hundred, old man." Lord Charles had squared the water-cart man to let him play the part, which he did to perfection. His friends had been watching for a smart turn-out of some description.

Manager Quinlan Leads Petes With The Stick Has An Average Of .500

M. O'Brien Has Made the Most Hits For the Season With Two Home-Runs Among the Lot---Batting and Fielding Averages of the Regulars Up-to-date

The batting and fielding averages of the Peterborough Midland League team, up to date, are given below.

A glance over the figures will show that Manager Quinlan is setting his team a good example by leading with the stick, he having an even .500 p ercentage, which is some figure for a pitcher, believe us. Most of his swats have been of the extra base variety, at that. Jimmy O'Hearne, the sterling second baseman is second, with .440, and Mike O'Brien, who has made more hits than any man on the team, is close on his heels. Two of the first baseman's smites were of the circuit variety. Shaw, the demon left-fielder, is a good fourth. The fielding averages show that two of the out-fielders, W. O'Brien and Craig, have yet to make their first slip, while the outfield has made but one error this season, a wild throw to third, by Bill Shaw. Mike O'Brien comes next with but one error in 44 chances, a fine showing for the first baseman. The figures of the regulars are as follows:

Batting—

	G.	A.B.	H.	P.C.
Quinlan, p.	5	22	11	.500
O'Hearne	6	25	11	.440

OUTFIELDER MAKES A TRIPLE PLAY UNASSISTED FIRST TIME ON RECORD

LOS ANGELES, JULY 20.—For the first time in the history of baseball an outfielder yesterday made a triple play unassisted during the game between Los Angeles and Vernon.

The Angels were batting. With Moore on second and Metzger on first, Atkins drove a long liner to right-centre in the sixth inning. Centrefielder Carlisle of Vernon grabbed the drive on the run sprinted to second, doubling Moore, and then trotted to first, putting out Metzger, who had already rounded second.

Previous Triple-plays.

The play recorded above is the first ever made by an outfielder. The unassisted triple-play credited to long to Paul Hines, May 8, 1878, never happened. This is how the play too place: A short fly was hit back to short-stop. Hines, who started for the ball, yelled, "I have it!" and the other players stood back. The play looked impossible, and the runners on first and second started for the plate. Hines, however, caught the ball about six inches from the ground and kept on running and touched third before the runner could return. Th man who had left second saw the catch, and, turning, started back to second. Hines, who had recovered his balance, threw the ball to Sweeney, who played second. Sweeney caught Hines' toss, and touching the bag completed the triple play. Hines simply made a double-play unassited, but, with the second baseman's assistance, completed a triple-play.

Previous unassisted triple-plays have been made as follows:

August 18, 1902—First Baseman Harry O'Hagen of Rochester, against Jersey City.

September 6, 1902 — Third baseman Frank Eustace of Pottsville, against Lebanon.

September 6, 1902—Shortstop William McGuire of Hoquiam, against Tocoma.

April 15, 1909—Third baseman 'Red' Hinton of Dayton Central League team against Tippecanoe City, O.

May 19, 1909—Neal Ball of the Clevelands, made an unassisted triple-play in the game against Boston. Wagner was on second and Stahl on first. Ball caught McConnell's fine drive, touched second and touched Stahl out.

Umpire, Dan McCabe.

Game called at 3 p.m. sharp.

Bowmanville will be here to-morrow for a most important Midland League game with Peterborough and the fans who turn out at Riverside Park should see about the prettiest contest of the season before the issue is finally decided. A win for Bowmanville would put the Rubber men right on Peterborough's heels in the race for the championship and the invaders may be counted upon to play ball from the drop of the hat. With so much at stake the interest will be at fever heat throughout. Beith and Quinlan will be the opposing twirlers and it will be a pitching duel right off the reel with the box artists backed up by the best teams available. The local fans are still talking of the snappy playing of the Bowmanville team when they were here on Coronation Day and are looking forward to see them in action to-morrow. The Petes had a lively practice last night and are in the best of shape for the game. Dan McCabe will handle the indicator and will call the contest sharp at 3 o'clock as the visitors have to catch a train. The prices will be the same as usual.

RACE FOR THE EASTERN LEAGUE PENNANT HAS CLOSED UP CONSIDERABLY

The race for the Eastern League pennant is on in earnest, and the Leafs are right in the hunt, being only four games behind the leaders, after winning 13 out of the last 16 games played.

The fight is a three cornered one exclusively, with Baltimore, Rochestr, and Toronto as the contenders. The other five clubs have not a chance for the honours, the nearest club being thirteen games behind the Leafs.

The records to date show that both Baltimore and Rochester have won most of their games from the tail-end clubs, while the Leafs have shown the best work against the leaders. Here are the figures:

Baltimore.

	Won.	Lost.
Rochester	5	6
Toronto	6	5
Montreal	6	4
Jersey City	10	4
Buffalo	6	4
Newark	8	5
Providence	8	5
	54	30

Rochester.

	Won.	Lost.
Baltimore	6	5
Toronto	5	9
Montreal	6	9
Jersey City	9	1
Buffalo	11	4
Newark	7	3
Providence	10	1
	54	32

Toronto.

	Won.	Lost.
Rochester	9	5
Baltimore	5	6
Montreal	8	7
Jersey City	7	9
Buffalo	8	4
Newark	5	4
Providence	8	4
	50	36

What May Come to Pass.

The Orioles, as John Ganzel says, have had the easy picking for the last couple of weeks, but during the next month will have to be at their best to beat Buffalo, Toronto, Montreal and Rochestr.

The Rochester team went home on Wednesday to begin a long series at home with Jersey City, Newark, Providence and Baltimore, and if their pitchers stand the strain (meaning McConnell and Holmes), they will be right in the running. While deposed from the leadership the yare still dangerous, and must be reckoned with for the leadership.

The Leafs are coming like a house afire and if the teams in front weaken even a little they will be supplanted by the Toronto team. The Baltimore team will be in Toronto on Monday for a three game series, and in view of the recent happenings at Baltimore and the Orioles' standing in the race three hot games are assured.

Mr. Snelgrove's Premium For Best Batting Average

One Gordon Beith of Bowmanville, will not have any too kindly a feeling against Mr. F. Snelgrove, the local tobacconist, when he learns tomorrow of the offer that Mr. Snelgrove has made to the Peterborough Midland League team. As an incentive to wield their clubs to good advantage against Beith in to-morrow's big game against Bowmanville, Mr. Snelgrove has very kindly donated a box of the best domestic cigars to the Peterborough player who has the best batting average in to-morrow's battle. Needless to say the Petes appreciate Mr. Snelgrove's generosity and will go after Mr. Beith, the Rubber men's twirler, with a vengeance that will make him wish there were no such things as cigars, or a merchant with enough interest in sport to donate them as premiums.

Printers Going To Lindsay To-morrow For Big Game

The Peterborough Printers will invade Lindsay to-morrow, going up on the 11.45 G.T.R. via Millbrook and will engage the Lindsay Printers in deadly combat in a game of baseball to-morrow afternoon. There will undoubtedly be a big bunch of excitement when the local type-jugglers cut loose. Manager Sharrard has his team trained to the minute and some inside ba-seball of the Frank Chance-Connie Mack variety may be looked for. As far as is known now the line-up will be as follows: Taylor (Examiner) c., Swanston (Examiner) p.; Miller (Times) 1b.; Sharrard (Examiner) 2b; Curtis (Review) s.s.; Johnson (Examiner) 3b.; Cook (Review) Vannetta (Times) Gilgour (Times) outfield.

EASY MONEY FOR JOHNSON

Statisticians are figuring that Jack Johnson, the heavyweight champion, is about to pick up some of the easiest money of his career. Johnson, it is figured will clean up $105,000 between now and next March in meeting some of the ripest lemons that have come his way since he put Tommy Burns to the right about in Sydney, N.S.W., three years ago.

Patsy Curran is to be the first mark. Johnson's share is to be $25,000. Patsy gets one-tenth of that the promoters the rest. It is strongly suspected that T. Flanagan is one of the latter, since he has taken a foremost part in bringing off the affair in Dublin. With Curran disposed of, Bombardier Wells, whose proper rating is good second-class, will be taken on in London.

Sam McVea will follow, the fight being staged in Paris, where Sam has a big following. Finally Bill Lang, whom Tommy Burns put out of business in one round, will stack up against the Big Smoke in Sydney, N.S.W., in March.

Meanwhile the only man entitled in any way to meet Johnson- to wit Sam Langford—is carefully side-tracked.

Jack Johnson and his advisers are quite as astute, in their way, as Tommy Burns was in his way.

SHOOTING

The Peterborough Gun Club held their regular semi-monthly shoot at the Driving Park last evening with a good turn out of members. Following is the score at thirty birds each:

C. Wood	26
C. James	19
H. Sawers	18
R. Tivey	18
C. Gutterson	16
S. Rush	16
H. Cook	15
C. Lech	11
C. Mills	9

At 25 birds—

H. Routley	22

The next shoot will be held on Thursday, August 3rd.

BASEBALL

The following players of the Printers' ball team are requested to be at the G.T.R. station to-morrow morning at 11.30 for their game with Lindsay: Taylor, Swanston, Sharrard, Johnson, Miller, Killingbeck, Gilgour, Cook, Wilson, Curtis, Vennette. A big bunch of rooters will likely go with the team, who expect to give the Lindsay aggregation a hard battle for the game.

Doesn't your old heart beat jus t a triffe faster when you gaze at that scrapping machine Red Dooin has builded, and cry when you, with every one else, said he would make a failure as a manager?

And doesn't it tickle you a wee bit to see what Roger Bresnahan has done with that bunch of National League cast-offs who wear Cardinal uniforms?

Instead of matching pennies to see whether the Giants or Cubs will play in the world's championship series, fans are seeing a regular Kilkenny scrap for the buntings.

Giant fans are forgetting an historical bone-headed play when they see Merkle make a home-run, a double, and a single, and put a game on ice.

That "Invincible" Cub machine seems smashed for good. Frank Chance's playing days are officially ended and Johnny Evers may never crawl into a uniform again.

Charley Comiskey has given up hope of winning a pennant with the White Sox and is talking of the beauties of nature, of fishing and hunting. 'Twas ever thus since 1906.

As they say at poker parties in our best sets, "all friendship ceases" when the Cubs and the Phillies "sit in a peaceful three-game series in the city of brotherly love."

Wouldn't it be interesting if it were really true that Ned Hanlon was to buy the Boston National team and transfer it, lock, stock and barrel, down to Baltimore?

HASTINGS ITEMS

HASTINGS, JULY 19.—Once more we are called to record the death of an old and respected resident of Asphodel, in the person of Mrs. Wm. Richardson, who departed this life on Sunday last at the ripe age of 78 years. Deceased was well known here, having resided in this vicinity for some sixty years. She leaves to mourn her loss four sons and two daughters. The funeral was held from her late residence on Tuesday and was largely attended. Interment took place at Norwood cemtery. Mr. Thos. Richardson of town, is a son of the deceased.

July 12th passed off very quietly here. Quite a number went over to Havelock to be present at the Orange celebration, and those who remained at home passed the day in various ways, viz., fishing, boating, etc.

The excursion to the Thousand Islands on Friday last, under the auspices of the Congregation of the Methodist Church, was quite a success. The special train arrived in town about 6 a. m., carrying same 8 or 9 coaches, and a large number availed themselves of the cheap trip to enjoy a delightful five hours' sail on the Lake and drink in the beauty of the scenery, which has to be seen to be fully appreciated. The committee in charge are to be congratulated on the success of their venture.

The raspberry crop this year is reported to be in advance of several years, and one would imagine, judging from the crowds you see every day coming from every direction with pails filled to overflowing that the country must be producing nothing else.

Our merchants have fallen in line with those of the surrounding towns and are taking Wednesday afternoon of each week through the summer season, for recreation, all the stores being closed.

The Misses Hattie and Helen Hore of Percy, have been spending a holiday with friends here.

Mrs. B. Scott and family of Campbellford, spent Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. Gilchrist.

Miss Vera Ammour of Toronto, is the guest of her friend, Miss Bella Humphries.

Mrs. Hayden of Port Hope, has has been the guest of her sister, Mrs. A. Parsons.

Mrs. Stott of Bellevelle, visited friends in town during the past week.

Miss Marjorie Edmison of Toronto, is holidaying at the home of her brother, Dr. W. T. B. Edmison.

Mr. and Mrs. Harrison of Toronto, are guests of the latter's aunt, Mrs. J. Valleau.

Mr. J. Stevenson, Sr., has returned looking hale and hearty, from a visit with friends in Michigan.

We understand that the ladies of St. George's Church are proposing to run an excursion to Healy Falls in the near future.

Mr. J. Buck, on Saturday evening, closed down the stone-crusher for the season, and the Council is well pleased with the work which has been done.

Mr. J. Thomson, M. P., of Havelock, gave us a call on Saturday.

QUEEN MARGHERITA

The latest conversion to the excitement of auto speeding in the Italian Royal Family is Queen Margherita, mother of Queen Helena, wife of the present King of Italy. The queen mother, though afflicted with rheumatism and at first adverse to the sport, was recently inveigled into accompanying her daughter on a drive through the streets of Rome, and was so captivated with the sport that she has replaced her stable of fine horses with a garage, well equipped with expensive cars, in which she daily takes long rides in and about Rome.

THE CLEVEREST WOMAN

Some Facts About Madame Curie, One of the Discoverers of Radium

Madame Curie, one of the discoverers of radium, who has been called the cleverest woman in the world, has been seeking, through a London house agent, a "little house in rural England not far from London, with a garden in which a little girl could play." These were all the particulars "the cleverest woman in the world" gave the man of business of her requirements. It seems the doctors have ordered change of air for the particular little girl in question—a small person who is the apple of her mother's eye, and of far more account than all the radium in the universe.

Madame Sklodowska Curie is still a young woman, being not much over forty. Her features are distinctly Polish, but her forehead is wider than one is accustomed to see in a woman. She is tall and well built, and her manners are a trifle distant—some call her austere. As in the fitness of things, her hair is her "crowning glory," and it is arranged in a large roll behind her head, absolutely innocent of tongs or curlpins. Again and again has society, especially Parisian society, tried to lure her into its centre, but the more it seeks her the farther she flees from it, and now society is getting tired of pursuing and leaves her alone.

MATRIMONIAL COMMISSION

An Agent Who is Suing for a Claim of $28,000

An interesting action regarding the commission to be paid to a matrimonial agent who claims that he was instrumental in bringing about a marriage between the son of a lace manufacturer and a young woman who rejoiced in the possession of a fortune of $1,200,000, has just come before the courts.

The commission claimed by the matrimonial agent was $28,000. He contended that for several years the lace manufacturer's son had asked him to find a wealthy young woman "with a view to matrimony." Eventually he introduced him to the young woman whom he married. Meanwhile the young man had given a written promise of commission to the matrimonial agent, which the latter returned to him. The young man declares that he did not enter into a business transaction with the matrimonial agent, and therefore did not give a promise as to commission. He further added that he was not the author of the letters attributed to him, and as for the photograph produced he admitted that it was his, but could not understand how it had fallen into the hands of the agent. The result of the case, which has aroused considerable curiosity, will not be made known for some time.

BIGAMY AND FRAUD

That he had been corresponding with thirty different women at the same time, was alleged against George Lucind, charged with obtaining money by false promises of marriage and with bigamy at the Westminster Police Court. Detective-Inspector Tappenden stated that 2,700 letters, written by seventy-seven different women, were found at prisoner's lodgings. In the majority of cases they referred to the man having asked them for money, and in fifteen cases the letters showed that Mosley had been sent sums varying from $300 to $125 and smaller sums.

BERLIN OPEN AIR ZOO

The Kaiser has determined to establish an open-air zoo in Berlin on the same lines as that owned by Carl Hegenbeck at Hamburg. The wild animals will live in apparent freedom and be kept in their respective areas by deep moats, which for the most part will be concealed from visitors.

NORTHERN ONTARIO

Area, 140,000 square miles.

Northern boundary, the Arctic regions.

Eastern boundary, the Province of Quebec.

Western boundary, the Province of Manitoba and the Territory of Keewatin.

Southern boundary is practically the Canadian Pacific Railway direct line from Montreal to Winnipeg, which runs across Ontario for a distance of 1,285 miles.

Telegraph and telephone connections are spreading with amazing rapidity all over the land.

Minerals are found extensively, and in splendid paying quantities, especially gold, silver, nickel, copper and iron.

Game is plentiful, including moose, caribou, red deer, bear, beaver, otter, wild duck, partridge and ruffed grouse.

The country is divided into six great districts, known as Nipissing, Sudbury, Algoma, Thunder Bay, Rainy River and Kenora.

There are now a number of villages and towns scattered over the country whose population runs from fifty up to several thousands.

The parks and forest reserves are large. Algonquin Park covers an area of 1,216,000 acres; Temagami Forest Reserve covers 3,563,600 acres, and contains an estimate of from three to four billion feet of timber; the Nepigon Reserve covers 4,670,800 acres; the Mississaga Reserve covers 1,980,000 acres, with several smaller reserves.

THE SHAPES OF EGGS

A mathematical discussion has taken place, before the Zoological Society, as to the differences in the shapes of eggs. A few eggs, like those of the owl and the tortoise, are spherical, or nearly so; a few, like the grebe's or the cormorant's, are elliptical, with symmetrical ends; the great majority, like the hen's, are ovoid, or blunter at one end than the other. The hen's egg is always laid blunt end foremost. Eggs that are the most unsymmetrical are also eggs of large size relatively to the parent bird. The yolks of eggs are spherical, whatever the form of the entire egg may be. This has been shown to be due to their being enclosed in a fluid, the "white," which makes the pressure everywhere on the surface of the yolk practically constant.—Science Siftings.

JEWISH MEMORIAL

To Perpetuate the Memory of the Late King Edward

The East End Jewish Memorial to King Edward VII. is to take the form of a beautiful stone drinking fountain, with bronze figures, to be erected in Whitechapel Road outside the London Hospital. The height of the fountain will be sixteen feet. The general scheme is a pylon, at the base of which is the drinking fountain. On one face of the pylon will be a medallion bearing a portrait of the late King, and on the reverse a similar medallion bearing the following inscription:

EDWARD VII.
Rex et Imperator.

The pylon will be crowned by a figure of peace bearing an olive branch as an emblem of the character of the King and his reign. On either side above the water-basins will be groups; one of them emblematical of justice, and the other of liberty, under whose protection figures of boys will be shown engaged in the pursuit of learning and industry. The memorial will cost about $5,000. A large proportion of the money has been subscribed in small sums by East End Jews, but Lord Rothschild, the Chief Rabbi, and a number of leading Jews have also contributed.

NEW UNIVERSITIES FOR THE GERMANS

The First Colonial University the World Has Ever Seen — Frankfort and Hamburg in the Lead

The immense growth of Germany's industrial and financial power has made it evident, to the educational authorities that the present twenty one universities, which for centuries have existed in Germany, are no longer able to cope with the enormous task of educating a host of young men who are to support and carry forward in the future the movement which has made Germany great, and to which the empire owes its present world influence far more than to its powerful army and navy. The great leaders of finance in Frankfurt on the Main and the merchant princes of Hamburg want to bring up their own train the young men who are to succeed them in their own way, and before long both of these progressive cities will have universities, peculiarly suited to the demands of modern times. The plan which has been outlined for the proposed university of Hamburg is exceedingly interesting—the idea being to found the first colonial university the world has ever seen. There will be four faculties, as usual in Germany. Prussia insists upon a school of law sorely against the grain of the practical Hamburgers, who think there are lawyers enough as it is, and there will be two "philosophical" faculties, men and natural science; but the fourth faculty, that of colonial science, is to be the glory of the University and to give the new seat of learning its characteristic note. Those who in fact may think that the undertaking is rather like putting a roof on a house before the walls are standing, but the Hamburgers, who practically made the German colonies, think otherwise, and we may rest assured that Hamburg's colonial university will soon be an established fact, and that nothing that the public spirit and munificence of her merchant princes can do to ensure its success will be left undone.

THE STEAMER STEWARD

One of the Busiest Men on Board, But Poorly Paid

There is no single individual in the service of the public, from the stoker down, who is perforce so versatile in his attainments and so enduring in his service as the steamer steward. His hours are from five in the morning until ten at night, his pay on the foreign-owned lines averages about $15 a month, and the steward in second class does not double his wages from his tips and the fund that is raised among the passengers to pay the band.

Stewards have been known to sleep eighteen in a triangular room sixteen feet long, and eleven wide, with two small port-holes for ventilation. They must wait at the table at breakfast, previously having set it, then they wash the dishes. Next they make up the beds, then serve the little lunches on deck which comes about ten o'clock. Next they arrange the table for lunch, wait upon the table, wash the dishes on some lines, and eat their own lunch. In the middle of the afternoon there is another light luncheon which they must serve, then they set the tables for dinner, which they sub sequently serve. After cleaning the remnants out of sight and eating their own meal, they give a concert from eight to ten, after which they are free to spend the night as they please.

In spite of all this hard work and the degrading treatment, which they receive from many passengers, one finds scores of intelligent, well educated youths, on the German lines especially, and one wonders how the lines manage to inveigle them into their service. For the most part they are enterprising boys who are eager to see the world after they have left their gymnasium or universities, and have not the means to travel, so they put to sea as stewards, content to endure the absence and hardships of the life for the glimpses they get of the various ports.

One boy from Berlin whom a passenger interviewed some time ago had run away from home and gone into the service of the Hamburg-American line so that his parents might not know that he was doing menial labor. His family was full of aristocratic tendencies, but too poor to send him on his travels in the proper style. Had they known that he had adopted a life so degrading in their eyes, it would have broken their hearts, he said, but he was accomplishing his purpose. In two years he had served on six different branches of the Hamburg lines and had seen almost every port from the Far East to the Atlantic coast of America.

THE PRINCE OF WALES

The Prince of Wales, formally invested at Carnarvon Castle, was born at White Lodge, Richmond Park, in 1894, his Royal Highness was baptised there some three weeks later as Edward Albert Christian George Andrew Patrick David, thus combining the names of his father, his grandfather, and his great-grandfather with those of the patron saints of England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales. In April, 1907, he passed the qualifying examination for the Royal Navy, and in May in that year he entered Osborne College. He completed his course of instruction there in April, 1909, and in the following month entered Dartmouth College. On the accession of his father, King George, to the throne on May 6, last year, the young Prince succeeded to the Dukedom of Cornwall and to the Scottish titles of Duke of Rothesay, Earl of Carrick, Baron of Renfrew, Lord of the Isles, and Great Steward of Scotland and on June 23rd he was created Prince of Wales and Earl of Chester On the following day, he and his brother, Prince Albert, were confirmed in the private chapel of Windsor Castle by the Archbishop of Canterbury, among the assisting clergy being the Rev. H. D. Wright, by whom the young princes had been prepared for the ceremony. The investiture of the Prince as a Knight of the Garter will be fresh in public recollection, as only recently did [illegible] his [illegible] a midshipman in his Majesty's fleet, with seniority from the day of the Coronation when, in the ancient Abbey of Westminster, he led the line of illustrious men and bearers of honored names and ancient titles who did homage to a newly-crowned Sovereign, and when he swore to be his father's "liege man of life and limb, and of earthly worship." These are the leading events up to the present time in a life which has so far necessarily been one of preparation for the great career which lies before the Prince of Wales as heir to the throne. Of his home life it need only be said that, under the care of a devoted mother, he has grown up a splendid example of the best type of English boy—earnest and enthusiastic in the performance of all the duties devolving upon him.

HOW TO OBSERVE THE AGE OF EGGS

From Farm and Dairy.

There are two simple tests for ascertaining the age of eggs which it is useful for sellers and buyers of eggs to know. The first is by observing the size of the air space, which is very small in a new-laid egg, but increases as the egg grows old. Every day after an egg is laid it loses part of its contents—the liquid part—by evaporation, and as the place of this moisture is taken up by air, the air space at the large end of the egg increases in size. This test is commonly known as "candling," and consists in holding the egg up between the eye and a lighted candle. The air space in a perfectly fresh egg appears about as large as a 25-cent piece, and it increases day by day, till at the end of a month it occupies about one-eighth of the whole egg.

The second test of the age of an egg is made by procuring a solution of salt and water, consisting of half-a-pound of salt dissolved in three and a half pints of water. A new-laid egg will sink to the bottom of this solution, an egg three days old will be of almost equal weight with an equal bulk of the liquid, and will remain suspended in it, an egg four or five days old will rise to the surface, and the older the egg is the greater will be the portion of it floating above the surface of the liquid.

Trent Canal Guide Book.

—Just issued from the Examiner presses, a most comprehensive and artistic reference and guide book of the Trent Canal, containing a host of valuable and hitherto unpublished information concerning the waterway, compiled by Mr. E. S. Clarry. This book gives precisely the information about the Canal that is so much in demand. Containing as it does, charts of the lakes throughout the system from Orillia and Barrie on Lake Simcoe to Healey's Falls on the Trent, with the main steamer channel clearly indicated it will be of invaluable assistance to the owners of power boats. The maps and charts which the guide book contains are alone worth many times the price of the publication, and they will be appreciated by all navigators in the district. The book is beautifully illustrated by artistic photographs of many points of interest along the system and will be much in demand, if only for souvenir purposes. It is now on sale at Trobilcock Bros.' Peterborough Book Store.

HOW TO STOP DRINKING

It was formerly customary for the habitual drinker to take the pledge regularly, sometimes once a year, and sometimes in every fit of remorse that follow his debauches, and then—Break it.

But now it is gradually dawning on the world that pledges do not stop drunkenness. The nervous system of the habitual drinker is diseased and he must have treatment that will cure this condition. If Orring does not benefit after a trial, we refund your money. Can be given secretly.

LOVE—MacMILLAN.

A very quiet but pretty wedding took place this afternoon when Caroline, eldest daughter of Trainmaster and Mrs. MacMillan, Lindsay street, and Dr. C. H. Love, of Brooklyn, N. Y., were united in the holy bonds of matrimony. The pleasing ceremony took place at the home of the bride's parents at three o'clock, only the immediate relatives being present. The house was beautifully decorated with flowers and ferns.

Promptly at three o'clock the bride entered on the arm of her father, the wedding march being played by Miss Love, sister of the groom, the hymenal knot being tied by Rev. James Wallace and Rev. R. L. Love of Brooklyn, assistant pastor of Blymouth church, and father of the groom.

The following guests were present from out of town: Mr. Wm. Piggott, and Mr. and Mrs. James Piggott, of Midland; Mr. and Mrs. J. McDow, of Midland; Mr. and Mrs. Roderick McMillan, 97 Hamilton; Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Green, of Peterborough; Miss Love, of Brooklyn, N.Y.; and Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Pears, of Toronto.

The happy couple left this afternoon on a trip through the Adirondack Mountains.—Lindsay Warder.

GOOD ADVICE FOR CARE OF HORSES

From Farm and Dairy.

Mr. William Mole, Hon. Veterinary Surgeon to the Toronto Humane Society, gives some good advice on the care of horses during the hot weather.

"When the barometer is low, the weather hot and humid, horses suffer from heat," says Mr. Mole. "The animal is languid, perspiration is profuse, the evaporation is confined, and sun strokes or heat strokes are common. The brain symptoms are often alternate with fainting, and death results in a few minutes.

"The first symptoms are: Profuse perspiration. Then the horse begins to pant and the sweat dries up. He begins to stagger, becomes insensible, and goes down, unable to rise.

TREATMENT

"Get the animal into the shade as quickly as possible. Sometimes this cannot be done, but the object is to reduce the animal's temperature by preventing the hot sun's rays pouring on the animal's body. To aid in doing this put sacks of ice on the head and neck, and spray the body with cold water, not directly out of the nozzle of the hose, but by pinching the end of the hose, pointed upwards, so as to let the water down like rain on the animal's body. A watering can is preferable to the hose pipe.

"Give a drink of water every five minutes. At first the animal is unable to drink, owing to insensibility, but wash the mouth a few times until he recovers, and he will drink greedily. Half a pint of whisky in a quart of water may be administered with good effect.

PREVENTION BETTER THAN CURE

"Prevention is better than cure when on the road, so water frequently, especially when the animal is perspiring profusely. When the horse arrives home from work sponge him over with cold water and let him dry. Do not use the hose; do not put him into the stable nor feed him until well cooled off. During this time give all the water he will drink in small quantities every 10 minutes.

"If treated in this way the horse will be ready for work next day, but if he starts tired he will probably collapse before night. When a horse begins to pant, remember that collapse is imminent, consequently he should be at once stopped, driven into the shade, given water, and in a few hours the distress will pass away and you may be able to drive home in safety."

HAS HAD SUCCESS WITH HIS ALFALFA

Mr. J. McKee, of Oxford Co., has had considerable success with his alfalfa. "I have seeded alfalfa with oats in the same way as I would clover," said Mr. McKee to an editor of Farm and Dairy, who called at his farm recently. "I generally sow the oats when seeded with alfalfa a little thinner than I otherwise would. I sow from 20 to 22 pounds of alfalfa seed to the acre. The seed now is better than it used to be as a larger per cent. of it grows.

"I never allow any stock on my alfalfa the first summer and always get a good top for winter. I like to have a growth of about six inches to winter the crop on. For the last three years we have been cutting the first crops for hay. It is then allowed to reduce the animal's temperature by preventing the hot sun's rays pouring on the animal's body. To aid in doing this put sacks of ice on the head and neck, and spray the body with cold water, not directly out of the nozzle of the hose, but by pinching the end of the hose, pointed upwards, so as to let the water down like rain on the animal's body. A watering can is preferable to the hose pipe.

DOORS UNLOCKED

It is again necessary to inform the citizens who are going up the lakes for the summer to fasten their doors before leaving. The police, while calling at the different places, have found numerous dwellings with the doors unlocked, a very careless thing for a person to do. This is an invitation for thieves, and those going away on holidays should take special care to see that all doors and windows are securely fastened before leaving.

Remarkable Character Study Of The King

The governing fact about King George is that he is a sailor. He was trained not for a throne, but for the quarter-deck of a battleship. During those formative years when most boys are playing cricket and conjugating "amo" ashore, he was tossing about the Seven Seas, swarming up the yardarm or stoking the fire, calling at strange ports in far-off lands, learning the rough lessons of the sea, and sharing the wholesome comradeship of plain men. It was a hard school but no King ever had a better. It brought him face to face with realities. He saw the meaning of duty and discipline, learned to respect those who labour with their hands, and entered into the life of the common people.

THE WORKING MAN KING

He is not the first British King to belong to the middle classes. George III. was entirely middle class. But he is the first British King to belong to the working classes by the bond of a common experience. He moves among them not as a stranger from some starry social sphere; but as one to the manner born. He has reefed the sail and swabbed the deck and fed the fire. He has stood at the helm through the tempest and the night. He knows what it is to be grimy and perspiring, to have blistered hands and tired feet. In short, he knows what it is to be a working man. It is his unique merit as a King. When he goes down to Cornwall he does the overalls of the miner, descends the pit and explores the workings of the mine. He visits the race course perfunctorily. It is a part of the tradtional business of his calling, and he is not the man to shirk what he conceives to be a duty. But when he wants a really enjoyable day he spends it among the people, at some place like the General Post Office, or the British Museum, or the Radium Institute, or the Garden Suburb.

There is no affectation in this. It is true that he is anxious to win the goodwill of the people, and that he knows that he has not his father's royal road to their hearts. But his comradeship with the common people is not an elaborate pretence to gain an end. It springs from a genuine fellow-feeling. It is the heritage of his long apprenticeship to the sea. And it carries with it the thirst of the practical artificer to know "how it is done." He has the mechanic's interest in the machinery of things, and one learns without surprise that his presents to his children are largely mechanical toys.

KING OF GREATER BRITAIN

There is another phase of his character which is the product of his upbringing. He is the first King of Greater Britain. His father's orbit was the Continent, and the foci of his orbit were the courts of Europe. High politics, ceremonies, and acts of grace were the things that filled his official life. He knew Paris as intimately as a Cook's guide, talked German better than he talked English, fled to the Continent whenever he wanted amusement. King George is "All-British." We boast of the Empire on which the sun never sets, but until now we have never had a King who had seen the Empire. King Georgeknows it probably as well as any man of his time. It is not a splash of colour on the map, but a reality translated into terms of city and plain, mountain, veldt, and prairie, with the heaving seas between. Here he opened a parliament, there he commanded a ship, everywhere he associates with some vital memory of men and things. This knowledge colours his whole outlook. Just as surely as his father found his interest on the Continent, so King George is fascinated by the vision of the Britain that he has seen growing up overseas. King Edward belonged to the old world; King George to the new.

FATHER AND SON

There is loss as well as gain in this. King Edward was singularly free from the vice of insularity. He was cosmopolitan in the best sense of that unpleasant word. He had no narrow racial prejudices, was equally at home in all company, had that note of human freemasonry which makes one indifferent to whether men are Latin or Teuton, Slav or Celt, Jew or Gentile. Perhaps, indeed, his circle was a little too heterogeneous. Certainly it was more than a little too much confined to wealthy men of a certain race.

In all this King George is the antithesis of his father. At the recent exhibition of Max Beerbohm's caricatures there was one delightful drawing that never failed to evoke a gust of laughter. It pictured a group of four distinguished friends of King Edward of vast wealth and influence, marching in Indian file with doubtful and expectant faces. Underneath was the legend: "Are we so welcome as we were?" There is no doubt about the answer. They are not. King George's tastes are simple and commonplace. His father was Sybaritic; he is almost Spartan. He is constitutionally a man of plain and moderate appetites, and his life at sea emphasized his constitutional tendency. He is neither gourmand or gourmet. A dish of nightingales' tongues would revolt his sense of wholesome diet. The cruel slander about over-indulgence in drink was singularly wide of the mark in regard to one who is physically as well as temperamentally inclined to asceticism. His father, though essentially temperate, belonged to the ancient regime—to the tradition of the "good livers" and the three-bottlemen. King George, in this, as in so many other respects, is more akin to the modern man who drinks Apollinaris and puts soda water in his claret.

AS POLITICIAN

But King Edward's cosmopolitaniam saved him from one peril which beests those whose thoughts dwell exclusively on the Empire. He was never a jingo. The presence of "foreigners" on the earth offered no puzzle to his understanding. They were a fact to be accepted; not a nuisance to be suppressed. He was proud of the Empire with a wholesome pride; but one could not conceive him declaiming with Mr. Kipling, "What do they know of England who only England know?" In a word, he was big enough to be a Little Englander, by which I mean that he knew that if England was sound at the heart it would be sound at the extremities, and that freedom was the talisman of Empire. King George's training threatened to lead him astray here. He was captured by the tawdry imperialism of the nineties. The Jameson raid was a misfortune because "we had gone off at half-cock; next time we would make surer work." We did, at an indefinite cost of blood and treasure. And General Botha, the commander of the foe, is here to-day as the premier of a loyal and free South Africa. The lesson of that great episode, coupled with the utter collapse of imperial an artificial, but a natural growth, springing out of the soil of free institutions; that true imperialism is a spiritual sympathy and not a material bondage. George III. threw away the greatest jewel of the Empire at the bidding of a false and harsh imperialism. It is for George V. to make amends, and under the advice of his ministers to consolidate the splendid fabric of the Empire on the principle of an unfettered confederation of free peoples, held together by common ties of blood, religion, speech, literature, tradition, and love of liberty.

That he is capable of penetrating the crust of officialism and probing to the heart of central truths was shown when on his return from India in 1906 he used these magnificent words in a speech at the Guildhall:

"I cannot help thinking, from all I have heard and seen, that the task of governing India will be made all the easier if, on our part, we infuse into it a wide element of sympathy. I predict that to such sympathy there will be an over-abundant and genuine response."

The speeches of kings are ordinarily so swathed in the cotton wool of conventional phrases that when a plain word like this leaps out it has the effect of a blow. It was a blow that was and is needed. The disease of an arrogant contempt for the Indian has entered into our public school administration of that country. The King saw it, as everybody with open eyes sees it, and he said so in unmistakable words. And the effect was instantaneous. Yesterday I was told by a distinguished Indian member of the Viceroy's council who is now in London, that as the result of that speech a marked and happy change had come over the attitude of the Anglo-Indian towards the Indian. So powerful still is the plain truth spoken from a high place.

PLAIN-SPOKEN

The King has, indeed, the frankness of the sailor much more than the restraint of the monarch. His father was all diplomacy. People rarely spoke of him without using the word "tact"—that last refuge of verbal bankruptcy. Let us rejoice that it has now been decently buried. No one accuses King George of "tact." Like Mr. Bigiow's candidate, he is naturally a plain-spoken kind o' creetur

That blurts right out wut's in his head.

One might even continue the parallel further and say that of he's one pecoolar feetur,

It is a nose that wunt be led.

For he is as firm in his opinions as he is emphatic in their expression. His father was little burdened with political prejudices. His temperament was that of the diplomatist rather than that of the politician. He was the smoother of differences and sought to create an atmosphere in which all disagreements were reconciled and black and white were merged in grey. King George has a simpler, less equivocal mind. He sees black and white in sharp contrast, and it is not easy for him to conceal his views under the mask of neutrality. He feels keenly and wears a mask with difficulty. But like most frank natures he is responsive to eager and forceful personalities, and Mr. Chamberlain and Lloyd-George have in turn made a deep impression upon him. He has the love of the direct mind for the man who is forging straight ahead for a definite port. He is disposed to think that the port must be right if the captain is driving there confidently under a full head of steam.

There is, in short, no subtlety or cunning in his intellectual composition. "His thoughts lie clear as pebbles in a brook." It is the mind of the seaman whose problems are the problems of facts and not of psychology or casuistry or compromise. And his tastes and pleasures are the seaman's too. He loves his home with an antiquated passion that would fill Mr. Bernard Shaw's soul with loathing. Courts are not commonly the scene of happy domesticities. Family life, which needs fresh air and freedom, struggles vainly in that hothouse atmosphere of ceremonies, formalities, and official friendships, where intrigues and back-stair influences flourish luxuriantly. But King George in this matter, as in so many others, including personal appearance, strongly resembles his cousin, the Tsar of Russia. He has been singularly happy in his marriage.

THE QUEEN

The Queen, like her husband, has the middle-class seriousness and sense of duty. She is almost the only woman in society who cannot be called "a society woman." Her manner is entirely free from the assertiveness which is the note of modern breeding. She speaks little without persiflage, irony or any of the qualities most cultivated in drawing-rooms. The mother who, hearing the King speak, regretted that she had sent her daughter to an expensive boarding school to catch the authentic note of the aristocracy when, after all, the King himself spoke "just like an ordinary man," would have suffered a double measure of penitence if she had heard the quiet, unaffected speech of the Queen. She was trained in an old tradition of womanhood and has the air and interests of the mid-Victorian time rather than those of to-day. When with Dean Wakefield I had the duty of showing her round the Sweating Exhibition held by the Daily News, at the Queen's Hall some years ago, I was impressed by the quiet thoroughness of her inquiry. She had obviously not come to see or to make a show, but to learn a lesson, and I bear grateful witness to her plain sincerity and her avoidance of those futile affectations of sympathy which are at once so banal and so popular. She left a clear impression of a real woman with a grave bearing and no false sentiment. When she pats an orphan on the head or gives sixpence to a beggar I do not think she would want half a column of laudation in the newspapers to commemorate the fact that she shares the common sympathies of humanity.

The influence of her steady, prosaic personality upon the King has been eminently good, and the happiness of their home life is a commonplace. Perhaps the court is less gay than it used to be, for the Queen prefers knitting to ceremony, and the King likes a book better than bridge, and his children better than either. When one of the boys was asked whether he loved his mother or father the more he replied, "Well, dada spoils me most." But what the court has lost in gaiety it has gained in many more substantial ways, not least in the matter of public respect. It was the home life of George III. which made him popular in spite of his mischievous policy, and a "happy fireside clime for weans and wife" is not the least of the assets of George V. in his account with his people.

KING GEORGE AND THE DRAGON

It is not surprising that he felt with such bitterness the slander on George. His enthusiasm for the overthrow and with the teaching of his father, has not been lost on King Seas dominions remains; but it is The story was a wicked invention, that as a youth he had contracted a the daughter of an Admiral Seymour. Tryon hadn't a daughter she became was a daughter of Admiral Tryon, and when it was discovered that Admiral but that did not prevent it being widely believed. The backwoods and the bush knew all about it, and the American papers could even show you the "marriage lines." Everywhere you met people who knew the lady, or had an aunt who knew her aunt, or had lunched with someone who lived in the same street and saw her pass every day with a pale face and a poodle. The slander was denied, but what of that? Virtue can be soiled with a breath; but scandal is a tougher growth. Like the camomile, the more it is trodden on the better it grows. King Edward would have taken it all in the day's work. Scandal ran off him like water off a duck's back. "They say! What say they? Let them say!" He would have lit another cigar, cocked his hat at a sporting angle, and passed on his way beaming. He took the comedy view of life. King George is a man of different mettle—serious in mind and combative in spirit, one who does not take things lying down. He leapt at the throat of the slander. Defiant of advice and of the headshakings of the public he dragged the thing into court, and like all lies it fell dead in the light. There was never a more complete exposure, and the incident gave the public the first real glimpse of the man. It liked the glimpse. And those who had believed or half-believed the tale felt ashamed of their credulity. The dragon will give King George a wide berth in future.

HIS TASTES

Aesthetically, as in all else, he belongs to the common people. Apart from shooting in which he excels, he has few sporting passions. Games of chance make no appeal to him, and his hobby of stamp collecting is eminently middle-class. Music and drama touch him only on the recreative side, and he prefers them both in old-fashioned and obvious forms. The modern problem play leaves him cold and Wagner bores him. He is not what Johnson would call "a clubable man," and his friendships are few, but firm. It is said that when he was asked to be president of a new service club in contemplation some years ago, he replied, "Oh, yes, but don't you think the Army and Navy could get on without another club?" And the question, with its blunt rebuke, struck the idea dead.

A plain, direct, straight speaking man, taking his office seriously, hating display and flummery, governed by a strong sense of duty, thoroughly obedient to the constitutional tradition of the monarchy, King George V. enters on his reign with the prospect of a long and happy association with his people. The Vicar of Wakefield tells us that he "chose his wife, as she did her wedding gown, not for a fine glossy surface, but for such qualities as wear well." We may say the same of our King. The surface is unpretentious; but the material is made for wear.—A.G.G.

HOW TO OBTAIN A GOOD COLOR

A Treatment to Restore the Blood Supply That Has Been Most Successful.

There is only this to tell people who are pale, weak and bloodless. You are pale and weak because you haven't enough blood and you won't be better until your blood supply is increased. You should not lose any time in increasing your blood supply, for people who neglect anaemia, often slip into a deadly decline. When you have increased your blood supply you can reasonably expect to have a good colour, to have lost that tired, breathless feeling, to have a good appetite and get good nourishment from your food. Now the only quick and always effective way to get a supply of new, rich, red blood is to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Every dose helps to make new blood, and this new blood coursing through the veins, brings health and strength to every organ and every part of the body, making weak, ailing people, bright, active and strong. This has been proved in thousands of cases of which the case of Mrs. George Clark, Abbottsford, B. C., is a fair sample. Mrs. Clark says: "After spending two years and six months in a hospital training for a nurse, I began to fail in health, was very pale and the least exertion would leave me out of breath. After graduating I came to British Columbia to take up my profession as a private nurse. The first case I took I found I was not able to go on with my work. Doctors' tonics failed me and acting on my own judgment I purchased a supply of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Before I had finished them I was really surprised at the result. The colour came back to my face, I gained in strength and by the time I had used nine boxes I was back at my work as a nurse. I have since married, but still have my friendly feeling for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

"ADVENTURE"

By JACK LONDON

He was perturbedly harked back to her femininenes. She could play the piano far better than his sisters at home and with far finer appreciation.— the piano that poor Hughie had so heroically laboured over to keep in condition. And when she strummed the guitar and sang liquid velvety Hawaiian hulas, he sat entranced. Then she was all woman, and the magic of sex kidnapped the irritations of the day and made him forget the big revolver, the Baden-Powell, and all the rest. But what right, the next thought in his brain would whisper, had such a girl to swagger around like a man and exult that adventure was not dead? Women that adventured were adventuresses, and the connotation was not nice. Besides, he was not enamoured of adventure. Not since he was a boy had it appealed to him—though it would have driven him hard to explain what had brought him from England to the Solomons if it had not been adventure.

Sheldon certainly was not happy. The unconventional state of affairs was too much for his conservative disposition and training. Berande, inhabited by one lone white man, was no place for Joan Lackland. Yet h cracked his brain for a way out, and even talked it over with her. In the first place, the steamer from Australia was not due for three weeks

"One thing is evident you don't want me here," she said. "I'll map the whale-boat to-morrow and go over to Tulagi."

"But as I told you before, that is impossible," he cried. "There is no one there. The Resident Commissioner is away in Australia. There is only one white man, a third assistant under strapper and ex-sailor—a common sailor. He is in charge of the government of the Solomons, to say nothing of a hundred or so niggers—prisoners. Besides, he is such a fool that he would fine you five pounds for not having entered at Tulagi, which is the port of entry, you know. He is not a nice man, and I repeat, it is impossible."

"There is Guvutu," she suggested.

He shook his head.

"There's nothing there but fever, and five white men who are drinking themselves to death. I couldn't permit it."

"Oh, thank you," she said, quietly. 'I guess I'll start to-day.—Viaburi! You go along Noah, speak 'm come along me."

Noa Noah was her head sailor, who had been boatswain of the Miele.

"Where are you going?" Sheldon asked in surprise. "Viaburi! You stop."

"To Guvutu—immediately," was her reply.

"But I won't permit it."

"That is why I am going. You said it once before, and it issomething I cannot brook."

"What?" He was bewildered by her sudden anger. "If I have offended in any way—"

"Viaburi, you fetch 'm one fella Noa Noah along me," she commanded.

"Viaburi! You no stop I break 'm head belong you. And now, Miss Lackland, I insist; you must explain. What have I said or done to merit this?"

"You have presumed, you have dared—"

She choked and swallowed, and could not go on.

Sheldon looked the picture of despair.

"I confess my head is going around with it all," he said. "If you could only be explicit."

"As explicit as you were when you told me that you would not permit me to go to Guvutu?"

"But whats' wrong with that?"

"But you have no right—no man has the right—to tell me what he will permit or not permit. I'm too old to have a guardian, nor did I sail all the way to the Solomons to find one."

"A gentleman is every woman's guardian."

"Well, I'm not every woman — that's all. Will you kindly allow me to send your boy for Noa Noah? I wish him to launch the whale-boat. Or I shall go myself for him!"

Both were now on their feet, she with flushed cheeks and angry eyes, he, puzzled, vexed, and alarmed. The black boy stood like a statue—a plum black statue — taking no interest in the transactions of these incomprehensible whites, but dreaming with calm eyes of a certain bush village high on the jungle slopes of Malaita, with blue smoke curling up from the grass houses against the gray background of an oncomnig mountain squall.

"But you won't do anything so foolish—" he began.

"There you go again," she cried.

"I didn't mean it that way, and you know I didn't." He was speaking slowly and gravely. "And that other thing, that not permitting—it is only a manner of speaking. Of course I am not your guardian. You know you can go to Guvutu if you want to" — "or to the devil," he was almost tempted to add. "Only, I should deeply regret it, that is all. And I am very sorry that I should have said anything that hurt you. Remember, I am an Englishman."

Joan smiled and sat down again.

"Perhaps I have been hasty," she admitted. "You see, I am intolerant of restraint. If you only knew how I have been compelled to fight for my freedom. It is a sore point with me, this being told what I am to do or not do by you self-constituted lords of creation. Viaburi! You stop Noah. And now, Mr. Sheldon, what am I to do? You don't want me here, and there doesn't seem to be any place for me to go."

"That is unfair. Your being wrecked here has been a godsend to me. I was very lonely and very sick. I really am not certain whether or not I should have pulled through had you not happened along. But that is not the point. Personally, purely selfishly personally, I should be sorry to see you go. But I am not considering myself. I am considering you. It—it is hardly the proper thing, you know. If I were married—if there were some women of your own race here,—but as it is—"

She threw up her hands in mock despair.

"I cannot follow you," she said. "In one breath you tell me I must go and in the next breath you tell me there is no place to go and that you will not permit me to go. What is a poor girl to do?"

"That's the trouble," he said, helplessly.

"And the situation annoys you."

"Only for your sake."

"Then let me save your feelings by telling you that it does not annoy me at all—except fo. the row you are making about it. I never allow what can't be changed to annoy me. There is no use in fighting the inevitable. Here is the situation. You are here. I am here. I can't go elsewhere, by your own count. You certainly can't go elsewhere and leave me here alone with a whole plantation and two hundred woolly cannibals on my hands. Therefore, you stay, and I stay. It is very simple. Also, it is adventure. And, furthermore, you needn't worry for yourself. I am not matrimonially inclined. I came to the Solomons for a plantation, not a husband."

Sheldon flushed, but remained silent.

"I know what you are thinking," she laughed gayly. "That if I were a man, you'd wring my neck for me. And I deserve it, too. I'm so sorry. I ought not to keep on hurting your feelings."

"I'm afraid I rather invite it," he said, relieved by the signs of the tempest subsiding.

"I have it," she announced. "Lend me a gang of your boys for to-day. I'll build a grass house for myself over in the far corner of the compound—on piles, of course. I can move in to-night. I'll be comfortable and safe. The Tahitians can keep an anchor watch just as aboard ship. And then I'll study cocoanut planting. In return, I'll run the kitchen end of your household and give you some decent food to eat. And finally I won't listen to any of your protests. I know all that you are going to say and offer—your giving the bungalow up to me and building a grass house for yourself. And I won't have it. You may as well consider everything settled. On the other hand, if you don't agree, I will go across the rivet, beyond your jurisdiction, and build a village for myself and my sailors, whom I shall send in the whaleboat to Guvutu for provisions. And now I want you to teach me billiards."

CHAPTER VII.

A Hard-Bitten Gang.

Joan took hold of the household with no uncertain grip, revolutionizing things till Sheldon hardly recognized the place. For the first time the bungalow was clean and orderly. No longer the house-boys loafed and did as little as they could; while the cook complained that "head belong him yalk about too much" from the strenuous course in cookery which she put him through. Nor did Sheldon escape being roundly lectured for his laziness in eating nothing but tinned provisions. She called him a muddler and a slouch, and other invidious names, for his slackness and his disregard of healthful food.

She sent her whale-boat down the coast twenty miles for limes and oranges, and wanted to know scathingly why said fruits had not long since been planted at Berande, while he was beneath contempt because there was no kitchen garden. Mummy apples, which he had regarded as weeds under her guidance, appeared as appetizing breakfast fruit, and, at dinner, were metamorphosed into puddings, that elicited his unqualified admiration. Bananas, foraged from the bush, were served, cooked and raw, a dozen different ways, each one of which he declared was better than any other. She or her sailor dynamited fish daily, while the Balesuna natives were paid tobacco for bringing in oysters from the mangrove swamps. Her achievements with cocoanuts were a revelation. She taught the cook how to make yeast from the milk, that, in turn, raised light and airy bread. From the tip-top heart of the tree she concocted a delicious salad. From the milk and the meat of the nut she made various sauces and dressings, sweet and sour, that were served, according to preparation, with dishes that ranged from fish to pudding. She taught Sheldon the superiority of cocoanut cream over condensed cream, for use in coffee. From the old and sprouting nuts she took the solid, spongy centres and turned them into salads. Her forte seemed to be salads, and she astonished him with the deliciousness of a salad made from young bamboo shoots. Wild tomatoes, which had gone to seed or been remorselessly hoed out from the beginning of Berande, were foraged for salads, soups, and sauces. The chickens, which had always gone into the bush and hidden their eggs, were given laying-bins, and Joan went out herself to shoot wild duck and wild pigeons for the table.

"Not that I like to do this sort of work," she explained, in reference to the cookery, "but because I can't get away from Dad's training."

Among other things, she burned the pestilential hospital, quarrelled with Sheldon over the deed, and, in anger set her own men to work building a new, and what she called, a decent hospital. She robbed the windows of their lawn and muslin curtains, replacing them with gaudy calico from the trade store and made herself several gowns. When she wrote out a list of goods and clothing for herself, to be sent down to Sydney by the first steamer, Sheldon wondered how long she had made up her mind to stay.

She was certainly unlike any woman he had ever known or dreamed of. So far as he was concerned, she was not a woman at all. She neither languished nor blandished. No feminine lures were wasted on him. He might have been her brother, or she his brother, for all sex had to do with the strange situation. Any mere polite gallantry on his part was ignored or snubbed, and he had very early give up offering his hand to her in getting into a boat or climbing over a log; and he had to acknowledge to himself that she was eminently fitted to take care of herself. Despite his warnings about crocodiles and sharks, she persisted in swimming in deep water off the beach —nor could he persuade her, when she was in the boat, to let one of the sailors throw the dynamite when shooting fish. She argued that she was at least a little bit more intelligent than they, and that, therefore, there was less liability of an accident if she did the shooting. She was to him, the most masculine and at the same time the most feminine woman he had ever met.

Baby Eczema For Three Years

Three Doctors and Scores of Treatments Failed

The Dreadful Itching Was Stopped and the Sores Healed by

Dr. Chase's Ointment

Here is an illustration of the wonderful control which Dr. Chase's Ointment has over torturing, itching eczema. By its soothing influence it stops the itching, and it heals the sores as if by magic.

Mrs. W m.Miller, St. Catharines, Ont., writes:—"My daughter Mary, when six months old, contracted eczema, and for three years the disease baffled all treatment. Her case was one of the worst that had ever come under my notice, and she apparently suffered what no pen could ever describe. I had three different doctors attend her, all to no purpose whatever, and all kinds of balms, soaps and lotions were tried, with no results.

"Finally I decided to try Dr. Chase's Ointment, and to my surprise she immediately began to improve, and was completely cured of that long-standing disease. That was four years ago, when we lived at Cornwall, Ont., and as not a symptom has shown itself since, the cure must be permanent. With a grateful heart I give this testimony to the great value of Dr. Chase's Ointment."

In scores of ways Dr. Chase's Ointment is useful in every home to allay skin irritations and heal and cure sores, wounds and ulcers. 60 cents a box at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

AFTER 7 YEARS SUFFERING

I Was Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Waurika, Okla.—"I had female troubles for seven years, was all run down, and so nervous I could not do anything. The doctors treated me for different things but did me no good. I got so bad that I could not sleep day or night. While in this condition I read of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and began its use and wrote to Mrs. Pinkham for advice. In a short time I had gained my average weight and am now strong and well."—Mrs. SALLIE STEVENS, R. F. D. No. 3, Box 31, Waurika, Okla.

Another Grateful Woman

London, Ont.—I feel as if I could not tell others enough about the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I was so weak and tired that I could not rest nights. A friend recommended your Compound and I soon gained health and strength and could not wish to sleep better. I know other women who have taken it for the same purpose and they join me in praising it.—MRS. WM. A. BUFFY, 905 Dame St., London, Ont.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has surely cured many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, and nervous prostration.

YOU CAN DEFY HEADACHE!

Yes you can, with a box of ZUTOO Tablets in your pocket or home.

Taken when you feel a headache coming on, one little tablet will ward it off—nip it in the bud. Taken later it will cure the headache in twenty minutes.

Why then continue to suffer when a box of ZUTOO will make you headache proof. You would be suprised to know how many people, who never before used a headache remedy, are now using ZUTOO Tablets. Why not you?

WHALING OFF NEW ZEALAND

Graphic Description of the Work of the Whalers with Their Deadly Harpoons

At the cry of "There she blows!" out go the steam launches to replace the nets, three in number, that suffice to close the narrow channel. These, unanchored, are allowed to float loose, the ends of each slightly overlapping. Kept taut by their own weight, they hang stretched on the float line, an invisible curtain of wire mesh barring the water run.

No human fastening, says the Wide World, has yet been invented that would stop the rush of a charging whale. The principal of the detached floating net is not to stop, but so to hamper the monster with a gossamer of wire rope that he falls an easy prey to the hunters. For this reason also the nets are so placed that on striking an entangled whale may race seaward or sound downward, carrying the enveloping net, without fear of disturbing the remaining two.

When the nets are in position the launches and attendant whaleboats, with their crews, take up their stations at some distance to watch for an unheaval and dancing floating line that marks the striking of a whale.

Often a whale's presence is first indicated by great masses of broken barnacles and torn sea-grass that come floating upward to the surface as the whale, floundering among the rocks of the sea-floor, eases himself with delighted scratchings in the depths.

In the boats all is tense expectancy and ordered preparation. Harpoon guns are loaded and made ready, lines are carefully flaked down in the tube, lances are looked to, and everyone is on the qui vive. Suddenly a sort of shudder runs through the sea. There are tossing billows and wild commotion made by the bobbing float lines. "Hurrah! she's struck!" is the cry.

Away go the boats, each racing to be the first fast to the struggling fish and so earn the bonus that rewards the winning crew. A mighty, grey black head, entangled in a clinging web of wire, rears from out the water. Up, up, it goes, till a huge bulk of body towers a good fifty feet in the air, its side fins thrashing wildly in a smother of foam. It curves in an arch, and then, like an arrow, down go whale and net together for the sound.

Not for long though. The upward drag of bunched net floats, and its necessity for breath brings the animal quickly to the surface—a spouting, snorting, wallowing mass; mad with rage, wild with terror of the unknown clinging horror that envelops it.

Bang! bang! go the guns from each boat in quick succession. Both irons are home and well placed. A wild quiver of flukes and fins, and the whale either sounds again or races along the surface, towing the boats after it at express speed. But the net holds fast, and at each new effort for freedom the victim becomes more helplessly wound up than before.

Soon exhausted with futile struggling, the whale comes to rest, and there is a momentary cessation of the mad fight, as the leviathan pauses for breath. Huge panting air gasps are plainly audible at a distance of half a mile.

The crews are quick to seize the opportunity. With the lancemen ready in the bow the boats sweep in, one on either side. "Steady with the lance." "Now!" Eight-foot steel blades drive deep for the heart behind the pectoral fins.

A shiver, a hissing spout of water and blood, a wallow and roll of the huge wire-tangled carcass, flashes of red and white foam in the sunlight, and the black heave of a twenty-foot fin that for one dread instant, scimitar-shaped, a falling wall of bone and sinew, hangs over the boat and its occupants. The boat's crew back out like lightning, just in time. Down crashes the mighty flail, missing its blow by a bare foot. There is a roar and clap of many thunders, and jetting spurts of spray leap high into the blue.

The boats, backed clear, still hang to the lines, the crews watching events and waiting the end. It may be that the dying whale will sound again or race in a final effort. But the lances have got home. A few more wallows of despair, the great tail flukes thrash the water with lessening force, and presently the huge body, inert, lifeless, lies quietly on the surface. Hawsers are made fast to the dead whale, and while the boats return to their stations to watch the remaining nets, it is towed by the launch to the jetty ashore.

SHE MOURNS HER DOG

Its Body Was Embalmed and Lies in a Glass Vault

Polaire, the little vaudeville actress, featured as the ugliest woman in the world, is still disconsolate at the loss of her pet dog, that died a few weeks ago. She has had him embalmed and he lies in a little glass vault in her garden.

The little dog was Polaire's only real friend, and she adored the tiny thing. It never left her once during the twelve years of its life. She used to take it everywhere—to America, to Berlin, to England, and to the Villa Claudine, where she spends her holidays.

SLIPPED ON A GLACIER

A sixteen-year-old boy, named Walter Allant, living in London, had a narrow escape from death while descending the Gorner glacier from Gornergrat, accompanied by his father. He slipped on the snow, fell 150 feet into a crevasse, and was only rescued after great difficulty. A party of guides carried him to Zermatt, where it was found that his only injuries consisted of cuts on the head.

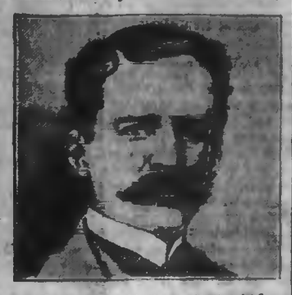
"FRUIT-A-TIVES" WILL CURE RHEUMATISM

McMillan's Corner, Ont., Sept. 30th, 1910.
"Your remedy, "Fruit-a-tives" is a perfect panacea for Rheumatism. For years, I suffered distressing pain from Sciatic Rheumatism, being laid up several times a year, and not being able to work at anything. I went to different doctors who told me there was no use doing anything, it would pass away.
Fortunately, about two years ago, I got "Fruit-a-tives" and they cured me.
"Since then, I take them occasionally and keep free from pain. I am satisfied that "Fruit-a-tives" cured me of Rheumatism and they will cure anyone who takes them". JOHN B. McDONALD.



"Fruit-a-tives" is the greatest cure for Rheumatism, Sciatica and Lumbago in the world.
"Fruit-a-tives" cures, because like fruit juices it purifies the blood—regulates kidneys, bowels and skin—and thus keeps the whole system free of uric acid. Take "Fruit-a-tives" and you will find instant relief and a prompt cure.

THE UNKNOWN MAN

BY FREDERICK IRVING ANDERSON

He sat in a chair in the dark, fully dressed, all through the night, turning over and over in his mind the event which had at length come to pass. He was not superstitious. There was nothing supernatural about life: he had proved that with a simple twist of the wrist. There was nothing supernatural about death: else it should be haunting him now. But he was selfish. Revenge had belonged to him, and he would enjoy it. Retribution had belonged to him, and he had exacted it. The slate was clean. What claim had the law on him?

Dawn filtered through the slanting vanes of the Venetian blinds, cold, chilly dawn, and found him heavy-headed.

First came the milkman with rattling wagon and clinking bottles. He watched him through the blinds. A policeman was standing at the gate, swinging his club. Druid watched him—at first shocked; then, with his faculties reasoned, with complacence. Surely human ingenuity could not so readily have unravelled the knot of circumstance with which he had surrounded his work? Yet, a policeman stood there—at his gate.

Ten minutes passed. A vague dread took hold of the watcher. He shivered. Why should he shiver, he asked himself? Was he so weak, then, so ill prepared, that so trivial an incident, a mere suggestion, should upset his equilibrium?

He drew himself together with an effort. But the thought would not down. He asked himself why. This was why. Men of the law henceforth were his enemies. There was something cold and hard in this fact, that forced it home on his senses. He had not thought of it before, that is, not in the same way. This man at his gate was his enemy. Every minion of the law was his enemy. They would not know it when they passed him in the street. But he himself would.

The policeman moved on, unconscious of the eyes that watched him through the shutters.

The newsboy came soon. He was no sooner out of sight than Druid opened the door boldly and picked up his bundle of morning papers. Eagerly he searched them. No, there was nothing there about him; except, scattered here and there the words crime, murder, justice, fugitive prison—all shockingly intense terms this morning. But there was nothing about him. Why should there have been? It was only a few hours since he had washed his hands of this affair. Still, newspapers are such wonderful organizations. They might have had at least a line in all these columns of jumble.

But wait! His fingers tingled. Here in a remote corner, under an advertisement, was a paragraph, in fine type. It was about an Unknown Man.

Is there anything so various as the Unknown Man? He is here, there, everywhere, the same day, the same hour. And usually dead. This one was. A police sergeant had reported him as washed up on the tide at the inlet, at one in the morning. Three lines in fine type. What a slender tomb!

Druid heard the housemaid moving about the kitchen. He hurriedly undressed himself and crept into bed. It was Sunday morning and he would not be disturbed until late.

He awoke at ten, surprised to find that he had been asleep. He breakfasted in his dressing-gown, a luxury he allowed himself on the first day of the week, and read his papers before taking his tub.

Again he searched the columns. But there was nothing; only the chance three lines. He smiled grimly. All of his ingenious plotting of months, all of the infinite exertion of brain, to rob his victim first of identity, then of life, was summed up here in three lines of microscopic type!

There was just the suggestion of the smug about his smile, as he stepped out into the cold winter drizzle at dusk and walked to his club, where he would dine.

Duke Bryson was late for dinner. There was nothing unusual in this, Duke being a pillar of the press, a slave of the public pulse. So Druid gave himself over to his vice, Gaboriau, and waited, not impatiently. He and Duke had taken Sunday dinner together ever since they had come on each other again, after several years lost beyond boyhood. Finally Duke came, two hours late, and they sat down in their own cosy corner.

"These are hard days for me," said Duke, by way of explaining his tardiness. "You know the big advertisers drop out after the holidays and leave an awful hole to be filled with news.

"Do you know," went on the editor smiling whimsically as he set down his glass, "if I were ever to plot a crime, if I ever schemed justifiable murder—and naturally I would think it justifiable if I contemplated it—I would be very particular about the season of the year."

"That sounds interesting," said Druid. He smiled in spite of himself, though somewhat startled by the line the conversation had taken.

"Yes," went on Duke. "I would be very particular about the calendar. Now, for instance, this is the first week in January. I should say—and I know what I am talking about—that the average criminal has less chance of getting away with the goods the first week after Christmas and the first week after New Year than during any other time in the year. If I were plotting to put a troublesome body out of my path, I would pick out the first three weeks in December, among several propitious periods in the calendar. People have more money to spend just before the holidays.

"You might get up an Almanac of Crime," suggested Druid, "like they have for the farmer, giving the changes of the moon, and heart-to-heart talks to criminals on what to sow and when to reap."

"I could do it," laughed Bryson. "Do you happen to know, for instance, that there four times as many bank robberies, defalcations I mean, in the month of April as in any month in the year? But I am talking about murder. It is a good deal a question of space, and news to fill the space, when you come to avenging grisly crimes. Just before Christmas everybody has money. They save it to spend it at that time. That's why the big department stores angle for the surplus cash of the beloved public. They advertise. They hog every page in sight. We have to compress the news."

"Take our paper, for instance," went on Bryson. "During the month of December the city news department, of which I have the onerous honour of being the director, draws about eighteen columns out of the wreck, for all its regular local news.

"Now, I can't do much in the way of dishing up horrors during those three weeks when the Christmas spirit has got hold of everybody. I haven't room enough to turn around. And, take it from me, when the city editor hasn't room to turn around, the police take a nap. And the public are a good deal like the police. They decide that the newspaper doesn't think much of this murder, so they don't take any interest in it. If the newspapers are printing scare-heads and getting out a dozen extra editions in an afternoon, the detective bureau wakes up and takes off its coat. You can't blame them. You would probably do the same thing if you were a policeman. And when the police take only half an interest in a suspicious case, the criminal has twice as good a chance of getting away, hasn't he?"

"Yes," said Druid. "I never thought of it in that light before. It opens up an interesting question. Is there any more crime in January than in December?"

"No," said Bryson. "If you would examine the police blotters, you would find it runs about the same. But, on the other hand, if you read the newspapers, and didn't go beyond them, you couldn't help being struck by the slim crime showing just before Christmas. There is just as much crime, though. The only difference is that we don't spend so much time running it down, because if we did, we wouldn't have space to print it."

"Then, to come down to bed-rock," laughed Druid, "public morals, as the newspaper readers see it, depend on how much money the public is anxious to spend at any given time."

"It amounts to about that," said Bryson. "And the public are not half so indignant over crime if we smother it in a few inches of type as when we expand it by the yard."

Druid smiled and played with his glass.

"Yes," he said, "I believe that is true. "We don't froth at the mouth unless you tell us to, on the first page, in big type. "But," he added, as he adjusted the red shade of the electric candle by his plate, "how about the dull old saw you are so fond of quoting on your editorial page—'Murder will out'?"

"Bosh!" snapped the city editor. This was his pet aversion, this old saw hung on the peg of an epigram.

"How big a percentage of murderers are ever brought to justice?" he cried, leaning over the table, and shaking his finger at his friend. "I don't know," he went on, without waiting for an answer. "But I can give a pretty good guess. Just about as big a percentage as there are smugglers brought to book. For every smuggler who is caught, a hundred slip through with the goods. It's about the same with murder. Have you ever noticed," he asked, "have you ever by chance noticed the ubiquitous nature of our old friend, the Unknown Man?"

Druid stooped over to turn his bottle of wine in the ice, before he answered this question. "No," he said, casually. "I can't say that I have."

"He is a weird cuss," said Bryson. "He's all over town the same day. On the beach at Coney Island, on a bench in the park, bobbing in the wash of a ferryboat. The Morgue is full of him. I spike him by the dozen every day."

"Spike him?"

"Yes, kill him," said the newspaper man, laughing. "When we throw out a piece of news that is commonplace or cheap, we say we 'spike' it, we 'kill' it. We keep a spindle on our desks for the purpose of impaling the trash. Sometimes we call it the 'dead hook.' We don't dare throw the stuff away until the day is done, because there is never any telling what later developments might arise to give importance to the smallest trifle.

"So we impale these poor devils by the dozen," went on Bryson. "In a big town like New York I suppose they will average a dozen a day. Usually they come to us as a police-blotter record. Three lines or so." "How many of them," cried the city editor, pleased in having at length drawn his companion's interest, "do

BRITISH NAVY AND HYDROGRAPHY WORK

Naval Correspondent Writes of the Good That Is Being Done.

TO MAKE SEAS SAFE

No Other Country Has a Department That Is Conducted on so Large a Scale.

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

THE annual report of the Hydrographer of the British navy for 1910, which has just been issued, calls to mind afresh the good work which is being continually carried on by this department of the Admiralty in the interests of the safe navigation of the ocean highways of the world. In no other country is there a hydrographic department on so large a scale as that of Great Britain. All maritime Powers, of course, must have some organisation for marine surveying and for the proper charting of their coasts and harbors if these are to be navigated in safety, but it is very seldom that such work is carried on except in waters strictly adjacent to the important seaports.

The operations of the British surveying service, on the other hand, are worldwide, and the late report shows that, in addition to the five vessels employed in the home waters survey, the Egeria was surveying in British Columbia, the Fantome in Australian waters, the Merlin off the coast of Borneo, the Mutine on the west, south and southeast coasts of Africa, the Seaflark and Waterwitch in the Straits Settlements and Solomon Island and the Ellinor in Newfoundland waters. Altogether 581 miles of coastline was charted and an area of no less than 14,631 square miles sounded over during last year.

SOME ACCIDENTS.

Of the work of the surveying branch in general not much is known outside the ranks of those engaged in it, but unostentatiously is it carried on. Under ordinary conditions it might be said that the better the work is done the less heard about it. But in the sea profession it is the extraordinary things that have frequently to be reckoned with, and however efficient the surveying service may be, its work cannot entirely prevent mishaps occurring to ships by stranding through the charts by which they were being navigated being defective or not up to date. The survey of the coasts, indeed, is never completed. Banks shift and grow, the ocean insect is at work and new routes which shorten distances and cut corners are followed. Then, in addition to the constant changes of the sea bottom, every year ships are built of deeper draught and greater length than those which preceded them, and which required less water to move about in.

An illustration of this was afforded during the home fleet's visit to Ferrol, in February last, when three ships of the dreadnought class, drawing twenty-seven feet of water, grazed a rock in entering the harbor and slightly damaged their bottoms. It turned out that Ferrol Harbor had not been surveyed by the Spanish government since 1868, and the existing charts were made when any rocks more than twenty-eight feet below low water mark were disregarded. The obstruction upon which the British vessels went aground was not indicated upon them at all, being from thirty to thirty-two feet below low water mark.

There is one paragraph in the annual reports of the Hydrographer of the navy that must have particular interest for seamen—that in which is recorded the recently discovered perils. In 1910 as many as 378 rocks and shoals dangerous to navigation were reported and in the previous year no less than 497. The significance of these figures is not lessened by the explanatory note that in 1910 there were 86 and in the previous year 14 rocks and shoals discovered by vessels striking on them.

WORK OF 1910.

Turning to the actual surveying work carried out in 1910, it is evident that the £70,000 voted for the purpose was money well spent, not only from the naval point of view, but from that of the merchant service as well. Of the ships employed in home waters, the Triton was mainly occupied in surveying the Thames estuary, and it will interest seamen making the port of London to know that in one part, between Shingles Patch and the Long Sands, considerable shoaling was found to have taken place, the least depth obtained being four feet, as against nine feet in 1894 and thirty feet in 1882. A new channel is now buoyed to the southward of the Shingles Patch.

As to the publications of the department, it is worthy of note that the number of charts printed during the last three years is no less than 1,631,752. More than half a million charts were produced in 1910 alone.

It has been natural, of course, for all interested in recent political action to refer to the charts and hydrographic notes in connection with the port of Agadir. There is on the chart published by the British Hydrographer a plan of this place supplied by the French government, from which it is evident that although there is deep water in the roadstead and protection from northwesterly winds, the port is entirely open to the west to the gales that blow from the Atlantic in the winter, which must set up a considerable surf on the beach and probably oblige all the larger vessels to put to sea. The roadstead of Agadir, indeed, does not appear to possess any of the elements which would fit it for use as a permanent coaling station or base for the use of men of war. It is true that a breakwater might be constructed to enclose a portion of the harbor, but it would have to be of great length and while it is doubtful whether the roadstead into a all seasons of the deed, on the west natural harbor.

FLINDERS PETRIE'S NEW EXCAVATIONS

The Professor Has Returned from a Winter's Work in Many Parts of Egypt.

FINDS ROMAN PORTRAITS

Also He Unearths Some Specimens of the Fun of the Egyptian Boy of Very, Very Long Ago.

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

PROFESSOR FLINDERS PETRIE is back in England after a successful winter's work at Memphis, Gerzeh, Hawara and Maaghuneh, in Egypt.

"I have brought home some striking painted portraits of the Roman period discovered at Hawara," he said. "The first series was discovered as far back as 1888, and some of the finest are in the National Gallery. The recent finds include portraits of men and women, and, judging from the style of dressing the hair, one cannot be far out in believing that they date from 100 to 250 A. D. A few are painted on canvas. This appears to have been employed before the adoption of cedar panels. Some are painted in thin color, apparently water color, perhaps with white of egg as a body. The greater number are painted with colored wax, laid on in a melted state with a brush.

"They are evidently portraits painted after death, in order to be placed with the mummy. In this period the mummies, with the portraits, were kept in the house for many years. Probably for one or two generations they stood in the colonnade around the atrium, and seemed to preserve the continuity of the family life that went on around them. Then, when the footsteps had been kicked in, when rain and dust had damaged the upper part and when little boys at their lessons had scribbled caricatures on their toes, and when the personalities were forgotten, a clearance would be made of some of them and they would be carted off to the cemetery, where they have been discovered.

"Here is a bit of a mischievous Egyptian boy's fun," said the professor, unrolling a sheet of canvas about a foot square, and showing some comical sketches of a human figure. "That is how the little Egyptian lad made fun of his dead grandfather. As many of the portraits have been spoiled by the excess of oil in the mummy, it is evident that the defects of that system of embalming were not yet known by experience.

"In addition to the revelation of the fashion of that period, as seen by the style of dressing the hair of the women, another fashion is brought to light. Observe the style of the earrings worn. There are three distinct types—the pendant, the hoop, and the ball. Ornaments for women's hair were also worn, as can be seen from the gold wreaths and front hair combs that some of them are wearing. And here is one lady who has adopted or clung to the fashion of wearing curls."

GERMAN INVASION OF THE EMERALD ISLE

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

Hops growing on an extensive scale is to be started in Ireland this autumn by a German with American roots and German labor. Baron von Hurst, who, with his brother, is one of the largest hop growers in the world, has purchased two thousand acres of land in Ireland for that purpose. Baron von Hurst's hop fields in Lower California are quite extensive, and for ten years he has been supplying the English market with hops that the unsuspecting Briton supposed were grown in Kent. Then came the tax and American hops became almost prohibitive in Great Britain.

As England is the greatest consumer of hops of any country in the whole of Europe, it became this German hop king to look around a bit. He knew that the Kent hop fields had been worked so long that they were almost barren. So he went to Ireland.

"I have found," he told me, "a spot in Ireland where the rainfall and sunshine the year round are almost the same as in the best hop growing section of Kent. Still better, the soil is practically virgin, because, as you know, Irish farming lands have lain dormant for years on account of the land troubles. The chemical ingredients in the soil are almost the same as those in our hop fields in California. The subsoil is much better than that in Kent.

"I have bought only two thousand acres to start with, but if everything turns out as we think it will I shall take much bigger holdings, although, of course, the price will run up on us. I got this two thousand acres very cheap. I intend to plant it with three kinds of roots. The female roots I'll bring from California, because they are stronger and more prolific than those from Germany or the east of America. The male roots I will bring from the northern part of New York State and from Bohemia. It will be a sort of cosmopolitan hop that we will grow in Ireland.

"No," replied the Baron to my question, "I shall not employ Irish labor. I shall bring over Germans. An Irishman at present knows nothing about hop growing. Doubtless he will get to know about it when we make it a national industry. I have already contracted for eleven hundred Germans to come over next fall. I assure you that this will be a peaceable German invasion."

Baron von Hurst's home is in Coburg Castle, Germany, although he spends most of his time in England and America.

Mr. Asquith Finds a Seat Even for His 'Dearest Foe,' Mr. A. J. Balfour

Delightful Story Is Told of the British Founder and His Predecessor.

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

MR. F. in the last issue tells of a peculiarly interesting incident in connection with the recent gala performance at His Majesty's Theatre. It seems that Mr. Balfour, who has been Prime Minister of Great Britain, and his sister were given seats in the Abbey at the coronation service where they could neither see the ceremony nor hear anything but the great organ and the choir, but at the theatre matters were worse. Mr. Balfour and his sister were put in a back row behind a crowd of not very youthful nor very eminent personages.

The slight was so obvious that the Prime Minister, hoping his attention called to the matter, determined that his "dearest foe" should have proper recognition. There were two vacant chairs next to Mr. Asquith and, raising his voice, he called, "Balfour, there are places here; come along!" A horrified, gold bedizened flunky rushed up and explained that the seats were reserved for personages more distinguished at court than in the councils of nations.

"They can sit further back," thundered the Prime Minister, "Mr. Balfour, please come here."

And thus it was that the conservative leader and his distinguished sister were accorded their proper positions.

Now that the Imperial Conference has adjourned and the Dominion Premiers are on their way over seas, some of the secrets of the convention are coming out. According to some of the London newspapers, Dominion troops and Dominion navies are to be quite separate from the British army and navy. The Dominion statesmen, it appears, told the leaders of the English government very plainly that their armed forces will not of necessity be at the command of the mother country in the event of war.

Circumstances at the time that war is declared will have much to do with the attitude of the Dominions. The Dominions, it is asserted, claimed a continuation of what they are actually exercising, independent treaty-making power, and so, the English regretful comments run, covenants ratified through British diplomacy, unless indorsed by the Colonial governments, do not any longer bind the whole British Empire. As another result of the conference the subjects of England's close ally, the Mikado, will be given a very chilly welcome if they intrude on Canadian or Australian ground, and a native of India, although as much an English subject as a Briton born, will not be permitted to enter South Africa until he has undergone the humiliation of being "finger printed" like a criminal.

It is whispered, too, that when some of the ultra-imperialists in the conference tried to force the issue of Canadian-American reciprocity, Sir Wilfrid Laurier told the would-be trouble makers that they must keep their "hands off"—that Canada would manage its own domestic affairs.

English writers, however, console themselves by declaring that the British Empire has not vanished, is still marked red on the map of the world, and that there is little to fear from the young nations contracted by sentimental ties so long as "they owe huge sums to 'Daddy Rich,' of Lombard street."

If the heat wave is still on in America it may be difficult to make you smile, but you will at least indulge in a chuckle when you are told that little Mr. Marshall P. Wilder has set himself up as an authority upon what club life should be.

Writing in M. A. P., he says:—

"It is most extraordinary how Americans have failed to properly understand the purposes for which a club should be used, and how restful and pleasant a place a club may be made.

"The ordinary man must let off steam sometimes. In America, when a man feels in this mood, he goes home and has a row with his wife.

"In London he goes to his club and has a row with a friend and then dines with him. It is an admirable arrangement."

The little humorist then goes on to say that most New Yorkers look upon a club as a good place to go when there's nothing else to do, but the Englishman makes it a home, writes all his letters from there, dines you there, and "does business" there.

That last touch is really delightful, is it not?

Mr. Wilder concludes by declaring that if the American wife could only know what a blessing it is to have the husband meet his friends in the club, thus of course preserving the home as a place where the wife can sit in solitary state, play the piano, sew, do chores, and the other things that make life sweet, American women would insist on the establishment of clubs instead of "pubs" on every street corner.

And, of course, Mr. Wilder, a humorist by profession, is taken seriously by his English readers.

With the King and Queen, the lords and ladies of the court and its merchant princes away from London and with a vast army of workers enjoying the three weeks' holiday which is a part of English life, London would be unspeakably dull were it not for the army of American visitors who invaded the city after the coronation, when prices came stumbling and accommodations were to be had almost for the asking.

And so it is that wherever you go you bump into an acquaintance who hails from New York, or the thousand cities of lesser degree, not forgetting Oskaloosa, Painted Post, Smith's Crossing, or Pride's Hollow. They are here—brigades of them. Step into the Cheshire Cheese and you will find them contesting for the privilege of sitting on the wooden bench where Dr. Samuel Johnson was wont to have his pot of bitter beer when funds were low or his whiskey and soda when there was a

LONDON IS SHOCKED BY BAD MANNERS

But a Drive at Americans Seems Now To Be Like a Two Edged Sword.

"STARING AT ROYALTY"

Newspapers Read a Lesson in Decorum to Persons Who Have Overstepped the Bounds.

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

AT the last garden party given by King Edward and Queen Alexandra at Windsor some society correspondents ramsacked upon the rudeness of "American" guests who crowded round the royal marquee and stood on chairs to gaze on the King taking refreshments with his guests. It was contended at the time by other English correspondents that those guilty of the alleged rudeness were not Americans.

This incident recalled by a notice which Mr. Carlyle Henschell has given, that he will move a resolution at the next meeting of the Court of Common Council in August for the purpose of considering the desirability and advisability of reducing the number of invitations which it is customary to issue to the Aldermen and Commoners to civic banquets in the Guildhall in the future.

This has reference to the alleged "uncouth manners" of some members of Council and their wives at the banquet given to the King and Queen on their recent visit to the city. The London press was silent on the subject at the time, being, as they now admit, "ashamed of the gross breach of decorum on the part of certain Councilmen and their friends," until Mr. Henschell has forced the matter upon public notice.

The Financial Times says:—"It is only a sense of duty strong enough to overcome our sense of shame which induces us to give publicity to the behavior of the company assembled at the Guildhall to welcome the King and Queen. In common with other citizens we must perforce endure our share of the humiliation consequent upon the shocking conduct of certain vulgarians who disgraced what, by the public at home and abroad, was no doubt regarded as a representative gathering of the inhabitants of the city of London.

"Gentlemen belonging to the corporation must have suffered feelings of mortification at the behavior of certain of their colleagues and their friends upon the occasion referred to, and cannot have failed to realise that it is a disgrace to the city to allow such gatherings to masquerade as representative assemblages of the citizens of London.

"A distinguished visitor to London communicated to us some of the impressions he brought away with him, which were, we regret to say, a good deal clouded by the fact that he found himself sitting next to a man who, as the visitor expressed it, 'seemed to have come from somewhere where food was scarce, apparently possessing an insatiable appetite and an unquenchable thirst, whose manipulation of his knife and fork was not at all in accordance with the methods regarded as orthodox in decent society and whose use of his mother tongue left much to be desired.'

"But we are accustomed to see the lavish hospitality of the city bestowed upon persons of the sort who we can readily believe would stand upon chairs at the luncheon table and trail opera glasses on the King and Queen, or be guilty of any other form of vulgarity."

The Daily Express, in an article headed "Gog and Magog Are Ashamed," remarks how the "ladies" and "gentlemen" stood on chairs during the royal progress through the ancient hall and gazed at their Majesties through opera glasses, and adds:—"Such an exhibition of bad manners could hardly have found a parallel anywhere else in the whole wide world. The corporation of the city of London has a splendid history, and is of itself a thing worthy of respect and veneration, but the men who to-day stand for the city are not representative. It is a boast of the corporation that it is unreformed. It is time reform came. Nothing but drastic reform and a real 'pride's purge' can make the corporation worthy of the city."

Reade as if these words of Londoners were the "americans" at the Windsor Garden party doesn't it?

Knight Crusaders in the old Temple Church, or hanging garlands on the tomb of Goldsmith, outside it; you can find them down in "Dirty Dick's" in Shoreditch, where the cobwebs are great attraction, and they are found fighting for place in the restaurants of the Strand, where they rave over the delicious flavor of British beef, imported from Texas, and Southdown mutton, that comes on the hoof from Australia. It is possible, of course, that some of the sheep and lambs pass through Southdown on their way to London.

Wherever you go you hear the musical tongue of America with its delightful variations, from the twang to the drawl. The great shops in the West End are full of American women, and, with characteristic shrewdness, the British owners are having their annual bargain sales, so dear to the feminine heart. These dear little women are stocking up on Irish linen, made in Germany; they are paying American prices for laces that will later have to be submitted to the critical judgment of Mr. Losh's young men, and, in short, they are adding to the prosperity of their "kin across the sea," and as that is what they are here for everybody is happy.

If it were not for the Americans, a few thousand from the oversea dominions and a sprinkling of folk from other lands the London merchants' lot would be like that which the song attributed to the London policeman. Hotel men, too, have reason to rise up and call the pilgrims from the United States of America blessed, and the theatrical managers should join in the chorus, for London, reeling from the exhausting efforts attendant upon the crowning of the King, goes to sleep early o' nights now and comes out only on Sunday.

***

Sunday in London is dull for the American visitor who does not know his way about, but the energetic sightseer who is willing to "do" the city in the full sense of the word will find plenty to employ his time. The historic churches provide a feast of interest for those whose taste lies in that direction, and on a fine day the church parade should not be missed by any stranger. In Hyde Park between twelve and one o'clock, on the famous stretch between the statue of Achilles and Stanhope Gate, society of high and low degree foregathers Sunday after Sunday to enjoy the pleasure of seeing and being seen. An American, asked for his impressions of this scene, said that what astonished him most was to find all classes, from Prime Minister to potboy, from society leader to the lady's maid, content to sit on the green painted wooden chairs or move about on the lawn without any entertainment and without a shadow of fear of being injured by the agitators who violently voice their grievances under the shadow of the Marble Arch, only a few steps away.

Among the other enjoyments in London on Sunday one may have luncheon in the al fresco restaurant at the Zoo, or a dainty meal on the lawn in beautiful Kew Gardens. A visit to the Botanical Gardens, where there is a concert every Sunday between the hours of half-past three and six P. M., may help to vary the monotony.

And then there is the Thames, which on every fine Sunday is crowded by picknickers in launches, in skiffs, punts and canoes, all the way from Hampton Court to Henley. The upper reaches of the Thames such as Maidenhead, Cookham, Marlowe and Taplow are the rendezvous of society, while the people of the workaday world flock to Richmond Park, Hampton Court and Windsor, or join in the many excursions to such seaside resorts as Brighton, Southend, Margate and Ramsgate.

For those who are in London on a Sunday evening there are fine orchestral concerts, at which first class singers, pianists and violinists may be heard, and in the large restaurants and big hotels there are special Sunday concerts, when noted artists entertain the guests.

The art lover will find museums and picture galleries thrown open at stated hours on Sunday afternoons, and the "pubs" do a thriving business all day and all night, except during stated hours of divine service, when the taproom and barmaids take their weekly airing. So you see there are chances of being happy even for Americans in London and its nearby resorts on Sunday.

SCOTLAND A PLACE OF REST FOR KING

Monarch and His Queen Look Forward with Real Pleasure to Highland Tour.

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

KING GEORGE and Queen Mary are looking forward with keenest anticipation to their holiday in Scotland. They love the free and informal life at their Scottish seat, and the days on the moors around Balmoral are a real relaxation to the King.

This visit probably will extend into the early part of October, to give their majesties a complete rest before returning to London and making preparations for their journey to India. From what one hears Princess Mary may accompany her parents to India, but all the royal children are looking forward to their holiday at Balmoral, more especially young Prince Albert, who for the first time will be allowed to accompany the King and his guests deer stalking.

The King and Queen will be present this year at the Braemar gathering, which has not been patronised by the sovereign for a very long time, as King Edward always arrived at Balmoral too late to attend it. The gathering will be held at Braemar early in September. Queen Victoria always attended the gathering and took a keen interest in the games and in the muster of Highlanders.

Every one who has seen Princess Victoria of late has remarked how much brighter and stronger she is looking. She feels less anxious, one gathers, about her mother's health, for she, too, is much stronger than she was, and the quiet time which they have spent at Sandringham benefited them both greatly. They spent considerable time in the open air, and of late Princess Victoria has resumed her riding, a form of exercise of which she is very fond, and the long canters over the open downs have afforded her great enjoyment.

Prince John wants to be a real English boy. He has seen the boy scouts at work, and the active little Prince, who is a robust youngster with a liking for rough exercises, has demanded to be made a scout at once and to have bare knees and carry a pole. The working dress of khaki, with the loose knee breeches, has appealed to him far more than the immaculate white clothes he is constrained to wear in public.

"POMANDER WALK" CAPTURES LONDON

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday

Everything is right about the production of Mr. Louis N. Parker's play "Pomander Walk." It is given in just the right theatre, the Playhouse, and by just the right family of actors. As the short tempered old admiral Mr. Cyril Maude has a part that he will surely make famous, while Mrs. Maude, whose stage name is Winifred Emery, and Miss Margery Maude are equally well suited. The cast is quite a family party, you see, and a charming family as well.

The play is already well known in America, where I understand it had a big success all last winter. It shows every indication of having the same happy experience here. It certainly is a pretty and pleasant entertainment. There is not a thrill in it, but no end of quiet humor and homeliness. It is one of the most restful plays I ever saw, and they are pretty good things now and then for a change.

There are lots of Pomander Walks in the second class, highly respectable suburbs of London that are just the same to-day as they were a hundred years ago, when the action of the play is supposed to take place. Of course there is a nice little love story, and the rest of the dialogue is all gossip, of a very natural and human kind—highly respectable, middle class gossip.

Mr. Maude's pretty little theatre has again a pretty little play, and so everybody should be happy.

I am sorry to say that happy state of affairs does not exist at the Haymarket Theatre, where Mr. Herbert Trench has brought out a play by Sardou, called "Above Suspicion." The programme announces that it is the "exclusively authorized translation and adaptation by William Morpeth" and that "the sole acting rights in this play in the United Kingdom and America are the property of Herbert Trench." He need not have gone to all that trouble, for I doubt if anybody would think of disputing his rights. He's welcome to them. The master hand of Sardou is apparent in spots, and his deft stagecraft is shown at the end in the way he unties the knots in the plot, but the first part of it is largely chatter. The audience wondered what it was all about, for an English audience is none too alert. It always wants to be personally conducted through the plot.

Miss Alexander Carlisle looked charming as the woman who caused all the trouble, and Mr. Aubrey Smith gave a fine performance of the outraged husband. Mr. Charles Maude, as the lover, overacted to an annoying degree.

The main trouble with the play is that there were too many characters in it and they all had too much to say. It was a flood tide of words.

FEARED THE OCEAN AND ITS INVASION

But After All, What the Sea Takes from One Place It Puts Back Again.

MANY ACRES GAINED

But, Just the Same, There Is Considerable Alarm Caused by Frequent Landslides.

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

DURING the last few winters an ominous have been the landslides on the east and south coasts of England, sweeping away houses that had at one time stood far back from the sea, that alarm spread all round the coasts from town to town, that England was gradually, but slowly, being swallowed up by the waves.

In the neighborhood of Cromer, for instance, where landslides are frequent occurrences, the natives tell of the ancient town of Cromer, now lying under the waves far out at sea.

In response to the representations of several municipalities on the coast a commission on coast erosion was appointed by the government to inquire into the changes that have been occurring in the coast line during the last twenty or thirty years, and the result of their examination now shows that while the sea is washing away large portions of the coast line much larger accretions are occurring, the net result being that the United Kingdom, instead of shrinking, is steadily growing larger. In fact, while 4,206 acres have been washed away, 23,717 acres have been gained on other parts of the coast by the receding of the sea.

Nevertheless, it is true that numerous towns are in serious danger. The coast of Holderness, between Flamborough Head and Spurn Point, a stretch of forty miles, has been subject to erosion for centuries, and it is still occurring along the whole coast at the rate of from one to four yards a year. It is estimated that since the first Roman invasion, in 55 B. C., 115 square miles of land have been lost. Twelve towns and villages have been swept away.

At Hunstanton the chalk cliff is gradually being washed away and the houses on the top are in danger. From Yarmouth to the Thames erosion has been going on for many years, and in 1895 the old Church of Eccles disappeared in the waves. At Pakefield property valued at $50,000 fell into the sea in 1907, and since that date further falls of cliff have occurred, carrying houses with them. Cleveleithe, once the most easterly point in England, has been steadily eroded at the rate of half a yard every year. Devereourt, below Harwich, has lost 43 acres during the last quarter of a century, and at Walton on the Naze fifty-six acres disappeared in twenty years.

Much damage has been done on the coast of Sheppey, in Kent, many hundreds of acres, including Warden Church, having been washed away. The three castles at Sandown, Deal and Walmer were, according to War Office records, built a quarter of a mile from the shore. About one hundred and fifty years ago they had to be protected from the sea, but the castle at Sandown and a battery to the north subsequently became a prey to the sea. East of Hastings the cliffs are going at the rate of between two and three feet every year. Beachey Head is being cut into at the rate of about two feet a year.

The beautiful Isle of Wight, the "Garden of England," is being steadily though slowly washed away. Meanwhile its position affords shelter to the coast line behind it. To the west of Hurst Castle the coast is wasting rapidly. Landslips at Lyme Regis have brought down as much as forty to fifty acres at a time, and the old Church of St. Michael is now in danger of being destroyed. The churchyard has already practically fallen into the sea.

But where these places have lost so much other parts have gained, notably the coast line in the northeast between the Tees and the Wash and between Lynn and Wolferton, where large tracts of land have been reclaimed from the sea.

"LORNA DOONE" OUT OF ITS COPYRIGHT

[Special Despatch.]
London, Saturday.

THAT popular old romance of Devonshire, Blackmore's "Lorna Doone," which has run through some forty editions, has just fallen out of copyright, thus recalling the romance of its first publication.

For weary months "Lorna Doone" was hawked for sale and could not find a purchaser. The Cornhill Magazine refused it. "Timbey," wrote the author, "would not let me take it off on my own." Smith Elder would not give £500 to [illegible] out and out and "Once Upon a Time" declined to touch it."

As a forlorn hope, Blackmore [illegible] plied to Mr. Marston, and on March 26, 1869, a bargain was struck by which the publisher agreed to pay £500 for the right to print and sell five hundred copies. The book was issued in the old three volume form at the price of 31s. 6d., and booksellers were now to nibble at the bait. Mr. Mudie, the founder of the great library, allowed himself the luxury of seven copies, and after a year only one hundred copies had been sold.

Then it got known that deep in Devonshire men were selling their very books to buy a copy of "Lorna." And in the end London critics began to rub their eyes and confess that a pearl of great price had all but slipped through their fingers. The "Lorna Doone" was read in every home in the country. Blackmore's name, though [illegible]

You might as well have a Furnace that will burn both Wood and Coal—

And one that can be changed from a Coal to a Wood Furnace at a moment's notice.

¶ The "Hecla" burns wood or coal equally well.

All you need to do if you want to burn wood is to slip a wood grate in through the big door of the furnace. Not a bolt or screw is necessary. You can fix it yourself without soiling your hands or clothing.

The wood grate is supplied free with each "Hecla" furnace, and doubles its usefulness to those who sometimes want to burn wood.

Note the Air Jets in the Door.

They are there to heat the air that passes into the fire chamber. Hot air consumes the gas; cold air checks the fire.

"Hecla" Furnace

Four Grate Bars.

Ever notice how a coal fire burns faster at the edges, leaving more ashes there than at the centre of the fire pot? Now, you can shake down the ashes in a "Hecla" without losing any of the good coals in the centre.

The "Hecla" has four grate bars which can be shaken separately, so that the outside edges can get a thorough cleaning without touching the centre.

Good idea?

The "Hecla" is full of them.

THE UNKNOWN MAN

you believe died accidental deaths or by their own hand? How many of them do you believe are murdered?"

Drud dropped his eyes. "Well," he said finally, "what's the answer?"

"I don't know," answered Bryson. "That's the point. They are too obscure. Personally I believe the greater share of them are murdered. But there is no way of finding out. You could put a dozen of our best reporters on the trail of the tragedies of the Unknown Man and, unless there was something extraordinary about him, you wouldn't develop a single horror. The police-blotter descriptions are all too general, too vague, too much alike. You read Gaboriau," went on Bryson. "I'll wager that if your great Lecoq were a reporter in my office he would 'spike' nine of ten Unknown Men that came along over the police wire. That's what becomes of your old saw that murder will out. There isn't one murder in ten discovered. I'm talking of a big city, of course, where we have millions of obscure people.

"But," he added, "we are wandering from the subject. What I started out to explain, when I began, was why I was late."

"Yes, you began by telling me it was safer to kill a man when the Christmas spirit suffused the land than to put it off until after the holidays, when all good citizens are broke and grouchy."

"Exactly," put in Bryson. "This is the first week in January. The business office sent me my usual chart this afternoon. In the first place, it is Sunday. In the second place, it is the lull after the holidays. Ads for Monday morning dropped sixty per cent. So little Willie here has to work with a fine-tooth comb. He has to find news. He has to fill his paper, and there is an awful big hole. Got to have some crime, of course. Nothing fills a hole like a mystery. "So," concluded Bryson, "I worked two hours past dinner-time trying to find a mystery for to-morrow morning."

"And you did find it?"

"Yes. We found it."

"A murder?"

"Yes, a murder, and a dandy," said the city editor, biting off the end of his cigar. "I can't help thinking about the scientific villain who did it," he added. "He was a wonder. But it all goes to show that these scientific villains all slip up somewhere along the line. If he had only known, now, about the Christmas spirit we have just been talking about!"

"Who—who was it?"

"Our old friend," laughed Bryson. "The Unknown man."

An involuntary exclamation escaped Drud. The lamp-shade threw a gaddy glow, but he felt that his face was white.

"We didn't 'spike' him this time," went on Bryson. "We couldn't afford to. We didn't have news enough, so we hunted for a needle in a haystack. And," he cried in enthusiasm, "we found the needle!"

The two friends sat in silence, puffing at their cigars, Bryson alive with the recollections of a good day's work well done. Drud called a waiter to shut the transom. "I am cold," he said. "This rain brings out my malaria."

"Did you happen to read the Record this morning?" said Bryson, lighting a fresh cigar. "I don't suppose you did. Nobody does, on this side of the Bridge. Well, that's where our Unknown Man was entombed. I don't know how it happened. But there were three lines hidden away under an advertisement. He was found on the beach at the Inlet at one o'clock this morning."

"Yes? Yes?" cried Drud. And then, even more eagerly: "Bryson, you are confuting your own theories."

"No, I am not," said Bryson decidedly. "I am proving them by the exception. This is the one Unknown Man in ten. We wouldn't have taken the trouble to find him if people had been busy reading Christmas advertisements."

"Who is he—the Unknown Man?"

"I don't know."

"How do you know he was murdered?"

"We happen to have a Lecoq in our office," explained Bryson.

"You are confuting your own theories again," cried Drud, leaning back in his chair. "You have just been telling me that the master detectives are frauds when it comes to unraveling your obscure, average murders."

"Ah, yes. Obscure—there you have it. Do you know that nine ont of ten of our crimes are committed by professional criminals? The thug who smashes the skull of a pal in a dark alley with a bludgeon, or gives him dope, is the obscure. He usually goes free. Logic and deduction can't find him. Sherlock Holmes can't sit down in a dressing-gown with Doctor Watson and think him out of his hole!

"But," Bryson went on, jabbing the table-cloth with his finger. "Take the other kind of criminal—the cool, calculating amateur, the man of intellect, who seeks retribution, and who covers his crime with the chain of circumstance. He is the man we catch. The one dominating peculiarity of this kind of criminal is his egotism. Sherlock Holmes can catch him. Why? Because he doesn't kill on the impulse of the moment. He meditates. He premeditates. He schemes. Nine times out of ten he over-schemes. He loses his sense of proportion. His foot slips somewhere."

Drud drummed the table for a moment in silence. He was pleased to note that his nerves were behaving much better than they had this morning when he was annoyed by the policeman at his gate.

"I happened to see that paragraph you referred to," he said. "That man was drowned. There was nothing unusual about him."

"He was not drowned," retorted Bryson coldly. "That's just the point."

"How was he killed?" asked Drud.

"He was killed by a needle!"

"—!" Everything went black before his eyes. He gripped at the arms of his chair to hold himself from falling forward on the table. Dimly, at first, then clearer, he heard the voice of Bryson, talking.

"We have a man on our staff named White," his friend was saying. "He is a wonder. Quiet, soft-spoken, never in anyone's way. He was born a specialist. Besides that he has intuition, which amounts almost to clairvoyance at times. When he starts out to unravel a murder mystery, or a great robbery, the detectives whose names you see so much in the papers follow him. He never follows them. There was a horrible dismemberment case here in town about ten years ago. You may remember it. He found a piece of oil-cloth. When the murderer—a woman, by the way—arrived home one night, she found White sitting on her door-step waiting for her with that piece of oil-cloth. He had traced her by it."

Drud turned out the light by his place, and put his hands over his eyes.

"However," continued Bryson, "I am drifting from the subject again. When White came in this morning, he asked me if I didn't think there might be something worth while in that chance paragraph in the Record. I told him to go ahead." Bryson chuckled. "You certainly never can tell," he said. "You are a surgeon, Drud, and this will interest you especially. Tell me, have you ever used cocaine, or any of its derivatives, in spinal anesthesia?"

It was so long before Drud gave any hint at having heard the question that Bryson repeated it.

"Yes, oh yes," he said finally, leaning his head on his hand as he spoke. "You may remember, I operated with Havenko himself when he was here last year, and then—" he paused, and the words came hard—"we have used it several times at the hospital, in exceptional cases."

"I am going to ask you a question," said Bryson. "It may sound queer to you, but you will understand, of course. Tell me," he said, leaning forward, "has it ever been your misfortune to kill a man with it?"

Drud sprang to his feet, his face livid. Bryson looked at him for a moment in astonishment, and then smiled and rose and gently put him back in his chair.

"It was rather a rash thing to ask a reputable surgeon," he said, self-accusingly. "Your profession makes such a god of its blamed ethics. Still, I have known surgeons who have admitted it."

Drud had no word in answer. He sat staring at his friend, feeble and abject.

"As I understand," went on Bryson, "if the fluid is injected in the lower region of the spinal-cord, it deadens temporarily the nerves controlling locomotion and the sense of touch, below that point. If you inject it too high in the spinal-cord, say in the back of the neck, you affect the nerves that control respiration and the heart-action. That's right, isn't it?"

Drud nodded, mechanically.

"And what happens if you so deaden the spinal-cord in the medullary region just below the brain, with cocaine, or stovaine, or tropacocaine, that the motor impulses are not carried back and forth?"

Bryson leaned forward upon the table eagerly intent upon the development of his theories. Drud raised his eyes and looked at him a full minute before he answered. Then he said, in a dry voice: "The patient dies."

"Beautifully simple!" cried the enraptured man with the nose for news. "Hardly more than a pin-prick, the injection of the fluid, and the machine runs down and stops. By gad, Drud," he went on, pushing his chair against the wall and swinging one leg over the other, "do you know that I gave White the merry laugh when he telephoned in that he had solved the mystery of the death of his Unknown Man, this floater, who would have been in Potter's Field by next Thursday if our advertisement had done right by us? I gave him the laugh when he told me he had unearthed the first murder on record by means of spinal anesthesia!

"Mind you," bubbled on the city editor, his voice vibrant with the thrill of discovery, "all he found on this man, who should have turned out like any ordinary poor devil of a corpse, was a pin-prick between the second and third vertebra. The police didn't notice it. White telephoned to Dr. Carlos, and in less than an hour they had determined the cause of death beyond a suspicion of doubt. It is the greatest story since the Rite will case, and we have got the whole town beaten on it!"

With trembling fingers, slowly and almost in pain, Drud reached across the table and turned out the electric candle at Bryson's place. The light was red, and it seemed to crack his brain. His lower lip drooped until his mouth was half open. His eyes stared at the glistening cut-glass, seeing nothing. Before him, in his mind's eye, he beheld his ingenious fabric of circumstance rent to tatters. His foe were a policeman. And when skill, his cunning, his fiendish ingenuity, then, had come to nothing! A quiet, soft-spoken theorist had shattered without an effort the inner line of his defences as if it had been of cards! Chance, idle, wandering chance, a day of the week, a number on a calendar, had crushed him to earth; chance directed unwittingly, eagerly, by the hand of the one friend for whom he would have given his life!

He had but to look at Bryson, a thousand miles away in his exhilaration, blanketing himself with tobacco smoke, to know that Bryson, least of all persons in the world, suspected that at this moment he was sitting opposite the quaking fugitive who in a few hours would be sought by all the world.

With an effort he managed to pull himself together. Just when he mastered his emotion andwas a man again a thought swept over him, possessed him, transformed him into a maniac. He began to laugh, shrilly. He half rose, peopping himself up by one hand and with the other thrusting an outstretched finger at his friend.

"Who—who is the murdered man?" he demanded.

MONARCH KNIT

—the comfiest coat you can wear in the cool of the evening on the water.

"MONARCH KNIT" is justly the vogue. Because of intrinsic merit and apparent style, fit and shape. Most woollen coats and sweaters are knit in sections and sewn together. The shape is a chance—the style not even a good guess, and there's no surety of the lastingness of either. It's different—a good deal different with "Monarch Knit."

If you want a stunning, comfy coat for evening wear on the water or for antoing just tell your merchant that you want a "Monarch Knit" coat. He's a personal friend of yours—besides he has excellent reasons for giving you full particulars.

Here are two—you'll tell your friends where you got your dandy coat or sweater, and—you'll buy more "Monarch Knit" goods.

When you buy Paint, get the real thing

It is extravagant and foolish to buy and pay for paint, and instead of paint, get a mixture containing cheap adulterants.

Pure paint—the real thing—spreads easier, covers more surface (and covers it better) and wears longer than adulterated paint. Pure paint is far more economical to use. Pure paint gives the handsomest finish.

Pure paint insures you against paint "troubles", the cracking, the peeling, scaling, etc. that comes from the use of impurities.

B-B "English" Paint is pure paint—made from 70% pure white lead (Brandram's B.B. Genuine) 30% pure zinc white, pure linseed oil, pure turpentine and dryer. It will give you the greatest satisfaction and save you money on your paint bill. 83

Bryson slowly turned on Drud. He fanned away the tobacco smoke. He looked sharply at his friend.

"For heaven's sake, Drud!" he said slowly. "What is the matter with you?"

"That's the way with you people!" cried Drud hysterically. "Do you wonder that you breed crime, foster crime, spread crime? Anything to fill your —— rags when you can't sell your columns for money! You jump at a fly! You find a pin-prick in the water-logged cadaver of some poor, unfortunate devil who wanted to end his life in peace, and you seize the world by the ears and shriek bloody murder! You lie, you lie, you lie, you live on lies!"

Bryson reached across the table and caught Drud by both hands.

"Wait a minute," he said quietly. "Be still. Be quiet, for heaven's sake! Your nerves are all torn to tatters."

He spoke hurriedly to the waiter, who brought a pony of brandy and he persuaded Drud to drink. The seizure passed off quickly, and left Drud with chattering teeth. Bryson helped him to a private parlor opening off the dining-room, and there the two friends sat for a long time, Bryson holding the clammy hand.

"You don't even know who killed him," mumbled Drud childishly.

Bryson was a bad nurse. His enthusiasm got the better of him. "No," he laughed, "but we will. I wouldn't be at all surprised if White were sitting on his doorstep now, waiting for him to come home." Then, recollecting himself: "I'll get a carriage and take you home, old chap," he said, rising and touching the bell. "You've been working yourself to death."

"No—no!" cried Drud. "I won't go home to-night! I'll stay here! You can tell Charlie to light the light in my room upstairs if you will, Duke, like a good fellow."

The attendant who answered the bell brought Bryson a card.

"Yes, yes," cried Bryson eagerly. "Send him right in."

A young man, with blue eyes set very wide apart and a nose like Louis Fourteenth's, entered quietly. It was White. He returned his chief's effusive greeting without a smile.

"This is Doctor Drud," said Bryson, pointing to his companion. "Doctor, here is the young man we have just been talking about. The Doctor has been ill, White."

"I am very sorry for the Doctor," said White, looking sharply at the now grotesque figure. "I want just a word with him," he said to Bryson.

"Doctor," he began impersonally, as he took a seat beside Drud, "I have just come from Mr. Carson of the Surgical Appliance Company, and he tells me that his concern manufactures a special iridium needle for your hypodermic sets. I have a fragment of one of them here."

He opened his hand and disclosed, lying in the palm, a tiny section of a tube of silvery metal, no bigger than a hair. Drud and Bryson stared at it in breathless silence. White rose, with an effort, as one tired with a day's work. Bryson was looking at him, his burning eyes faltering over a question he dared not utter.

"I am very sorry, indeed, sir," the young man said to his chief, "because I have long known the attachment you hold for him."

He turned to the door and nodded, and there entered two men, two men of the law, whom Drud only that morning had come to know as his enemies.—From the August "Adventurer."

TO CHECK A COLD

It is easy to check a cold if you begin in time. Frequent doses of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine keep the cough loose, allay the inflammation, and so prevent it spreading to the bronchial tubes and lungs. Mrs. S. M. Moore, Shortreed, B.C., writes: "I wish to state my gratitude for Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, for it cured a cold which a friend said would soon put me in the grave."

QUEEN WILHELMINA

To Satisfy Her Appetite, It is Said, She Has Six Meals a Day

Queen Wilhelmina of Holland is said to have the heartiest appetite of all the crowned heads of Europe. Her Majesty has a weakness for lamb and beef steaks grilled. She has no fewer than six meals a day. In the morning she drinks coffee and eats several slices of black bread and butter. The queen breakfasts at 10 o'clock. Warm pastry and cream figures in the breakfast menu. Her Majesty also drinks a couple of glasses of sweet strong Tokay. The Queen has another meal at 2 o'clock, and at half-past four tea and sandwiches are served. Her principal meal is at 8 o'clock in the evening. It assumes the dimensions of a banquet. The last meal of the day, composed of wine and biscuits, is taken at 10 o'clock.

THOMAS LIPTON ON PROSPERITY

The Knight Hands Out Some Guiding Principles to the Young Man Who Wishes to Be Successful

To young men anxious to succeed in business I would say a few words, said Sir Thomas Lipton.

The first is, beware of strong drink. Remember corkscrews have sunk more people than cork jackets will ever save.

The next is civility. Treat rich and poor alike. The poor man's twenty shillings is as good as the rich man's sovereign. The workman's wife with her basket on her arm is entitled to as much respect as the lady who comes in her carriage.

And as an illustration of the benefit of humility I will tell you the following story of Benjamin Franklin, who, when Ambassador for the United States at the French Court, speaking to a young man, said: "The last time I saw your father, he received me in his study. As I was leaving he showed me a short way out of the house through a narrow passage crossed by a beam overhead. He suddenly cried: 'Stoop! Stoop!' I did not understand what he meant until I felt my head thump against the beam. He was a man who never failed to give good advice. 'You are going,' he said, 'and have to go through the world. Stoop as you go through it, and you will miss many hard thumps.'"

Thirdly, I would recommend punctuality, which is said to be the soul of business. It is said of Charles Lamb, who at one time held a Government appointment, and who was proverbial for coming in late, that one morning, being later than usual, his superior found fault. Lamb offered this excuse: "If I do come late in the morning I try to make up for it by leaving early in the afternoon." This was a good joke, but hardly the style of business to gain promotion. If you stick to business, business will stick to you.

But all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy, as the saying goes, so I would recommend a useful hobby and moderate recreations.

I have always taken a keen interest in outdoor sports. In the old Glasgow days rowing and sailing on the Clyde were to me a great delight, both physically and mentally. It was after the defeat of the Thistle in 1887 that I first resolved to build a challenger for the Cup won by America. Since then, as everyone knows, I have tried three times, and failed on each occasion. We shall never win back the Cup until as great a builder as Herreshoff arises in Great Britain. It has been the boats, not the crews, that have won the races. The sailors on board the three Shamrocks were the finest in the world. Apart from Herreshoff our designers are equal, if not superior, to those of America. Mr. Fife and the late Mr. Watson did their very best, and were as anxious to win the Cup as I was. It is a mistake to say that the American boats could not stand the stress of a voyage across the Atlantic. Boats capable of carrying such enormous sails could go anywhere if rigged up as were the Shamrocks. I hope yet to bring back the Cup.

Finally, let me say that at the beginning of my career, when I acted as my own salesman, and then my own errand boy after the shop was closed at night, I laid down a few hard and fast rules which were the recipe for my success. These were: Be honest. Keep pushing. Use judgment. Treat your customers well.

SAVED BY A SONG

Santley, By Singing to the Bandits, Escaped Torture

The following thrilling story of Santley, the famous singer, whose life was on one occasion saved by a song, is worth telling. Mr. Santley, who had not then attained to fame, was travelling through a mountainous district in Mexico, when his party was suddenly attacked by a horde of half-bred bandits, who roughly demanded their valuables, and threatened, as an alternative, to take them up into the hills and torture them until a ransom should be forthcoming. At the first alarm the guards who had accompanied Santley and his friends fled.

They were conducted through devious footpaths for miles, until they arrived at a rocky cave high up among the hills, where they were forcibly robbed of their money and valuables, including the best of their clothing. Then it transpired that the leader of the bandits had taken them for a wealthy party, and was angry to find that they yielded so little spoil. He also told them, through their Mexican servant, that he suspected they had sent back their best valuables by their guards, but this they denied. Then he threatened to hold them until they were released by a ransom, and named a considerable sum of money. Over their rude supper that memorable night, surrounded by friend and foe, Santley sung an aria as he had never sung before. His voice was then much lighter in tone than it is to-day. As the song rippled forth on the clear mountain air, the dusky Mexican faces lighted up with pleasure, and at its close the leader expressed his delight, and asked the senor to sing again. Santley saw his chance and seized it. He asked, through his servant, if he might sing for his liberty, and a reluctant consent was given. For two hours that night he charmed his captors with a lengthy programme of exquisite melodies. The next day the party were taken down the mountain side and set at liberty to their great relief and delight.

NEW WAR VESSEL

Will Have No Crew, and the Operator Will be Miles Away

A teacher of Nuremberg, Christopher Wirth, has given to the world an invention which may considerably alter the aspect of future warfare by rendering Dreadnoughts obsolete and gunboats useless.

The new war-vessel, whether for air or water, will be crewless—a mere machine of destruction of life and property—while the operator is miles away conducting a battle by means of buttons and levers.

The inventor recently gave a practical demonstration before a special committee of the German Navy League in a secluded part of the Wannsee, a lake near Berlin. The system employed is very similar to that used in wireless telegraphy, and is the latest wonder in teledynamics.

The first experiments too place in a building where the inventor went into a room surrounded by thick walls and passed his electric waves through the wall, exploding miniature mines on the other side in the order selected by his visitors. He also fired off a revolver and started and stopped an electric motor and a steam engine by the same means.

On the lake he worked a specially-made boat from the land, steering it in all directions without visible connection, firing off guns which were on board, and exploded sunken and floating mines in the water.

The unmanned motor-boat was then steered through a labyrinth of small boats, the gear was reversed, and she returned to her original position. Bengal lights and fireworks were also ignited by wireless waves, and only in the order desired.

The wave currents were transmitted and received through antennae in a very similar manner to that used in connection with receivers and transmitters in wireless telegraphy; each transmitter must be "attuned" to the receiver before the current operates.

The inventor has also applied his apparatus to balloons and flying machines. An aeroplane with electric motor can be steered from land in all directions and can be made to drop bombs when required.

What is not explained is what would happen if an opposing electric wave could be got into tune and were directed in an opposite direction, but probably a premature explosion would occur.

Most Canadians Have Catarrh

Our Changeable Climate is Responsible.

Where the atmosphere is damp, with sudden changes in temperature, almost everybody has Catarrh, in some form or other. The ordinary cold in the head inflames and weakens the membranes lining the nose and throat, and starts a discharge. The next cold is more easily caught, and soon the patient is never quite free of it.

As Catarrh develops the discharge increases—drops into the throat, especially at night—and takes on an offensive odor. Besides being exceedingly disagreeable, there is great danger of the disease extending to the lungs, stomach, or bowels.

Though it is very difficult to cure, Father Morrisey devised a combined internal and external treatment that has cured thousands. The Tablets tone up and invigorate the system, and assist Nature in throwing off the disease, while the salve, applied up the nostrils, clears out the discharge and heals the membranes. Combined treatment, 50c at your dealer's, or from Father Morrisey Medicine Co., Ltd., Montreal, Que.

PETERBOROUGH SATURDAY JULY 22 1911

HOLDING INQUEST

Coroner Dr. Greer is Investigating the Cause of the Sudden Death of Mrs. Thos. Harrison of Fraserville

THE CIRCUMSTANCES

An inquest was held this morning at the residence of Mr. Thomas Harrison, North Monaghan, the sudden death of whose wife on Friday morning was referred to in last evening's Examiner. Coroner Greer held the inquest and properly so, with a view to inquiring more fully into the cause of her death. From all that can be gathered the facts seem to bear out the story that she was in financial difficulties and this preyed upon her mind to such an extent as to cause her to take some drug that resulted in her death.

It seems that on Thursday one of her creditors took proceedings to enforce payment and she was served with legal papers. Early Friday morning Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Harrison had arranged to come to town in connection with the matter.

Before leaving home, Mr. Harrison observed Mrs. Harrison going to the pump and taking a drink. When a short distance from home she said to her husband that she was going to die and asked him to take her home. He immediately turned home when she showed signs of something serious being the matter and suffered severe convulsions and pain before reaching home.

On returning home Mr. Harrison called in Dr. Russell of Bailieboro, but before the doctor arrived Mrs. Harrison had passed away.

It is presumed that the financial and other difficulties had preyed upon her mind to such an extent as to cause her to take her own life.

THE BY-LAWS.

The ratepayers should keep in mind that on Friday, July 28th, they will be called upon to express their opinion on the by-laws to fix the assessment for a period of years of the Peterborough Lock Mfg. Company and the B. F. Ackerman, Son and Company. The carrying of these by-laws will be the keeping of good faith between the City Council and the companies. Peter borough is in the habit of doing its legal business properly and according to the law of the land. Other places in the province do not always do this. By-laws such as above referred to in Peterborough are submitted to the ratepayers, and properly so, but some places are not so particular. Toronto, Brantford, Woodstock and other places have a council or commissioner who attend to these matters without the trouble of submitting the by-law. The agreement is made by the council, the assessor does his assessing, but the collector is instructed to collect only so much as passed by the by-law. A representative of the Examiner when in Brantford the other day, learned that the last four or five companies established in Brantford were helped in this way.

Stedman, who manufactures picture post cards has a plant worth $12,000, and has a fixed rate of assessment at $4,000. The Herod Machine and Motor Company have a fixed rate at $45,000, and have a plant worth about $20,000. The Windmill and Gasoline Engine Company have a fixed assessment of $20,000, and have a plant and buildings worth $80,000. The Penman Manufacturing Company, manufacturing knitted underwear, have a fixe dassessment of $25,000, and have a plant and property worth $100,000. The Comeback Auto Truck Company is similarly dealt with. In fact, every manufacturing establishment in Brantford has a fixed assessment. In Woodstock we find the Massey-Harris Company or in other words, the Bain Wagon Co., with a plant worth $1,000,000, for which they have the low assessment of $10,000. The Canada Furniture Company is also established in Woodstock, with a property and plant estimated to be worth half a million and has a fixed assessment of $20,000. None of these by-laws was submitted to the people, the Council merely keep good faith with the companies. Some of the agreements are carried out by a special commissioner and some by the councils of these municipalities. The ratepayers of Peterborough should turn out on Friday next and record their votes in support of the by-laws.

Count that day lost, whose low descending sun, sees calls for four stenographers but Moon College hadn't one.

COUNTY PUPILS WHO PASSED AT EXAMS

County Prize is Carried off by Miss Phyllis Cumberland a Twelve Year Old Lakefield Girl Who Obtained 600 Marks

556 MARKS SECOND

Following is a list of the successful candidates at the recent High School Entrance examination, held at the various centres in the County of Peterborough.

Candidates from the village schools who were successful, will receive their certificates from the principals at the time of the opening of school. Others will receive theirs by mail. The marks of the unsuccessful candidates will be mailed to them in the near future.

The highest mark was made by Miss Phyllis Cumberland of Lakefield Public School, who obtained 600 marks out of a possible 650. This is the third time in succession that the county prizes for the highest mark has gone to a Lakefield pupil. Miss Cumberland is only 12 years of age, and the second highest mark, 556, was made at Ennismore by Miss Mary Moloney, who is the same age.

WEARS FUR CLOTHES ON RED-HOT DAY TO WIN BET

GREELEY, COL., JULY 15.—Serious illness threatens E. O. Martin, employed in the office of the Great Western Sugar Company here, as the result of a freak bet he made with one of his fellow employees, who contended that it was too hot to work.

Martin declared that the temperature was very comfortable and should not be objected to by a reasonable man. In the argument that ensued Martin bet that he could ride around the outskirts of the city clad in a fur overcoat and fur cap, on a bicycle, without suffering any ill effects.

When he left the sugar factory the thermometer registered 101. In the blazing sun of the early afternoon he rode several miles, clad in his polar costume, but he was badly overheated when he returned to the factory. That night he became quite ill and is now suffering considerably as the result of winning his wager.

MORE RELIEF IS NEEDED AT COCHRANE

Still Considerable Suffering as the Result of the Fire—Women and Children Without Proper Clothing and Shoes

THE CONDITIONS NOW

Special to The Examiner:

COCHRANE, JULY 21.—Cochrane devasted by the fire, presents a picture of misery and desolation, but the appearance of the town itself is in striking contrast to the spirit of the inhabitants, who are not at all in despair despite their gloomy, cheerless surroundings. Everywhere the sound of the hammer is heard, and every foot of lumber is being snapped up as soon as it lands here and cut for building purposes. The rain on Tuesday night and Wednesday extinguished all the fires in the surrounding bush and removed a standing menace. People are greatly relieved by the downfall and fear no further visitation by fire.

Close Relief Kitchen.

Meanwhile the work of relief goes on, but after this week the supplies will be all handed out from the cars standing near the station and the relief kitchen will be closed. There are enough provisions now on hand to last, but there is a crying need for cash subscriptions. Money is needed and will be needed for some time. How urgent is this demand can only be realized by the people here who know the true conditions.

I visited many places where the homeless sufferers are being temporarily housed. I have seen the committee at work, have taken my place in the bread line and know that everything possible is being done, that no funds or food are being wasted, and would use my voice and that of the committee and say "send along more money."

I visited the house of 'Chief' Jones the hockey player, who was sworn in as Chief of Police the night of the fire and found there nearly 20 people—men, women and children. One family comprises husband, wife and three children, the youngest less than 4 weeks old. The little one was only about two weeks old when the first fire visited the town a week ago Friday and the mother was forced to flee from the flames with the child in her arms. Her home was saved after a hard fight only to be wiped out in the big conflagration.

Cases of Destitution.

The family had $75 in the bank.

CHICAGO HAS CASE LIKE THE NEAPOLITANO TRAGEDY

CHICAGO, JULY 20.— A case similar in some respects to that of Mrs. Angelina Napolitano, of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., whose death sentence was commuted to life imprisonment last week, developed here yesterday in the shooting of Joseph Lepiscopo by his wife, Vita Lepiscopo.

At the hospital to which Lepiscopo was taken it was said early to-day that he had small chance of recovering.

In her cell at the police station Mrs. Lepiscopo, who soon will become a mother, said she had supported her husband since they came from Italy, two years ago, and that he often had beaten her when her earnings were small.

Many Fatal Accidents A Score are Killed

TORONTO, JULY 22.—This morning's despatches tell of scores of tragic deaths from various causes among people seeking the pleasures of the summer's evenings in various parts of the northern States. At Greensburg, Pa., lightning struck a boarding house, killing 3 and injuring several, mostly Italians. At Patterson, N.J., trolley cars, running at a high speed, crashed together, killing three and injuring twenty-four, some seriously. At Dowigine, Mich., three young women of prominent families were drowned, while bathing. Other accidents bringing the total of deaths to twenty and injured to one hundred, occurred in various parts of Ohio, New York and other states all last evening.

Lad Runs 43 Miles To See Dying Father

Centralia, Wash., July 22.—To reach the bedside of his father, whom he believed to be dying, fourteen-year-old Royal Eubanks raced on foot from Morton to Centralia, forty-three miles, in thirteen and a half hours yesterday. When the little fellow, utterly worn out by his terrific exertions, threw himself into his mother's arms, he fainted away after hearing the news that his father was safely on the road to recovery.

The lad is a son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Eubanks of Centralia and a grandson of ex-Mayor Wood. With his father and his brother Bernie he went fishing up the North Fork of the Tilton river early in the week. As his father was standing on two logs, with his legs wide apart, one of the logs swung out and he was thrown backward violently across the other.

The impact of his fall knocked him unconscious, and the two little lads, at the imminent risk of falling in the water themselves, rushed out on the log and caught him just as he was slipping into the river. They managed to hold him there until their frantic shouts brought help. The injured man, still insensible, was carried to Morton and from there hurried to Centralia.

There was room for only one of the boys in the buggy, and it fell to Bernie, as the elder, to accompany his father on the trip home. Undeterred by the fact that he would have to make part of the lonely journey in the dark, Royal followed on foot as fast as his legs could carry him. Speed and strength were lent to his wiry little limbs by the prospect that his father might be dead before he arrived.

When he reached home, he had just strength enough left to cry, "Gee Whiz! I'm glad papa is going to live!" before he fainted.

Two Hundred Ontario People Are Claimants To An Estate Of $380,000,000

TORONTO, JULY 21.—A gathering at St. George's Hall yesterday of some two hundred descendants of Colonel Baker, a multi-millionaire, who died in Philadelphia a couple of centuries ago, arranged for the purpose of making a united effort to have his will probated, proved a failure so far as the primary object was concerned, and the meeting ended in confusion.

Mr. W. H. Huston, a Philadelphia lawyer, was present, and offered to conduct the legal battle for the heirs for a consideration of one-third the estate in addition to a retention fee of $1,000. The first requirement they were willing to meet, but putting up $1,000 merely to start the kettle boiling did not gain unanimous favour. The meeting at times became very optimistic then as clouds of doubt appeared many shook their heads, and before the question of placing the matter in the lawyer's hands was put nearly half the number had left the hall.

The two hundred claimants to the immense fortune were gathered from all parts of the Province, and represented almost every class of citizen. Many were themselves, Bakers, but the majority were known by other names, among which were the names peculiar to nearly every nationality. It was an interesting scene when they gathered in groups in different parts of the hall and discussed their ancestry and traced their relationship. A true feeling of kinship prevailed, and this was strengthened by the knowledge of their mutual interests.

Wanted No American Lawyer.

It was not unnatural that in such a large family caucus there should be some strife. This feature was introduced by Mrs. Thomas Baker of 58 St. George street, who insisted that the matter of pushing the affair be left in the hands of a committee, and that if a lawyer be appointed the choice should not be made in the States. Mrs. Baker pressed her views so strongly that she was brought to order several times by the chairman, Mr. L. O. Christmann of Beachburg.

Mr. Ryerson Rennie of 146 Davenport road was elected to look after the interests of the heirs, and Mr. E. Keffer of Concord, Ont., who personally put up $200 to bring the Philadelphia lawyer to Toronto, was appointed to receive all moneys.

Mr. Rennie stated in addressing the assemblage, that he had been to Philadelphia several times regarding the estate, and was convinced of the integrity of Mr. Huston. As for putting up $1,000 to retain the lawyer, Mr. Rennie said no better investment could be made. There was no doubt in the world as to the validity of the estate, especially the properties outside of Philadelphia and he made a strong appeal to the heirs to raise the money and have the matter settled with all possible speed.

Subscriptions Came Slowly.

Subscriptions were then asked for but they came slowly, and after half an hour's time only $40 had been laid on the table. Mr. J. W. Wallace, 2 King street west, who is one of the heirs, handed Mr. Rennie his card and told him that if the money was not raised to notify him. Mr. Wallace left the hall without further remarks.

The estate for which the heirs, who altogether number about 1,000, are seeking, comprise properties in the heart of the city of Philadelphia, in various parts of the State of Pennsylvania and also in Germany. At the time of Colonel Baker's demise, over two hundred years ago, they were valued at between $50,000 and $100,000. After spending years in investigating the properties, Mr. Rennie stated to The Globe that he believed the total value at the present time was no less than $380,000,000. Mr. Andrew A. McHugh, a State detective, who had been working on the case since August, 1910, and has arrested several alleged fakirs who claimed to be able to restore the millions to the rightful heirs, attended the meeting yesterday. He also was very optimistic regarding the possibility of recovering the lost fortune.

One of the interested men expressed the opinion that any property lying unclaimed for years in Philadelphia was likely to have been sold for taxes.

A DISGUSTED CONSERVATIVE ON THE CONSERVATIVE CONVENTION

Ex-Warden R. N. Scott Says What He Means in Unmistakable Language—"Will Never Get Another Vote From Me"

SOME HOT SHOT

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—I notice by the report in the Review that the Conservative convention was conducted in such a fair and harmonious way it would lead the public to believe it was true. As you were aware the convention was called for the 18th at eight o'clock. Promptly on time that noted hot air tank the Czar of the Conservatives of West Peterborough, before whom all knees must bow; all tongues confess, Sir James Kendry, took the chair and the meeting was opened for business. After the election of officers, and after I had been fired out of the office of Third Vice-President, for reasons unknown to myself, but known to the gang who were after me, they proceeded to move some resolutions to nominate candidates for the Dominion and then for the local. After nominating that great Priest exterminator for the Dominion, they started their dirty work. Mr. Bradburn was then nominated by the stalwart Mr. Moore, which gave him the floor and before sitting down, after declining the nomination, do it? I guess not. Before my mover too good to mingle with them. Then Sir James said he would give five minutes for each nomination. Did he moved Mr. Peck, a gentleman who is had any time to think. They say they waited three minutes, but I say they lie and I can prove it. They only waited about one minute, when one of the machine moved that the nominations be closed, and the Czar, who was standing waiting for the word, never waiting for a seconder, declared the motion carried. My mover, Mr. Harry Garbutt, was trying to be heard, but the howling mob drowned his voice and R. N. Scott's nomination was down and out as far as they were concerned. I was informed since by two prominent residents of the city that they knew two weeks ago that they had it fixed for me because I was too friendly with some prominent Reformers, and I believe it. They must have had several rehearsals as every one knew his piece and his place, and the right time to do it. Now, I have worked hard and supported Sir James Kendry and his party for 25 years, but I am done with them now. They will never get another vote from me or anybody I can influence. I do not intend to take further notice of what they may say, as they are too dirty for an honest man to deal with. Thanking you for the space in your valuable paper, I remain.

Yours truly

ROBERT N. SCOTT.

ANOTHER WOMAN

Detectives in the Beattie Murder Case Have Discovered a Former Sweetheart of the Husband of the Murdered Woman

WHO OWNS SHOT GUN?

Special to The Examiner:

RICHMOND, VA., JULY 21.—Virginia's murder mystery to-day resolved itself into the old, old story of two women and a man.

When six members of a coroner's jury crowded into the little parlour of Coroner Loving's home, to probe the killing of the beautiful wife of Henry Clay Beattie, they waited with baited breath for the uncloseting of a Beattie skeleton. And the uncloseting came.

To-day the police brought forth the results of the strenuous work they have done since Henry Clay Beattie brought home his murdered wife, her shot-pierced head in his bloody lap, from their last joy ride. They went back four years to find the woman, and found a schoolday sweetheart of Beattie and, according to the Henrico County records, mother of Beattie's first-born, now dead.

Woman Taken Away.

While Henry Clay Beattie in his father's home last night cuddled his motherless five-weeks old son, the other woman was in the custody of a half score strong-armed men, on the farm of I. L. Scherrer, chief of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad detectives, nine miles from Richmond. After the other woman was put through a rigorous third degree by Sherrer and the public officials yesterday, she was spirited away from Richmond in a speeding automobile, far from Beattie.

Despite the potent caste feeling of the Virginia aristocracy, the first families remembered to-day, when they spoke of the wedding of Henry Clay Beattie, of the mysteriously veiled woman who then appeared. It has been generally known since Beattie's marriage, that there was another woman, who was there, heavily veiled, like a wraith at the wedding feast, and from her dark rear pew of the little church in Manchester, inspired a dread fear that the banns would be forbidden.

Was Asked to Stay Away.

Under yesterday's sweating the police declared that the "other woman" admitted that she was the mother of Beattie's dead son born July 24, 1909, and that she had been lately paid money by the scion of the South to keep away from Richmond. She returned three weeks ago and on at least two occasions just prior to the killing of Mrs. Beattie, she was seen, according to Chief of Police Louis Werner, in the automobile of Beattie, which carried the latter's wife to her death.

To-day the police bent all their efforts towards proving the ownership of the shot gun found in the road leading from the scene of the tragedy to the Beattie home. Upon this clue the police realized they must base their ultimate solution of the mystery.

STOLEN ARTICLES RECOVERED

(Lindsay Warder)

A Warder reporter had a short conversation with Mr. W. H. Wright, of Eldon Station, this morning, who stated that he had received all his goods back again which were stolen from his house by the same parties who stole the cattle from the McEachern ranch some weks ago. It appears that the thieves broke into his house and carried away a suitcase, a gold watch and various other articles. Mr. Wright informed County Constable Wm. Thornbury of the thefts, and the latter gentleman immediately instituted a search for the stolen articles. After considerable trouble and some clever detective work, he succeeded in securing all the stolen articles, which were returned to Mr. Wright.

ENJOYABLE OUTING

A very pleasant Thursday afternoon trip was enjoyed by the employees of Miss Gardiner's room, of Richard Hall & Son's dressemaking department. About 2.30 the motor-bus, with 19 of the employees safely packed, left for Chemong. A speedy trip was made to the park where several snapshots were taken, and then the girls scattered through the park. After a long ramble through the woods supper was ready about 5.30. A good meal was done full justice to, and then Bridgenorth and the floating bridge were visited. Some being good walkers crossed to the Ennismore side, while others not so good at walking went part way and were picked up by a lumber wagon. Others who came straggling along later were treated to a ride by an Ennismore citizen. Peterborough was reached at 9 o'clock by the tired but happy bunch, who it is unnecessary to say enjoyed the trip so kindly provided by Miss Gardiner, who is leaving shortly for the Coast.

The Sun and "The Sovereign"

The persons who enjoyed warm weather indoors all last winter lived in houses heated by "Sovereign" hot water boilers.

"The Sovereign" has all the appearance of the old style hot water boiler—but it is different in so many ways that a detailed description would take too long to tell.

We will send you the names of your neighbors who live in houses heated by the "Sovereign" boilers and you may ask them how comfortable they were last winter.

SATURDAY, JULY 22, 1911

STRANGE DOCTRINE FOR THE CENTURY.

The talk which took place in the House of Commons yesterday in reference to the labour troubles existing in the coal fields of Alberta and British Columbia produced an attitude on the part of certain Conservative members which can only be regarded as remarkable for so late a stage of the world's history as the eleventh year of the twentieth century, say the Ottawa Free Press.

The whole burden of the Opposition attack upon the Minister of Labour was that he has not used compulsion to secure a settlement of the differences between the operators and the miners. They knew that the opinion of Parliament, and public opinion has not yet reached the stage in Canada where compulsory settlement of labour disputes is possible. They knew that the record of the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act is conciliation and enquiry with the view of securing the force of public opinion upon an industrial struggle; but, for the sake of seeking to make political capital, they did not hesitate to urge that compulsion should have been resorted to in order to force the miners in these coal fields to return to work.

It is not a doctrine which will appeal to the common sense of the people of Canada. It may suit certain conservative schools of thought, but it does not coincide with the liberalism which is the market feature of our life to-day.

No man can be forced to work unless he wants to do so. Every man has the right to declare that he declines to accept the wages and the conditions offered by his employer. And there is no power under Heaven which will compel such a man to work unless he wants to do so.

This proposal of compulsory action by the Government was illiberal enough, but it is democracy itself as compared with the policy proposed by Mr. George Taylor, the former Conservative whip and the present member for Leeds. He was himself a coal mine operator until a couple of years ago when he sold out at a good profit and thereby relieved himself of his burden as a capitalist, "compelled to yield at all times to the demands of organized labour." When he was in this position of coal operator he was interested in the previous dispute which caused so much suffering in the west, and he then made a suggestion to the Minister for the prevention of all such disputes in future.

What was it? That the Government should send troops into the coal fields and compel the miners to go to work at the point of the bayonet!

How is that for the twentieth century? What will the workers of Canada think of such a doctrine, especially when it is coupled with the assertion by Mr. Taylor, from his place in the House, that it would be better to drive them to work at the point of the bayonet than to allow the people to suffer?

Liberals can have no sympathy with such sentiments. They have stood for freedom of the individual, for the right of organization by labour, and for friendly intervention by the Government in labour disputes without any form of compulsion. The resort to force which Mr. George Taylor suggests is a relic of the old days of class government, which has died past recall save in the minds of fossil politicians, and it is folly for any political party to talk seriously, even for the sake of faking political capital, of any resort to compulsion and armed force.

The world has passed that stage Liberals realize the fact, but the Taylors and others of that school do not.

OLD COUNTRY NEWS

LONDON, July 18.—A very remarkable achievement in "water-finding" has just been carried through at Selly Oak, Birmingham. It was necessary to discover a supply of water on the land belonging to the Patent Enamel Works, and Mr. Chesterman was called from Hereford for the purpose. He went over the land with his piece of aluminium wire for about half an hour. Then he suddenly stopped, and declared that at the place where he stood water would be found at a depth of 250 feet. A contract was signed by which he engaged to sink an 8-inch artesian tube which should produce not less than 15,000 gallons of water a day on the condition "No water, no pay." He employed hydraulic boring machinery, and in fourteen days struck water at a depth of 248 feet, and test pumping for twenty-nine hours proved a yield of 30,000 gallons per day. That the expert should have gauged the depth within two feet is considered one of the greatest triumphs in water-finding of modern times.

HEROIC CAREER

A career of heroism on the battlefields of Europe and Africa has closed by the death of Mrs. Janet Helen King, of Purley, Middlesex. When only about nineteen years old she was one of a party sent out to assist in nursing the troops engaged in the war between Russia and Turkey. Often the party lost its way, and the night was passed in open carts, bitter cold and the howling of wolves effectually preventing sleep. To Sister Janet's care were allotted some 200 patients, who lay in huts scattered amongst the hills. Daily as she trudged through the snow from hut to hut on her mission of mercy, she was exposed to attacks from the wild dogs which infested Bulgaria. More than once these brutes had her down, but her stick and dagger protected her until her cries brought assistance. At the close of the war she received the Imperial Order of the Red Cross of Russia. She went out, too, to the Zulu War, and at Utrecht 3,200 sick and wounded passed through her hands.

BALLOON ESCAPED

Much excitement was caused at the Yorkshire Flower Show at York a few days ago by the escape of a captive balloon, in the car of which were seven men and two women. The balloon was being hauled to the ground after an ascent when the cable suddenly snapped, and the balloon, rising to a great height, was soon out of sight. When clear of York the balloon attendant pulled the valve open to allow the gas to escape, but the valve cord broke. The balloon, however, came close to the ground, and the car ropes got entangled in a tree. One of the passengers then clambered down the branches and hurried away for ropes and ladders to a farmhouse, but before his return the balloon broke loose again. After bumping along over several fields it became entangled in another tree. The occupants dropped to the ground, much shaken by their adventure, and the balloon, released of its burden, freed itself and sailed away.

COOL THIEVES

While twelve people lay sleeping the other night in West Mains the residence of Mr. A. Price, in Berkshire, burglars ransacked the house, and then leisurely helped themselves to a meal in the kitchen. Before beginning the feast they laid a tablecloth and arranged cutlery, and dishes. They lit a fire to boil water to make tea, which they drank in large quantities. The repast consisted of between five and six pounds of salmon, a whole joint of beef, a duck, and various potted meats. Salads they made themselves. After doing justice to the good things, which had been provided for a party on the next day, they retired taking with them as much of Mr. Price's property as they fancied. One amusing feature of the repast was that they lavishly sprinkled strong beetle powder over the food in mistake for seasoning! Needless to say, the dishes so treated were found next morning almost untouched.

ODD ACCIDENT

An extraordinary accident occurred at Putney Bridge Station recently, as a result of which a London gentleman, Mr. William Potts, had a startling experience. Mr. Potts went to the station to catch a train. There had been a heavy fall of rain, and on the platform was a small pool of water. No sooner had his foot touched this pool than he received a violent electric shock, and was hurled from the platform to the line. "He was shot from the platform like a streak of lightning," declared an eye-witness. An explanation of the accident is given that the heavy rainfall had caused the tape or covering of the electric cable to become so saturated that the current leaked from the "live" rail and passed through the girder and concrete which formed the platform to the pool of water—a natural conductor.

The glamour and romance of the Elizabethan period and the stormy times that followed are interwoven with the story of a magnificent set of old silver plate which was sold in London the other day. This silver service was originally the property of a Devonshire Knight, Sir Christopher Harris. When the Spanish Armada was scattered, it was taken from the wreck of a treasure-laden Spanish galleon. Then, when the Civil War broke out half a century later Sir Christopher's descendant, becoming alarmed for the safety of the valuable heirlooms, had them hidden in a cave in a field adjoining Dartmoor. For nearly 200 years the plate remained thus hidden; then on Christmas, 1827, it was discovered by three Dartmoor laborers, and eventually restored to the John Harris of the day.

PRINTERS PROSE

This Idyll 'aint wild, tho' lots may be riled
When they think of the fun that they missed;
By refusing to go to the Picnic you know.
Whose? The Printers'—the best on the list,
The sports will be good, and they'll furnish food
For fun and reflection as well;
So don't make a fuss, but just come with us
The time you will have will be swell.

The great game of ball would be nothing at all
If Myland were not on the list,
We'll "Examiner" well before we can tell,
Then on his appearance insist.

Then the 100 yards dash for a prize with some cash
Is a cinch for our little friend Rodgers;
He's in training they say, and is seen every day
Going all 'round the city with dodgers.

Then our Scotch friend may have something to say
On how to get a beautiful "jag on."
He boasts of a grip like the hold of a ship
So fears not the noise of the "wagon."

There's lots more you'll know if you only go,
So let us all go together,
We'll leave nothing undone to hand out the fun
And just let us hope for the weather.

You can all find the way on Civic Holiday
To the wharf on the banks of the river,
For the breezes may blow, and the River may flow,
But our picnic goes on as ever.

BERRIES AND CHERRIES SCATTERED ALONG STREET

A horse attached to one of the Dominion Express Company's waggons ran away this morning at the C.P.R. station, while the waggon was being loaded. The driver was on top of the wagon at the time, and as the bridle had been pulled off the horse's head, he could do nothing to stop it and was forced to jump, and in so doing had a narrow escape from being seriously injured. The waggon was loaded with cherries and berries, also other fruits which were scattered along the road. The horse was caught later up George street.

Josiah's Devotion to God.—2 Chron. xxxiv., 1-13.

Golden Text—Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth.—Eccl. xii., 1.

1. Verses 1-2—Whose son was Josiah?
2. What had been the character of Amon?
3. Whose son was Amon?
4. What had probably induced the wicked reign of Amon?
5. Is a boy of eight years of age morally responsible to God?
6. Verse 3—How old was Josiah when he began to seek after God?
7. If Josiah when a boy had not sought and found the Lord, what effect would that have probably had upon his reign?
8. If a boy is not converted by the time he is sixteen years of age, what are his chances of ever being converted?
9. Take one hundred boys at sixteen years of age, in the same social positions, fifty of them converted and fifty not, what are the chances respectively for the worldly success of these two sets of boys?
10. In the training of boys there are at least three things essential to their success—health, education, and character or religion. Which should parents pay most attention to without neglecting any one, and why?
11. How old was Josiah when he began to take an aggressive part in the spiritual welfare of his kingdom?
12. Verses 4-7—Why should the rulers of the people feel responsibility for the righteousness of the nation, and see to it personally that reforms are carried out?
13. Which comes first in order, and why—the purging of the nation from gross national sin or the outward and public worship of God?
14. Why can there be no real worship of God on the part of an individual or community, if at the same time sin is being committed?
15. Verse 8—Which should have first claim upon our resources—our homes or the church?
16. If the homes of the people are well cared for, and the church is in a run-down condition, how would you estimate such a people?
17. Verse 9—Who are the people that are in duty bound to keep up the church of God?
18. From whom had the money been collected to repair the Temple at Jerusalem?
19. Should money be solicited from outsiders to build, repair, or keep up the house of God?
20. Can you find any place in the Bible where they raised money for the worship of God other than by direct giving?
21. Where do you find in the Old or New Testament any precedent for pew renting, bazaars, concerts, lectures, tea meetings, or for any other commercial method of financing the church?
22. Verses 10-13—Why is it vital that the church of God should be kept in a comfortable and an attractive condition?

Porcupine Will Rise From Its Ashes

THE DEMON FIRE has again visited Porcupine, leaving in its wake desolation and loss of life. We regret exceedingly to record these facts, but we desire to pay tribute to those hardy heroes who bravely fought the cruel flames until they dropped in their tracks and died as did the greatest martyrs of ancient times. The pages of the history of Northern Ontario, when written, will be emblazoned with the number of brave lives that were snuffed out in the line of duty. The armies of the world have supplied many heroes, but not one of these can boast of braver men than the miners and prospectors of the Porcupine district.

The fire has done its worst, but still the richness of the various mines remains untouched. In fact, this conflagration in its ravages has actually benefited the mines. It has completely cleared the surface of all obstacles, so that in future prospecting for new veins will be rendered an easy task. The fire of a week ago at the Dome Extension laid bare a number of rich showings unknown to this company. The same will be repeated throughout the entire Porcupine district. We venture the statement that before another week is over the richest discoveries yet made in Porcupine will be heralded abroad.

Nothing but the hand of man can remove the immense riches which lie buried beneath the surface in Porcupine. Buildings may go, and so also machinery, and, the greatest loss of all—HUMAN LIFE—but the mines still remain, and their intrinsic values unimpaired. A reaction in the stock prices may occur, we say, but if such actually happens, we advise our clients to increase their holdings on any weakening in prices in Porcupine issues. Beyond a doubt all these stocks will come back and go through the highest figures yet recorded for them. We firmly believe in the future greatness of the Porcupine district as a PERMANENT GOLD FIELD, and those who invest judicially in its mines are certain to reap handsome returns.

We are especially favorable to the purchase of

THE FAMILY HEARTH

Don't think because you are fresh from the hands of your tailor and your barber that you will pass for a gentleman, unless you are one. You might carry the perfumed roses about you for ages without once being mistaken for a rose.

* * *

Let it be the aim of every young man, every business man, above all things else, to keep his purity sustained. This is the best possession—this is a capital which can never be taken from him—this is the richest inheritance which he can leave to his children.

* * *

Sarcasm and nagging are to the atmosphere of love what sand-flies and fleas are to summer weather. Who would not prefer an occasional brush with a roaring June bug to the eternal torment of a flea you can't catch?

* * *

We thing home love is the best. The love that you are born to is the sweetest that you will ever have on earth. You, who are anxious to escape from the home nest, pause a moment and remember that this is so. It is right that the hour should come when you in your time should become a wife and mother and give the best love to others, but that will be just it. Nobody, not a lover, not a husband, will ever be so tender or so true as your father or mother. Never again after strangers have broken the beautiful bond will there be anything so sweet as the little home circle of mother, father and children, where you were cherished, praised, protected, and kept from harm.

* * *

Now, we want to say something to husbands. These dear, aggravating, indispensable creatures, that there is hardly any living with or without. If your wife or daughter has been bending over the hot stove and a sewing machine all day, she needs to ride out in a vehicle or horseback. Don't think we are a fit subject for a lunatic asylum if we tell you to stopahorse out of "the crap" and take her or let her go by herself if she is not afraid. There is no more sense in intemperate work than intemperate rest. You may have to stop longer to pay the bill. You will be sorry some day when those tired hands hold white flowers under a pall that you did not look more after her health and comfort.

* * *

Give us the woman who is willing to adapt herself to circumstances, and who, after an exertion of efforts has such an undying faith, her motto is, "Though He may slay me, yet will I trust Him." The woman who will not be miserable over the past, but will cling to the future with hope, for hope is the blossom of happiness; the woman not afraid to superintend her domestic affairs and then grace her parlour with as much dignity and confidence as if she were the wife of the president of the United States; the woman who would cling to her husband through thick and thin, remembering she took him for better or worse.

* * *

Do not we all remember with pleasure the days when "the others" were out, or we, perhaps, not perfectly well, and mother had us in her drawing-room, or work-room, or took us out for a little walk alone? Not that we did not love to romp and play. Not that we did not appreciate to the full the picnics and other family expeditions which took place from time to time; but there was enjoyment of a very different, deeper sort in those quiet times with mother, the remembrance of which has lasted half a life-time.

* * *

There is a vast difference between a house and a home. The house is but the building and furniture, the outward shelter and gathering-place of the household. The home includes the kindly family affection, the DAILY—CALL TWO thoughtful care and ready sympathy and mutual confidence and trust of members. A true home breathes the atmosphere of love.

* * *

We know that lips will curl with scorn, and society will sneer, if we reach our hand to the outcast, but God and the angels will be glad, and if a soul be thus saved, what matters it?

* * *

Flirting may seem to the giddy and thoughtless girl wonderfully amusing, and she may get the idea that she is fascinating, but it is a most degrading thing, and she should be frowned upon by every young lady who has an ambition to become a worthy and charming young woman.

* * *

For a good, everyday household angel give us the woman who laughs. Her biscuit may not always be just right, and she may occasionally burn her bread and forget to replace dislocated buttons, but for solid comfort all day and every day she is a very paragon. Home is not a battlefield, nor life one long unending row.

* * *

Our habits are formed under the moulding power of home. The "tender twig" is there bent, the spirit shaped, principles implanted and the whole character is formed until it becomes a habit. The gray-haired father who walks in the second infancy feels the traces of his childhood home in his spirit, desires and habits.

* * *

Of one thing we are certain, we are too chary of our commendations, too stingy of our praise, and alas! too lavish of our blame. "Thoughts are things," and words, if true, are their manifestations. How often have we thought favorably of many things, yet said no word. For all such sins of commission we must ever suffer deep regret. How easy it would have been to have said "That is so beautiful!" or "How well you do!"

HINTS FOR CUTTING

The proof of good dressmaking is in good cutting. If a dress is well cut you will have no trouble at all about putting it together.

When you are cutting out a skirt always allow plenty of turnings around the waist and hips. Remember that if your hips are large in proportion to your waist it is better to get a pattern a couple of inches larger than the waist rather than one that just fits. It is easy then to take the goods in a the waist if the pattern is too large at this place.

When you are cutting a striped skirt remember that even though you may be told to place one side to a selvedge, it is advisable to use rather your own commonsense, and, as a rule, to cut each side slightly on the bias. If this is done the joining place is not nearly so noticeable as if one side were on the bias and the other on the straight.

Before cutting out sleeves always double your material and cut the two together. Then you are bound to cut them right and they will match properly.

If the material is striped see that the stripes come directly over one another. Pin the material to make sure, as nothing looks worse than two sleeves, the stripes in one of which do not match those on the other.

LITTLE THINGS COUNT

We hear a great deal about foreign households living handsomely on what cooks throw away. The pivot on which hangs all the difference between a Canadian housewife and a foreign one—the great essential that is the keynote to the failure of the one and the success of the other—lies in attention to little things.

A French housewife is a genius in her comprehension and application of little things; her greatness lies in the emphasis she puts upon the seeming trifles: the grating of lemon rind that lifts the vulgarity of a ragout, the bunch of carefully selected aromatics that converts the simple soup into a creation, the pinch and the dash of just the right thing at just the right moment that separate as by a spanless charm the commonplace from the novel.

Why is a French salad so good? Because the ingredients are better than ours? Not at all. Simply because care is taken that each leaf is scrupulously dry as well as crisp and tender. It is the drop of water on the imperfectly dried leaf that makes a salad limp and tasteless.

Did you ever try the German way of boiling the succulent pods from which the tender pea has just been shelled, and in the rich juice thus extracted boil your peas? Until you have eaten them in this way don't imagine you know anything about the flavor of green peas.

PACKING FLOWERS TO SEND AWAY

Sending wild flowers to one's friends in the city is such a pretty act that those who live in the country should do it frequently, especially as little trouble is involved. When sent by mail or express they are so short a time in transit, even over a distance of several hundred miles, that if properly packed there is no danger of the blossoms wilting.

One of the secrets of their arriving quite fresh at their destination is to pluck them late in the afternoon and put them into water for the night, not packing until the next morning. There should be no delay then, however, in getting them off, else they might lie in a post office overnight, thus losing twelve hours.

The object in keeping the flowers in water overnight is that their stems shall be waterfilled when packing is done. This insures their having nourishment on the journey, whereas, if they are packed as soon as cut the stems are empty and the flowers have no sustenance.

To hold them, a box of sufficient depth to admit of a little crushing, in case of accident, should be chosen. It is to be lined, sides and ends separately, with two thicknesses of newspaper, the bottom being covered by the same pieces. If the flowers have very hollow stems, such as narcissus, jonquils, etc., among the cultivated varieties, the end of each should have a small bit of wet cotton twisted about.

This should always be done with roses.

The whole quantity to be packed should be divided into two even portions. One-half is laid in separately with the heads all at the same end. If there are many, a piece of wet newspaper should be laid between the heads. The heads of the other half are placed at the other end of the box, thus bringing the stems to the centre. Over them should be laid another bit of wet paper.

When the box is full, except for an inch the top dry papers are folded over and after wrapping it is ready for shipment.

If it is marked "flowers" transit is expedited.

I will go root away
The noisome weeds, which without profit suck
The soil's fertility from wholesome flowers.
Richard II., Act III., Sc. IV.

Weeds! What a pest they are! The traveller through the wheat regions of America, as he passes fields thick with wild oats, wild mustard, thistle and such noxious growths, can best realise the significance of the words of the gardener. Weeds suck the soil's hundreds of millions of dollars. It is not sufficient to cut them down. So long as an inch of many of them exists in the soil, so long will the farmers have trouble.

The text of this study.

"I will go root away
fertility to such an extent that the profit suck
The soil's fertility from wholesome flowers."

The noisome weeds, which without yield of grain on a farm suffers shocking decrease by their presence. They annually cost the farmers of the world is from a gardening scene in "Richard II." It is merely a development of a thought uttered by Bolingbroke, afterwards Henry IV., in an earlier part of the play. "Bushy, Bagot and their 'complices" were the "caterpillars of the commonwealth" which Bolingbroke had sworn "to weed and pluck away." The gardener compares his garden to the English kingdom, and the noisome weeds to the king's favorites. It is this condition of the kingdom that excuses the treasonable action of Bolingbroke in usurping the throne. "The whole land" in the language of the gardener's assistant, was "full of weeds, her fair flowers choked up." England needed careful, fearless gardeners. Henry IV. and his son Henry V. were raised up to pluck away the caterpillars and root out the weeds that were sapping the heart's blood of the nation.

Shakespeare frequently refers to weeds as symbolical of sin. Weeds to him were the criminals of the vegetable world. Pluck them out and cast them into the fire, destroy them utterly is his advice. Harsh measures were needed with them; and so with the weeds of life, the ungoverned passions and appetites. For them he would institute "most biting laws, the needful bits and curbs to headstrong weeds." Weeds are of two kinds, subjective and objective. Those that flourish in our own hearts, such as avarice, cruelty, selfishness, idleness, which crowd out of the soul generosity, pity, self-sacrifice, and energy; and those in the external world, the obstacles to human endeavor. The former are the hardest to root out. If allowed to make headway they are apt to seem to be fair flowers to the man in whose being they have found shelter.

What kind of soil is most favorable for a growth of weeds? According to Shakespeare "the fattest." A brilliant, light-hearted, courageous youth like Prince Hall attracts parasitical flatterers as surely as the finest flowers attract bees. In such a soul, too, passion and appetite are strong and unless a skilful and wise gardener is in charge of the soul's garden, "great weeds will grow apace," as they did in the case of Richard II. Prince Hall was of the right material; when the proper time arrived he plucked away the weeds that hindered his growth.

The loftier a man's position, the greater the potentialities of his soul, the more watchful he must be against weeds. They know good soil when they see it, and are continually clamoring to get into the richest fields. The proper time to begin the war against them is when they are young and tender. Shakespeare makes Queen Margaret say in "Henry V.":

"Now 'tis spring and weeds are shallow-rooted."

Gardeners are careful of the young shoots; the future of the tree depends upon the attention given to them. If parasites are allowed to assail them, if weeds suck their best life from them, they will grow up misshapen, stunted objects. A youth who is preyed upon and misled by evil companions, who permits his passions to govern him, when he attains manhood has deep-rooted weeds of sin in his being that it is difficult to eradicate.

The greatest breeder of soul's weeds is idleness. Marc Antony was essentially a man of action. He allowed weeds of passion to root themselves in him. He had so long impulsively yielded that gradually he had become unable to pluck out and cast away his spiritual weeds. He uttered a great truth when he said,

"We bring forth weeds
When our quick minds lie still."

His passion for Cleopatra was his ruin.

"These strong Egyptian fetters must break," he cried,
"Or lose myself in dotage."

His spring had passed, the weeds were deeply rooted in his soul and heart, and despite this resolve they destroyed him utterly.

Weeds, weeds, weeds, they are everywhere. Life is a continual battle against them. Even if your own life's garden is clear of weeds, in some neighboring garden there is a flourishing crop. It is necessary to stretch out a helping hand to weaker or less advantageously situated neighbors.

SAVE YOUR HAIR; SAGE TEA WILL DO IT

Dandruff, Itching Scalp and Falling Hair Quickly Stopped.

There is one place where baldheaded men shine, and that is in the front row seats of the theatre. If these baldheaded people had used Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy in their earlier days they would not be so conspicuous now. This preparation does not plant new hair, but it does strengthen weak, dying hair, and not only brightens dull, parched hair, but gradually restores the color to faded or gray hair. It is a clean, wholesome hair dressing, which can be used daily with perfect safety.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is sold under guarantee that the money will be refunded if it fails to do exactly as represented.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists.

Itching Scalp Falling Hair

To prevent dry, thin and falling hair, remove dandruff, allay itching and irritation of the scalp, and promote the growth and beauty of the hair, frequent shampoos with Cuticura Soap, and use by occasional dressings with Cuticura Ointment, succeed when other methods fail. Cuticura Soap and Ointment have been specially effective in the treatment of torturing, disfiguring scalp humors and the alarming loss of hair which so often results. For example, read how George S. Jefferson, 1513 Reed St., Philadelphia, tells of his remarkable case:

"My disease started with a little pimple on my head. Then it began to itch. The more I would scratch, the worse it grew until it spread all over my head. So I went to the doctor. But my head grew as raw as a piece of beef and my hair commenced to fall out in bunches. So I changed doctors. My head at this time was so sore I could not touch it. Then I decided to go to the hospital. They began to treat it but it improved very slowly. For over three years I was a sufferer from this disease. I thought all hopes of a permanent cure were impossible. A friend, upon seeing the condition of my head—which was a mass of running corruption—asked me if I had tried the Cuticura Remedies. I told him nothing would do me any good; but being very anxious to be cured, I decided to try them. The first treatment brought immediate relief. My hair became alive and stopped falling out, all the scale left and now I am perfectly well and have a full head of hair. I can truthfully say that it was entirely due to the use of the Cuticura Remedies."

Grand Concert Given By Salvation Army Band

The Salvation Army Band under the direction of Conductor William H. Peryer gave a splendid concert in Victoria Park last night, their magnificent playing winning for them the hearty applause of a very large crowd. The attendance was undoubtedly the largest that has ever attended a Salvation Army band concert, and to say that the crowd was delighted with the work of the band is expressing it mildly. Conductor Peryer has an organization of which he as well as the citizens generally has a right to be proud. They are strong not only collectively but individually, the programme last night giving the members many opportunities for solo work and they took full advantage of the opening given them. The band was never in better shape than it is at the present time and it is a credit alike to the Salvation Army and the city, ranking away up among the Army bands of the continent. Their programme last night was a fantasia of the national airs of different countries and they played with a snap and vim that was refreshing. Many in the crowd had not heard the band give a concert before and they went away warm in their praises of the work of Mr. Peryer's organization. It is safe to say that after last night's splendid success the Tuesday night concerts of the band will be more largely attended than has been the case in the past. The band is well worthy of patronage, their playing at all times being delightful. The programme last night was as follows:

March "The Canadian" ..... Band
Selection, Irish Melodies ..... Band
This selection comprises well known Irish songs, as follows: "Farewell, but whenever you welcome the hour," (full band); "Night Closed Around the Conqueror's Way," (trombone solo); "The Wearing of the Green," euphonium solo, chorus and full band; "I Saw From the Beach," (cornet solo); "Oh! the Shamrock," (grand finale, full band).

Selection, Welsh Melodies ..... Band
A collection of well-known Welsh songs, including "Men of Harlech" and "Ar-hy-y-Nos," and others.

Trombone solo, "Blue Bells of Scotland" ..... Bandsman Sandford
"Air Vari," with Band accompaniment.

Introducing the Dutch National Anthem.

Selection, "Songs of Scotland" ..... Band
Comprising the following: "The Bonnie Banks of Loch Lomond," "The Lament of Flora Macdonald" "Blue Bells of Scotland," "The Auld House," "Caller Herrin'," "Kelvin Grove," "Sock o' Hazeldean," "Scots, Wha Hae," "Mary of Argyle," and "Will Ye No Come Back Again?"

Euphonium solo, "Killarney" ..... Bandsman F. W. Robinson, with Band accompaniment.

March, "The German" ..... Band
Introducing "The Watch on the Rhine"

Band song, "Rule Jehovah" ..... Band
To the tune of Rule Britannia

Grand final selection, "All Nations" Band.—Introducing the following National Anthems: 1, America; 2, Norway; 3, India; 4, Sweden; 5, France; 6, Germany; 7, Japan; 8, Denmark; 9, Holland; 10, Belgium; 11, Canada; 12, God Save the King.

Angry Auto-Mobile Owner Gives Youngster His Car

Special to The Examiner.

HAMMOND, IND., JULY 19.— The same sort of an incident that made the descendants of pioneer Kentucky tacklers Republican "Hill Billies" instead of Democratic blue grass folk, is going to make Cecil Hancock a polished professional instead of a plain Hoosier farmer. The breaking of a lynch pin decided ancestral location in the Kentuck mountains. The breaking a steering knuckle on an automobile to-day changed the current of Cecil's life at the age of twelve.

The owner of the machine became so angry that he gave the car to the farmer lad who quickly sold it to put the money in the bank to buy him a college education. Cecil's ship came in so suddenly he hasn't decided whether to be a lawyer or a doctor.

"It's got to be something with a white collar and a plug hat every day, though," said the lucky boy.

Because the doctor was so busy saying "cuss words" after the accident, Cecil didn't learn his name. But he was a New Yorker motoring to Chicago. His license was 8805, N.Y. The man was alone.

Descending a hill near the Hancock farm, his gear broke and he just escaped with his neck as the car overturned in a ditch. Cecil surveyed the wreck, his chin on a fence rail. It wasn't quite right for a man to talk the way the motorist did in front of a child. From such of the words that he could understand, however, Cecil gathered that the gentleman was mad.

The lone autoist stood with his hands on his hips and rounded out his forceful and fluent language address to the still chugging car as follows:

"I'd give the blankety blank, blink blunk away if I could find any blankety blank sucker that was fool enough to take the blank blank thing off my hands."

Cecil pricked up his ears.

"Say, mister," he called over the fence, "I ain't that what you said, but if you want to give your automobile away I'll take it."

"You're on!" cried the man. He said it exultantly.

"One condition," he added. "If you'll hitch up a nice amiable old dobbin and take me to a railroad station you're welcome to it. But I'll warn you that it's absolutely the meanest, contrariest, low-downest contrivance that any man ever got stung two thousand regular dollars for. Tag, you're it, my son, but tell your folks not to sue me when it kills you."

The boy drove the man to the station, where he boarded a train for Chicago.

"Chloroform it at night," he shouted, as the train pulled out, "or it'll get up in the dark and bite you."

Pick-Pocket Hard Pressed Escapes In A Balloon

SAYRE, O., JULY 22—Hot-rooting it some distance in advance of the Town Marshal, his pursuer, a pickpocket made a strenuous leap into the basket of a balloon near here just as the air craft was leaving the ground, and sailed away to safety.

The balloon had been filled with gas and the aeronaut, George Harvey, was in the basket ready to start when the marshal discovered the pickpocket taking a wallet from a pocket of a citizen whose attention was centred on the balloon.

The marshal attempted to catch the thief and the pursued man ran and leaped into the basket as it cleared the earth. He refused to heed the marshal's warning cry of "stop, thief!"

At the height of several hundred feet the thief drew a revolver and warned Harvey not to release the ripcord on his balloon until he was ordered to do so. After the pair had travelled fifty miles the unwelcome passenger gave the word and the balloon was lowered. Ten feet from the ground the thief leaped from the basket and ran. Relieved of part of its burden the balloon again shot upward.

When Harvey finally effected a landing several hundred yards from where the thief had alighted, he had disappeared.

Girl Sprints Her Way To A $70,000 Fortune

Special to The Examiner.

Chicago, Ill., July 22.—That it pays to be a good sprinter, even for one of the fair sex, was proven yesterday, when Miss Caroline Cantlon, a Chicago girl, learned that a little foot race she won three years ago from five girls in Calgary, Alberta, has been the means of making her the owner of mining stock valued at $70,000.

Miss Cantlon when in college devoted more time to athletics than to study. Before graduating from Vassar she had become the fastest runner in the college.

The year after leaving school she went to Calgary to visit some of her college chums. The provincial fair was being held at that time, and one of the big events was a half-mile run for girls.

Miss Cantlon and two of her school chums entered the race against three other Calgary girls.

Just before the race was called a young Calgary millionaire cattle dealer stepped forward and said he would give a prize of a diamond bracelet to the winner. Before the girls' screams of delight had subsided another young Calgary millionaire mine owner declared he would add another prize to the winner, a certificate of 1,000 shares of stock in a British Columbia mining company.

When the outburst of yells, catcalls and laughter had subsided it was explained to Miss Cantlon that the mine was looked upon as worthless and had never paid any dividends, although at one time considered a winner.

She had met her friends' laughs at the mining stock with the statement that it was at least a pretty bit of paper and she would keep it for a souvenir.

Yesterday Miss Cantlon learned that the mine had been taken over by new management and had been made the best paying property in Western Canada. Stock is selling at $70 a share. Miss Cantlon's 1,000 shares are worth just $70,000, with prospects of it reaching $100,000 soon.

SOME ADVERTISING TALK

(By William C. Freeman.)

Just about this time of year a goodly number of merchants decide that they will save money until the middle of September by not advertising.

Year after year, for nearly twenty-six years, one of the hardest parts of my work as an advertising man has been to convince the merchant who wants to stop advertising during the summer months that he should never stop advertising.

My average of success for each year has not been more than 40 per cent. and that is really failure—but the 40 per cent. of doubting merchants who were persuaded to have faith in the value of advertising in summer, fall, winter and spring months have been very successful, I am glad to say.

A man came into my office the other day to talk with me about advertising furs during the summer months.

He wanted me to conduct a campaign for him—said he was convinced that it would pay—that he believed a campaign advertising furs all the year round would enable a retailer to sell fur garments at an average lower price, because he would do more business—that the retailer would not be compelled to sell at an enormous profit for a short winter season, thereby minimizing the number of people that buy furs—that he believed a big fur business was possible if furs should be sold at a reasonable profit—not at a profit of from $150 to $500 on each garment that cost the retailer from $100 up.

What he wants to do can be done successfully, I think.

No, average retail business can afford to ever be out of the newspapers. In this busy world, we are so easily forgotten. We must keep ourselves before the public all of the time. We cannot afford to be overlooked. If we do not advertise all of the time we surely will be overlooked.

Don't stop, Mr. Merchant.

The Mark Cross Company—a specialty business—one year discontinued advertising during the summer months and Patrick Francis Murphy, the president, said:

"Never again! When we reaumed our advertising in the fall it took three months to get re-acquainted with the readers of the newspapers. Now we advertise in the summer as much as in any other season of the year and as successfully."

Changes Mind Almost On Steps Of The Altar

Memphis, Tenn., July 22.—One girl made the boast that there is always something doing in the Bluff City by exercising a woman's privilege of changing her mind. Not for many years has the ultra-fashionable set in this city been so stirred as it was Monday afternoon when rumors were circulated that the marriage of Miss Allen Caldwell to Elmore Lowell Staples of Wyckliffe, B. C., which was announced to take place Wednesday evening, had been cancelled.

At first no explanation was given at the bride's home, and immediately rumor ran riot. Miss Caldwell, a recent debutante, had been popular and the marriage was to be one of the notably brilliant nuptials of the season.

A large bridal party had been arranged, every detail completed, every plan announced and several smart luncheons and dinner parties already given for the bride and her attendants.

Early Monday morning Miss Caldwell left her home, ostensibly for the purpose of shopping. Nothing further was heard from her until her father, T. R. Caldwell, received a message from her, saying she was in Corinth, Miss., and had a few moments before been married to Gilluide St. Keleather of Asheville, N. C.

Mr. Caldwell was shocked, the mother of the bride prostrated. Meanwhile efforts to reach and stop Mr. Staples, en route to Memphis to claim his bride, were futile, and later in the day that gentleman arrived at the Peabody Hotel in this city, only to be told by Bartlett Tully, who was to have served as best man, that his bride had gone as the wife of another man.

Mr. Staples, the unfortunate man in the case, is a resident of Wyckliffe, B. C., a man of means and culture, and had in waiting for his intended bride a handsome home in that city.

VEHICLES IN A MIX-UP

A horse attached to a vehicle and waiting outside the Windsor Hotel on Brock street, this morning pulled the weight off the sidewalk, which fell at its feet. The horse, becoming scared, backed, and the vehicle crashing into a team of horses attached to a water cart at its rear, caused them also to back, with the result that things were becoming somewhat mixed. The owner of the culprit, however, soon put things in order and no damage resulted.

If your tongue is coated try Miller's Granules. Wm. Madill.

TAMPERED WITH SWITCHES

The attention of the authorities is called to the fact that the switches on the G. T. R., inside the city, are being tampered with by children living in the vicinity of the diamond. The switches in the yard being left unlocked, are often turned over to the opposite track by these youngsters, and in case they forget to turn them back, serious trouble might result. It is advisable for citizens living in this part of the city, to warn their children against such infringements, and save accident.

THE DAIRY CONDITIONS ARE SASISFACTORY

TORONTO, JULY 21.—In spite of the hot weather early in July, which caused a considerable shrinkage in the milk supply, dairymen in Ontario expect a fairly profitable season. The dairy instructors appointed by the Provincial Government have given every assistance possible towards keeping up the standard of quality in all kinds of dairy products. Cool weather and rains during the past few days have helped to revive the pastures and to hasten the growth of aftergrass in the hay fields.

In Western Ontario, the decreased milk supply during the hot spell resulted in some cheese factories making several cheese a day less than they did the preceding month. Many creameries reported a considerable falling off in the receipts of cream. Many producers of milk prepared for dry weather by growing soiling crops or had on hand summer silage. These patrons thus had a good flow of milk for a greater length of time—and during the period of comparatively high prices—than did those that neglected such preparation.

In the early part of the season, the make of creamery butter in Western Ontario was heavy, but lower prices than last year encouraged consumption, and the cold storage houses absorbed large quantities for future trade, so that the stocks have been kept moving. The price of cheese has ruled higher than last year and some cheese factories, although opening by making butter, have turned over to cheese making again. Some sections, notably the Brantford and Simcoe sections, are going quite extensively into butter making.

A few factories opened the season by skimming the milk making casein from the skim-milk and shipping the cream chiefly to the United States, but the price for butter over the line did not allow this to increase profitably so that shipments of cream across the border have, up to the present, been comparatively light. There will likely be a considerable demand shortly from nearby cities, and from the milk condensers who usually have to extend their property as the season advances, as the supply furnished by local dairymen begins to shrink.

The Cheese Yield.

In regard to the cheese yield, Mr. Frank Herns, Chief Dairy Instructor, for Western Ontario, reports as follows: "One feature of the cheese business that is worthy of special note is the number of pounds of milk required to make a pound of cheese. In some sections this is rather high and may be accounted for to a large extent by the low average test of the milk. Why the average test should be lower is more difficult to explain, except that, as only about ten per cent. of the cheese factories pay for milk according to value for cheese making, less attention is given to this point and energies bent towards producing quantity.

"Since the yield of cheese depends largely on the fat and casein content together with the sanitary condition of the milk it can readily be seen that it is practically impossible for a cheese maker, no matter how skilful, to secure a large yield of cheese from milk testing below in these two constituents or from milk not properly cooled.

"If producers will study this question thoroughly they will come to realize that in the majority of cases it is not the fault of the cheese maker that the 'average' is 'high'. They will also see that when milk of different percentages of fat is 'pooled' for cheese making, the rich milk does not receive full value in the division of the proceeds.

The quality of cheese and butter up to the end of June was never finer, but since the extremely warm weather set in this high quality has been difficult to maintain. In some cases the milk and cream is not properly cooled at the farm; it arrives at the factories at too high a temperature and consequently is overripe and gassy. Raw material of this kind cannot be made into the finest cheese or butter. The makers are putting forth a special effort to keep the factories in a clean sanitary condition and they deserve credit for the improvement made."

Better Curing Rooms.

Many cheese factories are in need of better insulated curing rooms. There is a wide difference in the texture of cheese held in curing rooms at 60 degrees, compared with those held in ordinary rooms, the temperature of many of which got up to 88 degrees. Such high temperatures injure the flavour and texture of the finest made cheese. Some creameries also need better cold storages, as it is difficult to properly keep butter even for a few days in poor storages, so that it will retain its fine flavour.

Hogs seem to be more plentiful this year in Western Ontario, as most factories report a shortage of whey.

That the situation in Eastern Ontario is not quite so encouraging as in the western districts, is evidenced by the following report sent from Mr. T. A. Thompson, secretary of the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association:

"Cattle wintered well and went out on grass in good shape. The pastures have been excellent up to the present, and the flow of milk exceedingly large, but the excessive heat and drought of the past two weeks are fast drying the pastures. The percentage of dairymen who supply green feed for their cattle during the dry weather in summer is very small.

The chief dependence for pasture after this time of year is the second growth of clover, and as the clover was badly winter killed and as there has been no rain since the hay was cut, the prospects for aftergrass is very poor. Until the corn is ready to feed, which will be a month at least, there will be a decided decrease in the flow of milk."

The Opium Smugglers Are A Wily Lot Used Queer Devices

Special to The Examiner:

HONG KONG., JULY 18.—With the suppression of the regular opium traffic in China, smugglers look for the extended development of an active industry by illicit ways. Persian opium will be the chief supply, for Persia is increasing the growth of the poppy as fast as India is reducing it.

"For ways that are dark and for tricks that are vain the heaten Chinese is indeed peculiar, and in nothing is this more clearly demonstrated than in smuggling.

Thus spoke a member of the Hong Kong secret service at Macao.

"We always look for it where we least expect to find it," he continued, "but our usual find is only the place that it occupied.

Many Hiding Places.

"All these coast steamers are burrowed full of holes to hide opium in as an old teredo eaten pile. We know these nooks and crannies and cosy corners as well as the Chinks who made them, and when we're tipped off that contraband opium is going by a certain steamer, of course we go off and rake her with a fine tooth comb.

"Ninety-nine times out of a hundred, no opium. Then, perhaps, the Chinkies get in a row over fan-tan or the run to Swatow, and there officers get word from an 'unknown friend' that it might interest them to look behind, say, the third pannel aft the first starboard cabin port. Result, a hundred pounds or more of thin bright tins of opium and a lot of protestingly innocent Chinkies. Do you think that we missed that particular cubby hole? Don't believe it. We didn't miss a square inch of honeycombing on the old hulk; but by the same sleight-of-hand work that nearly always beats us, they managed to pass it around from one place to another while we were on the search.'

Silk and Opium.

"Speaking of silk and opium," said the detective, "there was rather an amusing incident occurred at Amoy last year. A merchant of that city was importing flowered silk from Canton via Hong Kong, and in one of his shipments, to his great surprise, inside of a couple of dozen of the bolts he found long flattened cylinders of tin full of opium, around which were wound just enough silk to cover them. The contraband drug aggregated several thousand dollars in value. Evidently in some manner confusion had arisen among the smugglers as to which bolts contained the opium, and the wrong ones had been taken to the merchant.

"But that was nothing to the smuggling 'machine' they had rigged up on a couple of Chinese steamers that ran down to Saigon and Bangkok a few years ago. A 'public spirited' Chinese merchant of the French port made the steamship company an offer to install clocks in the saloons, smoking rooms, and even in the state rooms, if in return he was allowed to place advertisements of his firm of rice and sugar importers upon their dials. Whether the company stood in or not we never found out, but at any rate the offer was accepted. The advertisement on the face of the clocks was sufficient excuse for the presence of the clocks, even in the state rooms and the fact the clocks in even the second class cabins were large enough for hotel offices was remarked merely as a piece of mingled Oriental enterprise and eccentricity.

Smmuggler Gets Rich.

"The fact that 'advertising pays' even in China, soon became evident, for not a year had gone by before Hop Ling had built a new home for himself, doubled the size of the godowns in Sagon and Bangkok and established new branches in Singapore and Manilla. Then he started a knitting factory equiped with foreign machinery; then a rubber plantation; then a bank; then one day a coolie, staggering under a package labelled, 'lacquer plaques' stumbled on the steps at Hongkong and sent a half dozen disk-shaped tins of opium rolling down the dock."

"Several similar packages of "lacquer plaques" were waiting in an unassuming little sampan alongside the dock, and it was recalled that others had gone off to the 'B—' the night before. Well, we searched the old hulk from stem to stern, from keel to bridge, without finding a trace of anything suspicious and the chances are that, for all the good it would have done us, we might have been searching yet if, in tapping a stateroom wall to sound if a panel had been sawed, I had not chanced to notice that one of the big clocks was sagging on its fastenings.

Drug Found in Clocks.

Thinking the banging might have loosened some of the screws, I put my hand up to steady it while I tapped again and the weight of it gave the thing away in an instant. Each of the 50 or fore 'gift' clocks was made with a neat compartment in the back just large enough to take in one of these 10-pound cakes of opium, and in our careful searches for hidden recesses in the walls we had never been observant enough to notice that all the clocks were three-quarters of an inch thicker than they should have been.

"The clocks were of a common German type and manufacture, but the compartments had been so cunningly added by Chines workmen that the joining was only evident upon the closest examination. The tins had been made at a little shop on the Praya.

"Hop Ling, having also been informed of what had happened, came aboard, declared the opium and had it taken to his godown. The clocks remained on the 'B——', and her sister ship for a year or so, but were of no further use in augmenting Hop Ling's rapidly growing fortune, the realisation of which, I suppose, was what prompted the old chap to have them taken out a few months ago and presented to a French mission in Yunnan-fu.'

A WONDER WORKER

"It heals like magic," is a favorite expression when Dr. Chase's Ointment is used. It works quickly, stops all itching at once, often heals in a single night. For eczema, salt rheum, barbers' itch, skin irritations or eruptions, it is a most satisfactory treatment. Being antiseptic it prevents blood poisoning.

MORE RELIEF IS NEEDED AT COCHRANE

and the husband drew this to-day, and made arrangements to buy lumber and start a new home. I met him coming from the house to-day, hurrying up town, and his wife explained as she leaned over the cradle of her infant that he had dropped his pocketbook with all their worldly wealth somewhere on the street a few minutes before. This is one of the families the relief committee plan to help when the money comes along.

Triplets and Twins.

Another is a Frenchman and his family of 13, the oldest under 17 years of age. In the family are triplets and two pairs of twins. They lost every thing in the fire.

Another French family comprises 10 members, the oldest of the children no more than 14 years of age. They have been here only a couple of months and spent their last money to build the little home that was burned out.

One settler worked at home with his four children, clearing the farm, while the wife remained in town and worked as a charwoman. The eldest of the children is not over ten. Quite a clearing had been made on the property and the little home was just completed when along came the fire and wiped the buildings completely out. The mother has returned to the farm to help rebuild the home, and occasionally makes a trip into town with a bag in which she packs provisions out to the little ones.

Another man, who had sunk his all into a little home, lost everything in the fire and has worked steadily ever since to purchase enough to buy a stove. Two years ago this man arrived from England and with his small stake bought a couple of horses. They died on him and he has been eking out a livelihood doing odd jobs about town. He will be among those helped with a small quantity of lumber.

A widow with eight children, five of them under twelve years of age, had just sold her house for $1,500. The money had not been paid over and she is left penniless and homeless.

"Why don't they go out you ask," said Manager Lloyd of the Imperial Bank. "Where in heavens name are they to go? Their homes were here and they will have to be looked after."

At the relief kitchen in the Union Station there are many pitiable sights. The crowds are fed at a long table in the waiting room and they are well looked after. Dave Bernard, a very capable chef, is in charge, and with the materials available, he prepares a very appetizing meal.

To-day there was only a spoonful of butter left and this was offered to Mr. G. Hector Clemes, when he dropped in for a cup of tea, and a biscuit, but he refused it and turned the small bit of butter over to a woman with a small child, who was sitting forlornly in a corner eating her solitary meal.

Along the counter were ranged men of all nationalities, while at the rear of the room was an Englishman, who, with the pride of his race, had taken his wife and children as far from the crowd as possible and had rigged up a makeshift table out of old soap boxes.

At Porcupine.

Porcupine, July 21.—Carloads of supplies expected to-day did not materialise. To-night there are no food supplies left in Porcupine except those which the relief committee buys from local merchants. A privately consigned carload will be commandeered by the relief committee. R. S. Gourlay, president of the Toronto Board of Trade, is here, and went over to South Porcupine this morning. After a conference with the relief committee he wishes The Star to make the following statement:

"I have nothing but words of praise for the work of this relief committee. The situation has been handled excellently at this end. I wish, however, to warn the public against an influx of men looking for work on reconstruction. Already too many destitute people are here."

Relief Committee is Self-Sacrificing.

As an instance of the self-sacrificing spirit with which the members of the Porcupine relief committee are imbued, The Star can vouch that Cyril D. Young, the chairman, early this morning gave his blanket to a boy of 13 who was coatless, and with a block of wood for a pillow, was found asleep on a bench in the relief office. His father lay on another bench in like condition, having just reached here from the bush.

Mr. Foster, of the relief committee, was all ready to take his annual vacation at Temagami, when the fire broke out. He is a busy man, and snatches a holiday only when he can get it. He has been working all day and half the night since the fire, and his opportunity for vacation is past.

Another feature is the fact that neither Mr. Young nor Mr. Foster has any place to sleep except on the benches around town, which are usually filled by worn-out prospectors.

The relief committee office has been forced to move to allow the Lyric Theatre to come in. Casey Moran, of the Porcupine Press, has rented the theatre building and the relief committee have been offered the use of the stage.

Are Organizing a Labour Bureau.

An effort will be made to organize a labour bureau. Claim owners will be urged to have assessment work done now. The Government will take 150 men for the colonization road and 50 men on the T. and N. O.

Mrs. C. W. Stower, a prospector, famous through the Porcupine district, applied yesterday for relief supplies at South Porcupine.

The official death list is still 62. George Dawley and his companion, Resson, in McArthur township, are still missing. They have been gone 16 days with only 10 days' provisions.

REGAL HEAD

How often do we hear or see this expression used in describing a beautiful woman?

Denude that head of its hair and instead of a queenly, royal bearing we have a fright. The hair makes all the difference. To have that glorious abundance of radiant hair which always crowns "a regal head" one should use Newbro's Herpicide.

Herpicide represents the last word in scientific hair culture. It destroys the dandruff germ, checks falling hair and corrects generally diseases of the hair and scalp.

The positive results and its delicate but refreshing odour recommends Newbro's Herpicide to ladies of refinement everywhere.

A 5 POUND BASS

Not often are bass or other fry taken from the Otonabee, by rod, on the wharfside, of very large proportions. But it fell to the lot of Mr. John Moyes, Bolivar street, on Thursday morning, of last week, while casting the line (not in Largo Bay) at Crawford's Grove, to get a bite, and no mistake.

On examining the book to see the cause of all the commotion, there was brought to view a bass, which, on being scaled, weighed five pounds. This is, so far as other anglers of the district know, the largest bass taken from the Otonabee for a considerable period. Of course, it is now past the stage of seeking its own livelihood.

Mr. Moyes, it may be said, is a recent importation from the Old Land. For many a year he has been a keen "disciple of Izaak Walton." While in Glasgow he has gone off alone down the Clyde to a beauty spot—Wemyss Bay—from Saturday to Monday, as a rule, and there, during that time cast and recast his line with varying success.

He is an adept at handling the rod and it is no unusual sight to see him wending his way, bag on back and tackle under arm, down to his "happy hunting grounds," at 4 o'clock, ere the day dawn and the shadows flee away! Zest to his casting pow-

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

"YES, I knew it was wrong, but I didn't have any idea how wrong."

"Again and again I have that said to me by young girls,' a well known woman specialist said to me the other day, "and I think it is a shrieking indictment of the parents that let such a state of affairs be possible."

So do I.

It points to a neglect or a careless ness or a foolish reticence that seems to me well night criminal.

Speech is silver and silence is golden, is a good enough rule for many occasions, but there are conditions when silence is leaden and the right kind of speech is golden, and I thoroughly believe that this is one of them.

Self-knowledge does not necessarily bring self-control, but it certainly supplies one incentive towards it.

Even if they had definitely known "how wrong," these girls might not have had the strength to save themselves, but they certainly would have been much more likely to.

And this chance was denied them by those who profess to, and probably do, love them more than anyone else on earth—their mothers.

We are hearing a great deal lately from President Elliott and others about the advisability of having full instruction in sex hygiene made a part of the school curriculum.

It seems very sad to me that that is necessary.

Of course I know that that is better than to have our children grope about and piece together the mysteries of sex in pathetically crooked and incomplete form from what they may read in patent medicine advertisements or what they may hear from their companions.

But I think the home and not the school room is the proper place for such instruction and that the best results will come when it is given in the home.

Doubtless until the American parents awaken to their duty in this matter, school instruction will be vastly better than none at all, but I do hope it will not be many years before fathers and mothers will come to realize more fully their tremendous responsibility in this direction and our sons and daughters shall no longer have to fight their battles in the hampering darkness of ignorance or garbled knowledge.

Brakeman Died Suddenly On G. T. R. At Campbellford

(Lindsay Warder)

A shocking fatality occurred this morning when a young man named Shackster died in the G. T. R. passenger train at Campbellford. Mr. Shackster was a young brakeman, about twenty-seven years of age, on the York way-freight, and had been in town writing on his rules.

He had been ill before coming here and had laid off, and was getting on nicely, so thought it a good opportunity to write the rules. He came to town about Tuesday, but was taken ill while writing, and forced to consult a doctor, who informed him that he had better go home.

He took the morning train which leaves here at 7.10, and had just arrived at Campbellford (his home), when he dropped dead. No particulars have been received, as yet, as to the cause of his death, but as he was crushed between some cars some time ago, he may have received internal injuries then.

Deceased was a bright young man and well lived, so that his death came as a severeshock.

A Garden Party will be held on the Lawn at 276 Reid St., on Tuesday evening at 8 p.m. under the auspices of the Ladies Aid of Knox church. There will be a good musical program and refreshments will be served. Admission—Children 5c., Adults 10c. Preparations are being made for a large crowd, and an enjoyable evening is promised.

Books That are Popular Among the Russian Children

Literature of the Sherlock Holmes and Nat Pinkerton type retains its popularity among Russian children. In an interesting report on juvenile reading presented to the Library Congress now being held in St. Petersburg, the following criticism, written by a Moscow schoolgirl, was quoted: "I adore Pinkerton. How brilliant is the picture of this prodigious man, who has consecrated his life to the extermination of criminals, these plagues of the human race." Similar tributes are paid to Sherlock Holmes by youthful readers. Hans Andersen is the most popular author among Moscow children under 12 years old. Grimm comes second. The favorite foreign writers are Mrs. Beecher Stowe, Defoe, Jules Verne, Mark Twain and Mayne Reide.

THE NATION'S HEALTH

A Society Preparing to Take a Physical Census of the Empire

What some people of scientific mind regard as an ideal census—and what others will consider an appalling inquisition—is foreshadowed in a memorial which has been presented to the Prime Minister by the Royal Anthropological Society. This society's chief aim is to see whether mankind is going backward or forward, and why; and among its subsidiary aims is the collecting of information about all the races of the British Empire. Hitherto it has been uphill work. There have been comparatively few who felt any real pleasure in being measured or having the color of their eyes and the width of their foreheads tabulated and filed for reference. Mr. Asquith has declined to give a Government grant, but the society has now approached the Colonial Premiers and asked them to set up, in their various states, investigation staffs who, acting under a central body in London, would measure the people of the Empire.

One of the chief movers in this appeal, Mr. John Gray, of the Patent Office, explained its aims. "Our ideal," he said, "would be to have the census enlarged so as to give full particulars about the physique of all the Empire peoples—their height, girth, skull measurements, and strength of vision, and the color of hair and eyes. This would take an enormous time, and the enumerators would have to be far more numerous than now, as well as being specially trained. It has been done, however, in India, the enumerators doing the measuring. A more practicable step would be to have a staff of experts in each area, say a county, who would measure people who volunteered. Three per cent. of the population would be ample. At present our scanty statistics do not justify definite pronouncements. Galton estimated that we were a far less athletic race than the ancient Greeks, but it has been pretty certainly established from the examination of skulls of skeletons that the average Englishman of to-day is practically the same, physically, as the Neolithic man, who lived 15,000 years ago. But in these days of quick changes physical deterioration may go on rapidly owing to town life, machinery that does away with manual labor, impure air, and other causes. When the physical census is established we can put our finger at once on the weak spots in the nation's health sheet."

KILLED IN THE ALPS

A fatal Alpine accident has prevented a marriage, the fiancee witnessing the death of her lover. Herr Coedever, of Berne, was taking a walk with his fiancee in the lower aura Alps, where guides are not required. While crossing a wooden bridge a portion of it collapsed, the wood being rotted by the winter snows, and Herr Coedever fell 100 feet into the mountain stream below, his head being seriously injured in the rocks. The girl attempted to descend to his aid, but failed, and went to the nearest house for assistance. The rescue party found Coedever still living, but he died soon after being taken out of the water. The bride is distracted.

ROBBED SOLOMON'S TEMPLE

Sheikhs Who Are Accused Have Been Sent For Trial

The Sheikhs of the Mosque of Omar and other officials, including an Armenian, who are accused of aiding and abetting a party of explorers in the alleged removal of priceless relics of Solomon's Temple from the hill on which the mosque stands, have been sent, under an armed escort, to Beyrout to undergo trial by a special court. The arrests are in connection with excavation work by an English syndicate, at the head of which was Captain Parker, brother of the Earl of Morley, to find the treasures of King Solomon, which were supposed to have been indicated by a cryptogram in the Talmud. Rumors that sacrilege had been committed led to a riot and the excavations were abandoned. Captain Parker's work was carried on with the approval of the Turkish Government. The Englishmen emphatically deny that anything has been taken away.

SEBASTOPOL IN PICTURE

Episodes of the defence of Sebastopol will shortly be shown on the cinematograph. With the consent of the local military authorities, soldiers will engage in the fighting to be represented, a whole infantry division with fortress and field artillery being employed. Several thousand shells and other explosives have been ordered, and a company of sappers will shortly begin laying the necessary mines. The mock combatants will wear uniforms of the day—Russian, British, French and Turkish.

ANGRY SAMOAN WOMEN

Armed With Whips and Sticks They Attacked a Male Critic

The latest news from the South Seas brings a story which illustrates, in a fashion at once comic and serious, the chief difficulty of the German empire-builder in Samoa, to wit, the readiness of the German settler to intermarry with the native women. The white population of the German colony is about [illegible] and there are already about [illegible] hundred half-castes. Of the twenty married [illegible] twelve have Samoan wives. As the native girls nearly always speak English and refuse to learn German, the frequency of these mesalliances causes particular disquiet in colonial circles in the Fatherland. In April last a German settler named Michaelis took it into his head to express these truths in a letter to the colonial newspaper, adding that quite apart from race considerations the Samoan women made inefficient and unworthy wives. Seldom has an author had a more gratifying proof of his power to arouse interest and inspire action. The very next morning a deputation of several hundred Samoan women of various shades waited upon him armed with whips, sticks, and gardening tools. The police were just in time to rescue Michaelis by taking him into custody. But the dusky amazons scored in spite of the police, for the authorities had to bundle their calumniator out of the island as the only means of preventing serious trouble.

MRS. DAVID JAYNE HILL

Members of the diplomatic circle in Berlin are wondering what course Mrs. David Jayne Hill, wife of the United States Ambassador, will take to extricate herself from the social predicament in which she has been placed as a result of her husband's enforced stay in Berlin. Rumor says that she will seek seclusion in one of the smaller German watering places till his discharge papers arrive.

THE WORKING HEN

Select the Best Layers as the Foundation of a Flock

There is just as much difference in hens as in horses—it is the individual capacity to put [illegible] that makes a hen or a horse valuable, and pure-bred horses and hens have been bred for this sort of a capacity to make them good, because that is what careful breeding is for.

Otherwise, we might just as well go back to "pennyroyal" cows, scrub horses and mongrel fowls without considering their blood lines, writes W. M. Phillips, in the Twentieth Century Farmer.

If eggs are more profitable than poultry for market, then we should seek to select our best layers as the dams of our flocks. This is not such a hard task as one might think. If we select the long-bodied, bright-combed, healthy-eating hen we will find her among the best layers.

The hen that is out as soon as the poultry house is opened in the morning and lingers out of doors until all the others have gone to roost is almost sure to be the best layer in the flock.

A good layer is indicated by a big crop, legs set well apart and a body that is deep in the rear.

No delicate, dainty hen was ever a good layer; she lacks the vitality that leads to great powers of reproduction. The good layer is always alert; and any hen can be kept tame and quiet if she is properly treated. What a test of patience it is to have the hens dig up things that we have planted and get in the way in the places where they have no particular business!

It is often a temptation to throw clubs at them or set the dog on them when they get into mischief.

Hens lay better when yarded than they do when allowed to have a run. By this means they are kept from learning how to get into mischief.

A CHILD PIANIST

Remarkable Work of a Lad Eight Years of Age

"Solomon," who gave a pianoforte recital at the Queen's Hall, London, does not boast a beard, neither does he wear spectacles, for he is only eight years old, and, for his age, he is perhaps the greatest pianist in the world. His father, who is a tailor in Whitechapel, had a cheap piano, and at this instrument the child would sit for hours playing. Nothing could disturb him. The board school which he attended had a display one day, and "Solomon" played the marches for the children. Those who heard him were so enraptured that they took the boy to the Mme. Mathilde School of Music, which he still attends.

When he first played on a grand piano, Mme. Mathilde said "Solomon" was a sight to behold. He waved his arms quite in the Backhaus style, and though he had never before seen pedals (his father's piano had none), he drew cries of astonishment from his onlookers.

The child talks, dreams and thinks piano, and his parents and friends look upon him as one of the seven wonders of the age.

Incidentally, he is composing an opera.

Canadian General Team Has Fine Chance For Ontario Championship

All lovers of association football are advised to keep August 12th open as on that day the crack Canadian General Electric team, for the second time in succession champions of the Midland Football League, will meet the fast Baracas of Toronto, here, in the semi-finals for the Ontario soccer championship. This should be one of the finest soccer games ever seen in Peterborough. It is certain that this city has never been represented by a faster or more expert eleven than that which galloped through the Midland League this season without a defeat. Fast, clean, with splendid combination, teamwork and scoring ability as well as a strong defence the C. G. E. team is a formidable aggregation and close followers of the game say that they have an excellent chance to carry off the Ontario honours. It would be a great leather in Peterborough's cap if the gallant team succeeds in their endeavour. Peterborough people can do their share in helping to bring about this much desired result by liberally patronising the game on August 12.

Riverside Park will be secured for the occasion and the game should be a grand exhibition. The Peterborough Baseball Club, recognising the importance of the Baraca-Canadian-General game, have cancelled arrangements for a game on that day, and will leave the date open in order not to conflict with the soccer players. It is up to the sport-loving people of Peterborough to turn out in large numbers, as a big crowd will go a long way towards solving the problem of financing the team in its trip towards the championship. So far this season the C. G. E. team has had to depend for itssupport upon collections taken up at the games, and, needless to say, there was no overflow. Give them a bumper house August 12th. Keep the date open, and attend this game. The electricians are deserving of support.

Bookie Gives 3 to 1 On The Giants' Chances

A baseball race that is all of that and more, too, in the National League, has aroused speculative gentlemen who formerly did their literary work at the race tracks. A bookmaker who has New England affiliations and operates in Boston and other cities of that section has a slate prepared on which the Giants are 3 to 1 favourites. Investors of this basis of calculation are not over plentiful, but the fact that the Giants are rated so highly indicates that there is thorough appreciation of John McGraw's effort to mould a team that will figure as pennant clutchers instead of chasers. Chicago is quoted at 4 to 1. Pittsburg 5 to 1, St. Louis 15 to 1, Cincinnati at 25 to 1, with any price against the others.

There is no known method of curbing the betting tendencies between individuals, but the public bookmaking on baseball can have only one ultimate result, and that is not pleasing to contemplate. The element of luck enters so largely into baseball that it is not a public gambling proposition that can be tolerated without possibility of scandal. A National League official recently declared that some scandal-monger would be working overtime if a league race panned out different than said S. M. prognosticates. Wholesale discouragement of bookmaking on baseball appears to be the only positive cure for a disease that leaves horrible blemishes on the sport that has thus far prospered without returns from speculators.

MENORIAL RE-UNION

Myra's pruning saw sank through the last of the condemned peach limbs and she turned her flushed face to the breeze coming up from the valley.

It had been a brisk morning's work, pruning the little peach orchard, and the wind was refreshing. And ordinarily it was refreshing to look off into the valley. That was what had brought her father up here many years before, and its beauty had been part of Myra's inheritance. But as she glanced down across the steplike hills to the town fifteen miles away a shade of bitterness, of resentment even, came to her face.

"Myra, o-oh, Myra!" rose a quavering call from below.

"Coming, father, coming," she answered. "I've just finished."

Thirty feet down the narrow mountain path, on the next plateau step, was a small vine-covered cottage, and below was the vegetable garden. Wandering at will were a small army of chickens and an outflanking corps of turkeys. Myra, with a very little help from her frail father, looked after them all.

The old man was sitting on a bench outside. "I got to thinking of fifty years ago and its glorious deeds," he said, "and I—I forgot about the home duties. I think I must be getting old, Myra, into the dreaming age. The mood was too strong for me, so I went in and put on my uniform. The trappings were so much a part of the four years that wearing them made it seem more real. But the old man's mood will soon pass away, and to-morrow he will try to do his share of the work, and the next day—"

"The next day he will not do a thing but sit on the bench here with his uniform on and tell me about the marching away fifty years before, and the brave deeds that followed," interrupted Myra. "And I shall get up a nice dinner and sing some of the old war songs afterward. We will celebrate the anniversary ourselves, and won't even think of the—the re-union down yonder. We——" She hesitated, choked, and then her indignation gained control and she burst out:

"It's a shame, shame, shame, shame, father! Your own company, that you led through the war, and you the ranking officer left, and they haven't even asked you to the Memorial Day re-union! I suppose it's because we live up in the mountains and are poor, but the soldiers shouldn't think of such things, even if some of them are very rich. It's that second lieutenant's work. He owns a mill somewhere out west, I've heard, and is the next ranking officer, and he wants all the glory to himself. I hate such—"

"Daughter, daughter," remonstrated the old man. "I don't like to hear you say such things. The boys are all true, noble fellows, I know, for I camped and fought with them four years, and that very Lieut. Breck saved my life once at the risk of his own. We were like brothers, and I cannot recall a single cowardly or unworthy man among them. It was a long time ago, Myra, and other things have come in between. Some of the boys may think I am dead, and the others have lost sight of me through the years. We are a long way back in the mountains. It is merely losing sight of me, not ignoring."

Myra shook her head. "You were their leader," she said, "and it was their place to hunt you up. The re-union is only two days off. Maybe it's just forgetting, but I don't like it. I——" Then she caught sight of the distress in his face. "Forgive me, father," she pleaded. "I didn't mean to hurt your feelings so. We won't say anything more about them, but have a nice little celebration all to ourselves, and you shall talk of the brave days and I will listen as no audience ever listened before."

The old man stroked the bowed head siftly. "So we will, daughter, so we will," he agreed. "But they were all brave and true men, those followers of mine, and the ones who are still living cannot have changed. I wish you could see and know them as they really are. I hope——" He paused with the sentence unfinished, the wistfulness still in his face.

"What, father?"

"Why—oh, nothing much. Only I was wondering whether we would be able to hear some of the music if the wind should be blowing strongly this way. It would be nice."

"Fifteen miles away?"

"Only fifteen miles, and if the wind blew strongly. We heard the battle of Bull Run twice that distance as we were being hurried to the front. Hark!" leaning forward a little. Then he suddenly straightened and shook his head.

"An old man's vagaries. Myra," he smiled. "I thought I heard strains of music— memory of Bull Run, I suppose."

A few minutes and then Myra sprang excitedly to her feet, her face full of wonder. "There is music, father!" she cried. "There is! Listen!"

Clearly and distinctly now it came, borne on the breeze, and evidently beyond a bend of the mountain path where they could not see. The old man had risen, too, with his one hand behind his ear to hear more clearly.

"It's a march we used to play in battle and after victory," he whispered. "I seem to hear Bob Tyrrell playing it now. But Bob's dead, killed in the very last battle before the surrender. What does it mean, Myra?"

But Myra could only shake her head and wait.

Five minutes, and all the time the music growing clearer and more triumphant as it drew nearer. Then around the bend they came, a man on horseback and two men and a driver in a waggon behind, in which was an empty seat. One of the two men in the waggon was playing on a snare drum, the other on a cornet.

Straight up the mountain path they came, the musicians playing steadily, changing from one march to another, all of which were old and familiar to the frail man who listened with wondering but rapturous face.

Not until they had approached to within a few yards of the bench did the music cease and the horseman slide from his animal. Raising his hand in a quick military salute, he sprang forward and caught the hand of the man in front.

"Lieutenant," he exclaimed, his voice breaking a little, "we meet again after more than forty years. I have been in the West and returned only a few weeks ago to spend the remainder of my life in the old neighbourhood. When the talk of a reunion began I made enquiries about you and wrote letters to several postoffices. But no one knew of your exact whereabouts, though they seemed to think [illegible] Only yesterday did we learn from a hunter that you were in this section. Now we want you to go back with us and take charge of the reunion—to lead the old company, you know. And—and," hesitating a little, "we will have an easy carriage for you to ride in advance of us, so the strain need not be very great."

But the old leader was standing erect now, and his hand had ceased to tremble.

"Thank you, Lieut. Breck," he answered, with the old time ring in his voice, "but I shall ride a horse at the head of my company, as in the old days, though the charge be only a peaceful one, through the village street instead of toward the mouths of cannons. You need not fear for my strength. But I do not understand about the music. My ears told me it was Bob Tyrrell playing the drum, and my eyes declare it is Bob on the seat yonder. And yet I saw poor Bob killed."

"It's Bob's son. When he heard I was coming he insisted on coming, too, and approaching your home with music. But we must be starting back, for there is a long ride before us. We have secured accommodations for you and your daughter at the hotel, and the waggon is an easy one. You have someone you could leave to look after things?"

"Yes, an old negro woman, who has a cabin just below us. I will call her."

They had been grasping hands all this time and looking into each other's eyes. Now the strong grasp loosened and the old leader went forward to speak with the men in the waggon. Myra slipped into the house, her face working.

"I—I don't understand what old comrades could be to each other," she whispered to herself. "I never realised. But I know now. Dear, dear, father! And his dear, dear soldiers!"

BASEBALL

The Toronto players agree that Al Shaw's homer into the centre field bleachers yesterday was the longest hit of the season.

"Tim Jordan hit one over the right field fence at Buffalo," said one of them, "that went on a line from the bat and cleared the fence by about five feet, going the same height all the way, and that travelled a tremendous distance, but I think Shaw's hit yesterday was a longer wallop. However, it was enough to win the game, and that was satisfaction enough."

Shaw has now made 11 home runs, being only one behind Jordan. Between them they have made more homers than any other team on the league circuit.

$3.50 Recipe Free, For Weak Kidneys

Relieves Urinary and Kidney Troubles, Backache, Straining, Swelling, Etc.

Stops Pain in the Bladder, Kidneys and Back

Wouldn't it be nice within a week or so to begin to say goodbye forever to the scalding, dribbling, straining, or too frequent passage of urine; the forehead and the back-of-the-head aches; the stitches and pains in the back; the growing muscle weakness; spots before the eyes; yellow skin; sluggish bowels; swollen eyelids; leg cramps; unnatural short breath; sleeplessness and the despondency?

I have a recipe for these troubles that you can depend on, and if you want to make a quick recovery, you ought to write and get a copy of it. Many a doctor would charge you $3.50 just for writing this prescription, but I have it and will be glad to send it to you entirely free. Just drop me a line like this: Dr. A. E. Robinson, K1810 Luck Building, Detroit Mich., and I will send it by return mail in a plain envelope. As you will see when you get it, this recipe contains only pure, harmless remedies, but it has great healing and pain-conquering power.

It will quickly show its power once you use it, so I think you had better see what it is without delay. I will send you a copy free—you can use it and cure yourself at home.

Contemplate!

Do not weigh anything in a second, but take a second thought when a druggist or dealer asks you to accept a substitute for DR. FOWLER'S Extract of Wild Strawberry.

This preparation has been on the market for over 65 years, and so far as we know has never yet failed to either relieve or cure the worst case of DIARRHOEA, DYSENTERY, COLIC, CRAMPS OR PAINS IN THE STOMACH, CHOLERA MORBUS, CHOLERA INFANTUM, SUMMER COMPLAINT, OR ANY LOOSENESS OF THE BOWELS.

Mrs. A. J. McLellan, London, Ont., writes:—"It is with much pleasure I write to say that I have used Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry with great success. Last summer my little boy, 18 months old, was attacked two or three times with Diarrhoea, but each time, after one day's doses, he was all right again. My husband was also taken bad one night. The next day three doses cured him. I always insist on Dr. Fowler's being given me."

If you want to be on the safe side, ask for Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, and insist on getting what you ask for.

The original is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont. See that our name is on the wrapper. Price 35 cents.

Trent Canal Guide Book.

—Just issued from the Examiner presses, a most comprehensive and artistic reference and guide book of the Trent Canal, containing a host of valuable and hitherto unpublished information concerning the waterway, compiled by Mr. E. S. Clarry. This book gives precisely the information about the Canal that is so much in demand. Containing as it does, charts of the lakes throughout the system from Orillia and Barrie on Lake Simcoe to Healey's Falls on the Trent, with the main steamer channel clearly indicated it will be of invaluable assistance to the owners of power boats. The maps and charts which the guide book contains are alone worth many times the price of the publication, and they will be appreciated by all navigators in the district. The book is beautifully illustrated by artistic photographs of many points of interest along the system and will be much in demand, if only for souvenir purposes. It is now on sale at Trebilcock Bros. Peterborough Book Store.

HAD AUDIENCE WITH KING

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, ENG., JULY 22.—Premier Asquith had an audience for an hour this morning with King George. It is understood that they discussed the latest political developments regarding the veto, and arranging for the creation of new Liberal peers, if the Lords make it necessary.

CANADIAN WINS CUP

Bisley Camp, July 22—Staff Sergt James Freeborn, Hamilton, is the winner of the Steward Challenge Cup. In Grand Aggregate competition Russel was third and F. Morris, twelfth.

THE KING'S PRIZE WON

Bisley, July 22—Pte. W. J. Clifford of the Royal Grenadiers, Toronto, won the King's Prize, greatest marksmanship honour in British Empire. He gets $1,250 cash and N. R. A. gold medal and badge.

WILL NOT SURRENDER

London, Eng., July 22—That the Lords are far from surrendering as a result of the assurance of Premier Asquith that His Majesty will create sufficient peers to carry out the veto bill, is evidenced this morning by the fact that Frederick E. Smith, Unionist member for Wattam, has issued invitations to a big banquet in honour of Earle Halsbury to support the Earle in his determination to resist the veto bill. It will be a big demonstration.

ATTEMPT TO SWIM CHANNEL

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, ENG., JULY 22.—Within a mile of accomplishing a swim across the channel, from France to England, Jabez Wolffe had to quit this morning. This is his eighth failure and he says he will try again.

DOINGS AT THE WINDSOR

Special to The Examiner

HALL'S BRIDGE, JULY 22.— The Windsor summer hotel here is enjoying its full share of tourist patronage this season and the management have made new friends by the manner in which they have looked after their guests. Charmingly located with splendid fishing grounds on al sides, the Windsor is a very popular resort. Among the recent registrations are: Mr. and Mrs. P. G. Fox, of Buffalo, N.Y.; Mr. and Mrs. John P. Fox, Miss Mary and Miss Katherine Fox, Buffalo, N.Y.; Miss Josephine Corridon, Miss Ethel Dooley, Buffalo, N.Y.; Mr. and Mrs. Waldon, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Waram, Peterborough. Fishing has been splendid all along, some grand catches having been made near here.

SATURDAY'S MARKET

This morning's market was somewhat weak. There was an abundance of butter and eggs, also raspberries, but potatoes, chickens, hay, and other produce were not plentiful. The prices were about as usual, the following being the average prices:

New potatoes—45c per peck.
Raspberries—$1.25 per pail or 8 boxes for $1.00.
Black currants, 20c per quart.
Butter, 25c per lb.
Eggs, 20c per dozen.
Ducks, $1 25 per pair.
Baled hay, 80c per cwt.
Loose hay, $12 to $14 per ton.
Grains are stationary, no change likely to take place in price for some time.
Live hogs, $7.50; Farmer's hides 7 1-2c, butchers' hides 8 1-2c.

BUILDING PERMITS

H. F. Edmonson, two-roomed addition at 465 Donegal street, to cost $175.00.

M. Carton, alterations to house on Elm street, to cost $125.

M. Carton, two dwellings on Sherbrooke street, to cost $1,000 each.

Miss Annie Sheppard, new verandah, at 46 Alfred street, to cost $30.

PASSED WITH HONOURS

At the recent examination in connection with the Toronto College of Music, Master Eddie Condon, pupil of Miss M. Doherty was successful in passing the primary piano with first-class honours.

SEALED TENDERS, addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for Public Building, Dundas, Ont.," will be received at this office until 4.00 P. M., on Tuesday, August 8, 1911, for the work mentioned.

Plans, specification and form of contract can be seen and forms of tender obtained on application at the office of Mr. Thos A. Hastings, Clerk of Works, Postal Station F, Yonge Street, Toronto, Ont., at the Post Office, Dundas, Ont., and at this Department.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed forms supplied, and signed with their actual signatures, stating their occupations and places of residence. In the case of firms, the actual signature, the nature of the occupation and place of residence of each member of the firm must be given.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Honorable the Minister of Public Works, equal to ten per cent (10 p.c.) of the amount of the tender, which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,
R. C. DESROCHERS,
Secretary.

STORMY SCENE IN THE BRITISH HOUSE OF COMMONS TO-DAY

Organized Disturbance Prevented Premier From Making a Speech —Finally He Announced That New Peers Would Be Created.

BALFOUR'S STATEMENT

Special Wire to The Examiner.

LONDON, JULY 24.—"After one of the stormiest sessions in the modern history of the House of Commons, and after trying amid continuous organised interruptions for three quarters of an hour to make a speech, Premier Asquith this evening plunged the Commons into a renewed uproar by announcing officially that if the Lords wouldn't consent to restore the veto bill with reasonable amendments to substantially the form in which it left the Commons, the government would be compelled to invoke the exercise of the royal prerogative for the immediate creation of new peers. It was plainly evident that the opposition had determined upon this course, as the only way open for further blocking of the bill. Lord Hugh Cecil, the Unionist Free Trader for Oxford University, led the disorder by continually crying "Divide, divide." There were sarcastic shouts for "Redmond the real leader" and epithets of "Traitor," "Who killed King Edward" and such like were hurled at the Premier. After making his declaration Asquith sat down and Balfour rose and stated simply that the government had misused the power of the Crown to destroy the prerogative of the Upper Chamber. As soon as quiet was restored again, Speaker Lowther adjourned the session.

FIRE UNDER CONTROL

Large Part of Constantinople is Destroyed Including the Government Buildings

LIVES ARE LOST

Special to The Examiner:

CONSTANTINOPLE, JULY 24.—At three o'clock this morning the fire was under control, after burning up a large portion of the city, including the Government buildings and irreplacable documents therein. It is believed the fire was the work of political incendiaries, paid by persons antagonistic to the new government. Several lives were lost. There have been twenty-five arrests.

FIRE DESTROYS LOAD OF WHEAT

Amusing Incident Occurred Near Lang on Saturday Which Nearly Resulted in Death of Horses

LIGHTING PIPE

A very extraordinary incident which might have had more serious results, occurred on Saturday morning near Lang, when Mr. James Miller, a farmer of that neighbourhood was drawing in wheat. Mr. Miller was lighting his pipe on the top of the load, when by some mischance, the match which had been thrown carelessly away, set fire to the wheat. The load was enveloped in flames almost immediately, and Mr. Miller and the man who was with him, experienced great difficulty in saving the horses, so rapidly did the fire spread over the load. The wagon was also burned considerably. They had an exciting time keeping the fire from getting into the wheat in the field, but finally managed to extinguish it before further damage was incurred.

NOT CHOLERA

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, JULY 24.—Forest fires at Fontainebleau broke out with renewed fury this morning and swept over three thousand acres of the historic park and show place. The famous palace was saved with much work on the part of eight thousand soldiers gathered from the forts around Paris. The terrible heat in Paris is causing several deaths daily.

The Liberals Of West Peterborough To Hold Convention August 5

At a meeting of a number of the prominent members of the Liberal party in West Peterborough, held on Saturday evening last in the offices of Messrs. O'Connell & Gordon, it was decided to hold a convention of the Liberals in the Grand Opera House, Peterborough, on Saturday, August 5, at 2 o'clock, p.m., for the purpose of choosing candidates to contest this riding in the Liberal interests for the House of Commons and Ontario Legislature. Further particulars of this meeting will be announced in a later issue of the Examiner.

Former Peterborough Boy Drowned In The West

Word has been received by friends in the city of the drowning on Friday last in Lake Wabamum, near Edmonton, of Earle Weller, adopted son of the late Judge Weller of Peterborough. No particulars are to hand at the time of writing.

PERSONALS

The following guests were registered at the Oriental yesterday; Mr. T. Morrow of Port Hope; the following auto party, who motored all the way from Winnipeg: Mr. and Mrs. A. Wharton, Mr. and Mrs. C. Stowe and Miss Barton, all of Winnapeg.

Mr. C. E. McArthur, Erie, P. A., Mr. and Mrs. N. C. Porter, Winnipeg, Mr. Percy D. Ham, Comourg.

Messrs. L. Colliers and S. A. Nash of Buffalo, N.Y., are guests at the Hotel National.

Mr. Walter Hamlin of Toronto, is visiting his parents in East City.

Among his visitors to Peterborough is Mr. Edmund Coleman, a brother of the members of the firm of Coleman Bros., caterers and confectioners of this city. He was a passenger by the Allan Liner, Corsican, and has been on the Rand, Transvaal, South Africa, eight years, visiting the Old Country during the Coronation and to his parents in Wiltshire, England.

Miss Flood left Saturday afternoon for Stoney Lake, to visit Mrs. Le Brun at her summer home, "Isle Bellechasse."

Mrs. T. J. Blois and Miss Mollie Blois have left for a two-weeks' visit with friends at Long Branch, Toronto.

Mr. Oliver Wins The Banks Prize---Caught 25 lb. 'Lunge

Mr. David Oliver, general foreman of the Peterborough Water Works, and who resides on Gordon avenue, is the proud possessor of a 25-pound maskinonge, which he succeeded in landing at Seven Oaks, a point about nine miles down the Otonabee, on Saturday night. He was in a fourteen foot canoe, going slowly down the river, when something gave a sharp tug on the line. At first he thought it had caught on a root or something, but this idea was soon banished when this leviathan of the deep jumped out of the water. Mr. Oliver said this morning that when he saw it leap he thought he had a whale, and it certainly proved itself to be a fresh water whale. It was as fine a specimen of fish as one could wish to see. Mr. R. M. Roy took a photograph of this magnificent catch this morning. A cut will appear in the Examiner later.

Mr. Oliver, in addition to his good luck, succeeded in winning the season's prize given by C. B. Banks, sporting goods dealer, George street. The prize was $3.00 worth of fishing tackle, and was offered for the first 'lunge weighing 20 lbs. or over, caught this season.

May Decide Date Of Election Day To-morrow

OTTAWA, JULY 24.—It would not be surprising if the approximate date for voting was to be settled at the Liberal caucus to-morrow, although, of course actually, an election rests with the premier and his colleagues. No statutory provision exists to provide for any specified time between dissolution and nomination, but it is generally thirty days with the elections a month later.

POLICE STOPPED LEACH

Special to The Examiner:

ST. CATHERINES, JULY 24.—Bobby Leach was notified by Chief Mains, under instructions from the Attorney General at Toronto, that he would be arrested should he attempt the dare devil feat of going over Niagara Falls in a steel barrel from the Canadian side. Leach promptly had his apparatus moved to the American side and says he will start from there.

Inquest Will Be Resumed On Monday Night

The inquest into the cause of the death of Mrs. Thos. Harrison on Friday morning last, was adjourned until next Monday, July 31st. After the inquest, which was held on Saturday morning, it was decided to send the contents of the stomach to Toronto for analysis, so no further action can be taken until the report is made. The remains were sent to Orillia on Saturday night, where burial took place from the home of the parents of the deceased. The inquest will be resumed on Monday next and the verdict of the Coroner's Jury will then be decided.

KILLED BY LIGHTNING

Special to The Examiner.

While George Walter Walt, who lived on lot 16, con. 3, East Whitby, was sitting by the stove in his kitchen Monday evening, during the electric storm, the lightning came in through the chimney and struck him, rendering him unconscious. His wife and daughter had just left the room a second before, else they might have suffered the same fate. Medical aid was summoned at once, but the stricken man died before medical assistance arrived, never regaining consciousness. The only mark on his body was a slight abrasion across his right shoulder and breast.—Oshawa Reformer.

The fierce wind storm which swept over this district on Wednesday evening last, did considerable damage to the bridge at Pigeon Creek. Traffic had to be suspended for some time but the caretaker has repaired the structure so that it is now passable again.

ENGLISH SITUATION

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, JULY 24.—Leading articles in the Conservative papers this morning reflect the seriousness of the split in the Unionist ranks over the Veto bill, and according to the papers, presage a victory for Asquith's policy. Earl Halsbury and his "Die Hards" have their supporters among the Editors, while Balfour and Lord Lansdowne, with their surrender to the inevitable speeches, are championed by others. It is expected that Asquith's announcement in the Commons this evening will bring some new feature to the situation.

King George is actively engaged in endeavouring to straighten out the veto bill tangle. This afternoon he gave an audience to Premier Asquith, Leader Balfour and Lord Lansdowne, one after the other, and Earl Halsbury, the leader of the "Last Ditchers," will see the King later. His Majesty has indefinitely postponed his trip to the Duke of Richmond's place.

Satisfied Customers

There is a notable increase in my business. I expect it from the class of work I am doing. I do not expect to get all the optical business in the city, any more than one shoe store could sell all the shoes, but my aim is to obtain patronage enough to keep me reasonably busy and to give such satisfaction that my optical parlors will be indelibly fixed in the minds of those who desire the best at moderate prices.

It is very gratifying to note that much of my patronage has come from parties who have been recommended to me by pleased customers. Hence I want more customers to please.

My business methods will never be of the catch penny variety, I want to give a dollar's worth for every dollar I receive, and when I know of any plan whereby I can give a better dollar's worth than I am now doing, I shall adopt that plan. THE HOUSE OF LORDS.

The final triumph of the House of Commons in its long drawn out contest with the House of Lords, is drawing rapidly to a close, with the Commons completely victorious. This is what every well informed student of British constitutional history expected, and is what every sensible observer desired. Great Britain has been for a long time a democratic country, and it is quite impracticable now to make it anything else.

As readers of the Examiner know, this conflict between the two Houses of Parliament began when the Balfour government was defeated at the general election of 1905, and the Campbell Bannerman ministry took its place. The House of Lords began to amend bills passed by the House of Commons so as to materially and intolerably change ther character. The first measure of importance so treated was the Education Bill, which has been twice defeated in this way, but there have been others of hardly less importance similarly dealt with.

Sooner or later a change must come about in the relations between the two Houses in any case, but it was in this case precipitated by the action of the Lords themselves in thwarting the will of the Commons in the matter of fiscal and financial legislation — a thing the Lords have not ventured to do for more than a century. This led to the holding of two general elections last year, and at each of them, the government came out with a majority of considerably more than a hundred.

The natural consequence of all this clashing was the passing by the Commons of a bill abolishing the veto of the Lords in the case of financial bills and the limiting of the veto in the case of general legislation to two years. This measure has been, as usual, amended by the Lords, but the whole situation has been completely changed by the king's intimation that he is willing to create peers enough to pass the veto bill through the House of Lords. It will now become law as a matter of course, and this without the creation of new Peers—a proceeding quite repugnant to the feelings of the existing order.

It is interesting to conjecture what the immediate effect of the enactment of the veto bill will be. It will now be possible for the House of Commons to amend the Education Act so as to make it much fairer than it has been since 1902 to those who are not supporters of church schools. It will be possible to reform the House of Commons by providing that all the elections shall be held, as here, on one day, and that each elector shall have only one vote.

It will be possible to establish a Parliament for Ireland that will understand Irish questions and redress just grievances, and this may be followed by a Parliament for Scotland also. In various ways social reform has been thwarted by the House of Lords, but the power to thwart has been seriously diminished. Most important of all, the removal of this strife will probably bring about an era of better feeling between the two Houses of Parliament themselves.

AIMLESS OBSTRUCTION.

It is difficult to comprehend what the Conservative Opposition is trying to accomplish, wasting the precious time of a much belated Parliamentary session. There is an immense amount of practical and indispensable business to be done, but the House of Commons seems to be settling down into a helpless drivel of talk, to which no end is in sight, and which has no adequate motive even of the strategic sort. The Liberals are refraining from replies to the numerous attempts to draw them into participation in debate, but this only makes the members of the Opposition angry. Such a state of affairs must come to an end soon, for supplies must be legally granted to carry on the public service.

For the present condition of Parliament and its business Mr. Borden must be held personally, as well as officially, responsible. In his Western speeches he was constantly threatening that Parliament would not be allowed to vote on the reciprocity question without referring it to the people, and, as obstruction is the only way to force the hands of the Government, he undoubtedly had this in mind. He must be credited with having not merely planned and advised the obstruction, but seen personally to its adoption and operation. He stays, for the most part, out of the House while it is going on, but it is inconceivable that the present unusual and unpardonable state of affairs should exist without his knowledge and approval, even if he was not the first to instigate it. If he disapproves of it he ought to say so; if he is the leader of the Opposition he ought to lead it; if his followers have got out of hand the sooner he gives up his job the better for both himself and the whole country.

To show the utter senselessness of the present obstruction in Parliament it is not necessary to do more than call attention to the fact that the Liberals have no objection to reference of their reciprocity policy to the people. Confident in their belief that they have public opinion on their side to an unprecedented extent, they are eager to test the question at the earliest possible moment. The one serious obstacle in the way is the redistribution of the representation of the whole Dominion in the House of Commons. That is compulsory under the British North America Act, and it ought to be carried out before the next general election. This parliament has plenty of time to hold one more session, and there can be no doubt that a good part of one session will be taken up with redistribution. The Liberal programme has been to put through the proper business of the present session, including a vote on the ratification of the reciprocity agreement, hold another session after a brief session and then have a general election. That is still the best practicable solution, but if the Opposition will have it otherwise then Mr. Borden and his supporters must take the responsibility.

It should always be borne in mind in this connection that the reciprocity agreement is not for a term of years; it is only from year to year. The stipulation is in the document itself, that the American Congress or the Dominion Parliament can at any time, on proper notice being given, either repeal the agreement or amend it in any way, or to any extent, that seems desirable. For this reason it is quite safe to adopt it before an election; the election would then be held with the agreement on trial as an issue. That is a detail, however: the practical question just now is to get on with the public business, and it rests with Mr. Borden to say how, and when.

THE LORDS AND THE VETO BILL.

(Montreal Witness.)

The Veto Bill has passed the Lords, loaded with amendments which would render it largely nugatory, and which the Government will not accept. It had been threatened that there would be an insurrection among the unreasoning members of the aristocracy, and that the bill, after all the trouble the Lords had taken to undo it, might possibly be thrown out altogether, a proceeding which would in the eyes of the nation, have sealed the unfitness of the Lords, and prepared the public mind for a revolutionary treatment of their House. This surmise has, however, proved to have been pure vapor. The bill will very soon come back to the Lords from the Commons, shorn of all the amendments with which the Upper House has so painstakingly transformed it ,and the appearance is that Lord Lansdowne, rather than force the dilution of the blue blood of the House by a wholesome creation of new peers, will accept the bill as passed by the House of Commons, and not only that, but will fight actively for its passage against such Bourbon recalcitrants as Lord Halsbury, formerly Lord Chancellor under successive Conservative governments, who threatens to lead a revolt. Lord Halsbury says it would be long before he would sit in a house whose privileges were wiped out, as they would be by this bill. As the ex-chancellor is eighty-six years old, and has no successor, he cannot be held to have staked very much on this self-denying ordinance.

It would be hard to imagine a less aristocratic defender of the privileges of heredity than Lord Halsbury. He was a little fat cockney lawyer named Giffard—Jiffard he called it—with a round red face and a singularly plebian nose, who, when he sat on the ample woolsack, clad in the overwhelming robes of his office, and looking out through his spectacles from the umbrageous wig pertaining thereto, presented a curious spectacle to Lords and Commons. He is a man of admirable virtue and piety, and entirely a model citizen, but a little odd as the man who is to fire the last gun for the deposition of the peerage. The argument of Lord Lansdowne in opposing this extreme ground will be that it is necessary to accept the bill in order to avoid results which would surely follow, but that it will certainly be repealed when the Unionists return to power. This is, to use a phrase recently adpoted into English from the Chinese, to save his face and that of the House. It will only be repealed if the people want it done, and the ever broadening British constitution has not a way of developing in that direction. The 'Graphic' appeals to those who would throw the measure out, and thus precipitate the necessary sequel to such action, by asking them how they hope ever to repeal the veto bill if they persist in forcing action that would make the Lords a permanent radical body. Permanence is a long word. The permanence of the radicalism of the new lords might indeed last out the present crisis, but if the government were to appoint five hundred new peers to-morrow from among such Liberals who could bear the burden of baronial titles, it would not be a generation before four hundred of them were as ingrained supporters of hereditary privilege as Lord Halsbury himself.

A DISGUSTED CONSERVATIVE ON THE CONSERVATIVE CONVENTION

Ex-Warden R. N. Scott Says What He Means in Unmistakable Language—"Will Never Get Another Vote From Me"

SOME HOT SHOT

Owing to the transposition of several lines in Mr. Scott's letter of Saturday, we are reproducing it again to-day with the corrections made, giving the letter as Mr. Scott intended:

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—I notice by the report in the Review that the Conservative convention was conducted in such a fair and harmonious way it would lead the public to believe it was true. As you were aware the convention was called for the 18th at eight o'clock. Promptly on time that noted hot air tank the Czar of the Conservatives of West Peterborough, before whom all knees must bow and all tongues confess, Sir James Kendry, took the chair and the meeting was opened for business. After the election of officers, and after I had been fired out of the office of Third Vice-President, for reasons unknown to myself, but known to the gang who were after me, they proceeded to move some resolutions of praise and some of regret and then proceeded to nominate candidates for the Dominion and then for the local. After nominating that great Priest exterminator for the Dominion, they started their dirty work. Mr. Bradburn was then nominated by the stalwart Mr. Moore, which gave him the floor and before sitting down, after declining the nomination, moved Mr. Peck, a gentleman who is too good to mingle with them. Then Sir James said he would give five minutes for each nomination. Did he do it? I guess not. Before my mover had any time to think—they say they waited three minutes, but I say they lie and I can prove it. They only waited about one minute, when one of the machine moved that the nominations be closed, and the Czar, who was standing waiting for the word, never waiting for a seconder, declared the motion carried. My mover, Mr. Harry Garbutt, was trying to be heard, but the howling mob drowned his voice and R. N. Scott's nomination was down and out as far as they were concerned. I was informed since by two prominent residents of the city that they knew two weeks ago that they had it fixed for me because I was too friendly with some prominent Reformers, and I believe it. They must have had several rehearsals as every one knew his piece and his place, and the right time to do it. Now, I have worked hard and supported Sir James Kendry and his party for 35 years, but I am done with them now. They will never get another vote from me or anybody I can influence. I do not intend to take further notice of what they may say, as they are too dirty for an honest man to deal with. Thanking you for the space in your valuable paper, I remain,

Yours truly
ROBERT N. SCOTT.

Plans, specifications and form of contract to be entered into can be seen on and after this date at the office of the Chief Engineer of the Department of Railways and Canals, Ottawa, and at the office of the Superintending Engineer of the Trent Canal, Peterborough, Ont., at which places form of tender may be obtained.

Parties tendering will be required to accept the fair wages schedule prepared or to be prepared by the Department of Labour, which schedule will form part of the contract.

Contractors are requested to bear in mind that tenders will not be considered, unless made strictly in accordance with the printed forms, and in the case of firms ,unless there are attached the actual signature the nature of the occupation, and place of residence of each member of the firm.

An accepted bank cheque for the sum of $2,000.00, made payable to the order of the Minister of Railways and Canals must accompany each tender, which sum will be forfeited if the party tendering declines entering into contract for the work, at the rates stated in the offer submitted.

The cheque thus sent in will be returned to the respective contractors whose tenders are not accepted.

The cheque of the successful tenderer will be held as security, or part security, for the due fulfilment of the contract to be entered into.

The lowest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

By order,
L. J. JONES,
Secretary.

Department of Railways and Canals,
Ottawa, July 7th, 1911.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for additions and alterations to the Post Office, Kingston, Ontario," will be received until 4.00 P. M. on Monday, July 31, 1911, for the work mentioned.

Plans, specifications and form of contract can be seen and forms of tender obtained at this Department and on application to Wm. Newlands and Sons, Architects, Kingston, Ont.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed forms supplied, and signed with their actual signatures, stating their occupations and places of residence. In the case of firms, the actual signature, the nature of the occupation and place of residence of each member of the firm must be given.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, made payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, equal to ten per cent (10 p. c.) of the amount of the tender, which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,
R. C. DESROCHERS,
Secretary.

Department of Public Works,

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

IN the town of Biddeford, Maine, two men and a woman were recently jailed on very serious charges, because the two little daughters of the woman told the sheriff some startling stories about a grave out in their yard.

Fortunately, the man who was supposed to have been inhabiting the grave appeared in the nick of time and proved that he had not been murdered and the accused was set free.

And now—courage comrades, that is what I am driving at—the children's father has come forward and declared that his children got their idea of a grave from a story which he once told them. To frighten them away from the swamp and brook in which there are some deep and dangerous holes, he says he told the children that a man and two cows were buried in that vicinity.

A rather ludicrous outcome for a near-tragic situation, isn't it?

But I don't believe that father will try again very soon to make his children mind by making a bug-a-boos for them, do you?

And I just hope all mothers who read about this woman's narrow escape from a murder trial will also be impressed with the same lesson.

Not long ago an even more terrible tragedy than this was caused by the same trick. A woman who was crossing the Atlantic with two little children tried to keep the baby from crying by telling him that if he cried again she would throw him out the porthole into the ocean. A few minutes later, while the mother was out of the stateroom, the baby cried and the other child actually carried out its mother's threat.

Of course these are unique and horrible examples of the danger of telling lies to children to frighten them into obedience. Let's take a more commonplace one. A prominent doctor has recently written to me to ask if I will protest against using the doctor as the bugbear with which to frighten children. He says he is constantly hampered in his diagnoses of children's diseases by their unreasoning terror because they have been told that if they aren't good their mother will get the doctor to come and cut out their tongues or perform some other "pleasant" little operation. The result is that when they are really sick and the doctor is sent for they run screaming away at sight of him and a careful diagnosis is almost impossible. That really serious results might follow from such a state of affairs anyone can easily see.

Every fear is a fetter to our fullest development and our freest action. We who are older have learned this by hard experience. Then, surely, we ought to try to free our children from any fears that they may naturally have instead of serving our momentary convenience by binding them with new shackles.

"ADVENTURE"

By JACK LONDON

A source of continual trouble between them was the disagreement over methods of handling the black boys. She ruled by stern kindness, rarely rewarding, never punishing, and he had to confess that her own sailors worshipped her, while the house-boys were her slaves and did three times as much work for her as he had ever got out of them. She quickly saw the unrest of the contract labourers, and was not blind to the danger, always imminent, that both she and Sheldon ran. Neither of them ever ventured out without a revolver, and the sailors who stood the night watches by Joan's grass house were armed with rifles. But Joan insisted that this reign of terror had been caused by the reign of fear practised by the white men. She had been brought up with the gentle Hawaiians, who never were ill-treated nor roughly handled, and she generalized that the Solomon islanders, under kind treatment, would grow gentle.

One evening a terrific uproar arose in the barracks, and Sheldon, aided by Joan's sailors, succeeded in rescuing two women whom the blacks were beating to death. To save them from the vengeance of the blacks they were guarded in the cook-house for the night. They were the two women who did the cooking for the labourers, and their offence had consisted of one of them taking a bath in the big caldron in which the potatoes were boiled. The blacks were not outraged from the standpoint of cleanliness; they often took baths in the caldrons themselves. The trouble lay in that the bather had been a low, degraded, wretched female, for to the Solomon islanders all females are low, degraded and wretched.

Next morning, Joan and Sheldon, at breakfast, were aroused by a swelling murmur of angry voices. The first rule of Berande had been broken. The compound had been entered without permission or command, and all the two hundred labourers, with the exception of the boss-boys, were guilty of the offence. They crowded up, threatening and shouting, close under the front veranda. Sheldon leaned over the veranda railing, looking down upon them, while Joan stood slightly back. When the uproar was stilled, two brothers stood forth. They were large men, splendidly muscled, and with faces unusually ferocious, even for Solomon islanders. One was Car-Jama, otherwise The Silent; and the other was Bellin-Jama, The Boaster. Both had served on the Queensland plantations in the old days, and they were known as evil characters wherever white men met and gamed.

"We fella boy no want 'm them master two black fella Mary," said Bellin-Jama.

"What do you want along black fella?" Sheldon asked.

"Kill 'm," said Bellin-Jama.

"What name you fella boy talk along me?" Sheldon demanded, with a show of rising anger. "Big bell he ring. You no belong along here. You belong along field. Bime by, big fella bell he ring, you stop along kai-kai, you come talk along me about two fella Mary. Now all you boy get along out o mere."

The gang waited to see what Bellin-Jama would do, and Bellin-Jama stood still.

"Me no go," he said.

"You watch out, Bellin-Jama," Sheldon said sharply, "or I send you along Tulagi one big fella lashing. My word, you catch 'm strong fella."

Bellin-Jama glared up belligerently.

"You want 'm fight," he said, putting up his fists in approval, returned Queen-lander style.

Now in the Solomons, where whites are few and blacks are many, and where the whites do the ruling, such an offer to fight is the deadliest insult. Blacks are not supposed to dare so highly as to offer to fight a white man. At the best, all they can look for is to be beaten by the white man.

A murmur of admiration at Bellin-Jama's bravery went up from the listening blacks. But Bellin-Jama's voice was still ringing in the air, and the murmuring was just beginning, when Sheldon cleared the rail, leaping straight downward. From the top of the railing to the ground it was fifteen feet, and Bellin-Jama was directly beneath. Sheldon's flying body struck him and crushed him to earth. No blows were needed to be struck. The black had been knocked helpless. Joan, startled by the unexpected leap, saw Carin-Jama, The Silent, reach out and seize Sheldon by the throat as he was half-way to his feet, while the ten-score blacks surged forward for the killing. Her revolver was out, and Carin-Jama let go his grip, reeling backward with a bullet in his shoulder. In that fleeting instant of action, she had thought to shoot him in the arm, which, at that short distance, might reasonably have been achieved. But the wave of savages leaping forward had changed her shot to the shoulder. It was a moment when not the slightest chance could be taken.

The instant his throat was released, Sheldon struck out with his fist, and Carin-Jama joined his brother on the ground. The mutiny was quelled, and five minutes more saw the brothers being carried to the hospital, and the mutineers, marshalled by the gang bosses, on the way to the fields.

When Sheldon came up on the veranda, he found Joan collapsed on the steamer chair and in tears. The sight unnerved him as the row just over could not possibly have done. A woman in tears was to him an embarrassing situation; and when he had grown to expect anything unexpected, he was really frightened. He glanced down at her helplessly, and moistened his lips.

"I want to thank you," he began. "There isn't a doubt but what you saved my life, and I must say—"

"You brute! You coward!" she cried. "You have made me shoot a man, and I never shot a man in my life before."

"It's only a flesh-wound, and he isn't going to die," Sheldon managed to interpolate.

"What of that? I shot him just the same. There was no need for you to jump down there that way. It was brutal and cowardly."

"Oh, now I saw—" he began soothingly.

"Go away. Don't you see I hate you! hate you! Oh, won't you go away!"

Sheldon was white with anger.

"Then why in the name of common sense did you shoot?" he demanded.

"Be-be-because you were a white man," she sobbed. "And Dad would never have left any white man in the lurch. But it was your fault. You had no right to get yourself in such a position. Besides, it wasn't necessary."

"I am afraid I don't understand," he said, shortly, turning away. "We will talk it over later on."

"Look how I get on with the boys," she said, while he paused in the doorway, stiffly polite, to listen. "There are those two sick boys I am nursing. They will do anything for me when they get well, and I won't have to keep them in fear of their life all the time. It is not necessary, I tel you, all this harshness and brutality. What if they are cannibals? They are human beings, just like you and me, and they are amenable to reason. That is what distinguishes all of us from the lower animals."

He nodded and went out.

"I suppose I've been unforgivesably foolish," was her greeting, when he returned several hours later from a round of the plantation. "I've been to hte hospital and the man is getting along all right. It is not a serious hurt.

Sheldon felt unaccountably pleased and happy at the changed aspect of her mood.

"You see, you don't understand the situation," he began. "In the first place, the blacks have to be ruled sternly. Kindness is all very well, but you can't rule them by kindness only. I accept all that you say about the Hawaiians and Tahitians. You say they can be handled that way, and I believe you. I have had no experience with them. But you have had no experience with the blacks, and I ask you to believe me. They are different from your natives. You are used to Polynesians. These boys are Melanesians. They're blacks. They're niggers—look at their kinky hair. And they're a whole lot lower than the African niggers, eRally, you know, there is a vast difference.

"They posses no gratitude, no sympathy, no kindliness. If you are kind to them, they think you are a fool. If you are gentle with them they think you are afraid. And when they think you are afraid, watch out, for they will get you. Just to show you, let me state the one invariable process in a black man's brain when on his native chath, he encounters a stranger. His first thought is one of fear. Will the stranger kill him? His next thought, seeing that he is not killed is: Can he kill the stranger? There was Packard, a Colonial trader, some twelve miles down the coast. He boasted that he ruled by kindness and never struck a blow. The result was that he did not rule at all. He used to comed own in his white-boat to visit Hughie and me. When his boat's crew decided to go home, he had to cut his visit short to accompany them. I remember one Sunday afternoon when Rackoril had accepted our invitation to stop to dinner. The soup was just served, when Hughie saw a nigger peering in through the door. He went out to him, for it was a violation of Berande custom. Any nigger has to send in word by the house-boys and to keep outside the compound. This man, who was one of Packard's boat's crew, was on the veranda. And he knew better, too. 'What name?' said Hughie. 'You tell 'm white man close up we fella boat's crew go along. He no come now, we fella boy no wait. We go.'

"And just then Hughie fetched him a clout that knocked him clean down the stairs and off the veranda."

"But it was needlessly cruel," Joan objected. "You wouldn't treat a white man that way."

"And that's just hte point. He was not a white man. He was a low black nigger, and he was deliberately insulting, not alone his own white master, but every white master in the Solomons. He insulted me. He insulted Hughie. He insulted Berande."

"Of course, according to your lights, to your formula of the rule of the strong—"

"Yes," Sheldon interrupted, "but it was according to the formula of the rule of the weak that Packard ruled. And what was the result? I am still alive. Packard is dead. He was unswervingly kind and gentle to his boys, and his boys waited till one day he was down with fever. His head is over on Malaita now. They carried away two whale-boats as well, filled with the loot of the store. Then there was Captain Mackenzie of the ketch Minota. He believed in kindness. He also contended that better confidence was established by carrying no weapons. On his second trip to Malaita, recruiting, he ran into Bina, which is near Langa Langa. The rifles with which the boat's crew should have been armed were locked up in his cabin. When the whale-boat went ashore after recruits, he paraded around the deck without even a revolver on him. He was tomahawked. His head remains in Malaita. It was suicide. So was Packard's finish suicide."

"I grant that precaution is necessary in dealing with them," Joan agreed; "but I believe that more satisfactory results can be obtained by treating them with discreet kindness and gentleness."

"And there I agree with you, but you must understand one thing. Berande, bar none, is by far the worst plantation in the Solomons so far as the labour is concerned. And how it came to be so proves your point. The previous owners of Berande were not discreetly kind. They were a piar of unadulterated brutes. One was a down-east Yankee, as I believe they are called, and the other was a guzzling German. They were slave drivers. To begin iwth, they brought their labour from Johnny Beblowed, the most notorious recruiter in the Solomons. He is working out a ten-years' sentence in Fiji now, for the wanton killing of a black boy. During his last days here he had made himself so obnoxious that the natives on Malaita would have nothing to do with him. The only way he could get recruits was by hurrying to the spot whenever a murder or series of muders occurred. The murderers were usually only too willing to sign on and get away to escape vengeance. Down here, they call such escapes 'pier-head jumps.' There is suddenly a roar from the beach, and a nigger runs down to the water pursued by clouds of spears and arrows. Of course, Johnny Be-blowed's wheel-boat is lying ready to pick him up. In his last days Johnny got nothing but pier-head jumps.

Worn Out by the Monotonous Indoor Life of Winter

Spring Finds the Blood Weak and the System Run Down—Vigor is Restored by

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Just at the time when the buds are bursting and the birds are chirping merrily in the treetops, many people feel most keenly the debilitating and enervating effects of indoor winter life.

The blood is so thin and watery that it fails to supply nutrition to the nervous system and to the vital organs. You feel tired, weak and discouraged, appetite fails, digestion is impaired energy and ambition are lacking, and strange depressing feelings come over you.

But nature has provided certain restoratives to be used at this time of year to form new, rich blood and create new nerve force. These elements are found in condensed and easily assimilated form in Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Thousands of men and women have learned to escape this spring depression and weakness and discouragement by using this great restorative.

Vitality is increased, strength and confidence return, buoyancy is felt in every movement of the body, pallor and weakness and disease give place to the glow of health and vigour of mind and body.

Dr. Chase's Nerve food, the great spring tonic and restorative, 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, at all dealers or box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

RUNAWAY

A lively runaway, which resulted in the demolishing of the rear wheel of the vehicle, occurred this morning, when a horse attached to Robt. Dale's meat express, ran away from a residence on Charlotte street, where it had been left standing. It made a wild dash out Charlottee street, and turned at the National, going up Water, and was caught near the Post Office. The horse itself escaped injury, but the express vehicle, was badly damaged.

Inl Hicks Predicts Favourable Weather Conditions For 1912

Weather Predictions for August are Outlined by Many Changes---Drought is About Broken Up---The Year 1910 Marked by Many Earthquake Disturbances.

(Wor dand Works.)

A regular storm period, in progress at the close of July, will bring Mercurial cloudliness and summer storms to eastern parts of the country, during the first two or three days of August. The quadrature of Jupiter, blending with other causes, will aggravate all disturbances about this time.

A recactionary storm period has its centre on the 5th and 6th. On and touching these dates, look for marked increase of temperature, falling barometer and moderate to light, misty rains. We do not believe that rains will be sufficient for crops that are not matured by early August, except in narrow localities and along the middle eastern sections.

A regular storm period extends from the 6th to the 14th, having full moon on the 9th, and moon on the equator on the 13th. This period will bring threatening clouds, fall of the barometer and violent, blustering winds. Relief from great warmth will follow disturbances at this time, and many sections will get light to moderate rains, but not sufficient for general agricultural needs. The 9th is the centre of a marked seismic period, extending about four days before and after that date. On and about the 13th, a crisis of electrical and seismic disturbance. Note this forecast. The quadrature of Saturn falls on the 13th, and the quadrature of Mars on the 8th—facts greatly tending to seismic trouble.

A reactionary storm period is central on the 17th and 18th, calling for renewed summer heat, falling barometer and blustering storms. A show of rain, amounting to showers in scattered sections, will result at this and other August storm periods. Make the most of them for you will surely need them.

A regular storm period covers the 20th to 25th, central on the 22nd. Earth's autumnal equinox will bear on this period. Moon being in perigree and at new. Tidal dangers and equinoctial storms are indicated for the gulf regions at this time. A seismic wave is also coincident with this storm period, central on the 23rd. Some of the most destructive storms on the guf and along the southern coasts occur in the month of August. This fact should never be lost sight of by those who are exposed to the possible fury of equatorial and West India storms. When such disturbances appear in the south in August, prematurely cool weather and frosts are apt to occur over much of the interior parts of country northward. Such things are probable this month, during and following the storm period 20th to 26th.

A reactionary storm period will bring decided storm conditions on the 27th, 28th and 29th. The Moon being on the celestial equator on the 28th may bring thunder storms and fill the time between this and the preceding period with threatening, stormy weather. Indications are that the month will go out with change to fair and much cooler weather. We do our readers only justice and a great good to insist on their having a good Barometer and Hygrometer. Be never content without them. Our Word and Works Barometer, Hygrometer and Thermometer have proven the best and cheapest in the world? With them, no storm or change can surprise you.

We close up these forecast pages on June 30th in the midst of excessively warm weather. Great lack of moisture and hot winds are being reported in many parts of the country—the temperature still rising as the month goes out. The last storm period in June, a time which, in a normal season, passed off with a general show of rain and change to cooler weather; but the rainfall as a whole was far short of a sufficiency, and the drouth may be considered as unbroken in almost all parts of the country. Many products of the season have been hopelessly destroyed by heat and drouth, and the corn crop, unless rain should come in sufficient abundance later, is doomed to disastrous shortage.

As matters now stand, the indications are that the crisis of the Jupiter period will be passed during the present season, thus bringing it in 1911 instead of 1912. We have always contended that three seasons are more or less affected by the Jupiter drouths The first year, rains are light and insufficient in northern extremes of this continent; the second year, as a rule widespread drouth extends over the great central grain belt, extending more or less to northern and southern extremes; the third year, normal rains return to more northerly and central regions, with hurtful drouth dis appearing along the extreme southern parts of the continent. All know the severe drouth prevailed during 1910 in northern extremes, and now that the whole region is involved this season there is good reason to conclude that the worst of the present Jupiter period will be passed this year. Lack of rains especially towards the extreme south will be natural for another year, but more seasonable conditions will return to the great northwesterh, western and central sections of the country. This is the outlook as it now appears. If we are not to reach the centre of the drouth crisis this year the prospect for 1912 is certainly a serious one. We now believe that the worst will pass during the present year. May heaven grant it!

ARRANGING FOR ANNUAL REGATTA AT STONEY LAKE

Strong Committee Has Been Formed to Look After Details ---Orchestra Engaged to Play for Weekly Hops--Largest Flag on the Lake Has Just Been Erected---Grass Fire Threatens a Summer Home.

Special Staff Correspondence.

STONEY LAKE, JULY 24. — The Stoney Lake Cottagers' Association, at a recent meeting decided upon an innovation that will be appreciated by the young people at this popular summer resort. The Association will, from now on during the season, engage a first class orchestra to supply the music for weekly "hops" at the Juniper Island pavilion. Hitherto the dancers have had to depend upon the kindness of volunteer pianists for music for their favourite pastime.

At the same meeting a strong committee was appointed with Mr. J. S. Knapman as chairman and Mr. C. Acton as secretary to make arrangements for the annual regatta of the Association, which promises to be an even greater success this year than ever.

The gale which swept over the lake on Wednesday last, preceding a thunder storm, was about as severe as summer residents here have seen for some time. The lake was lashed into foam and boating parties had narrow escapes, but fortunately no accidents occurred.

Two Big Flags.

Two of the largest flags on the lake have been raised at "Glencairn," the summer home of Mr. Alex. Gibson and "Syndicate" Island, the headquarters of Mr. W. G. Ferguson. That at Mr. Ferguson's island is undoubtedly the biggest flag on the Kawartha lakes. It is a Dominion ensign measuring twenty-five feet in length and thirteen in width, and when raised on top of a sixty-five foot flag pole, can be seen for many miles. The big flag was raised with appropriate ceremonies amid the singing of the Maple Leaf and hearty cheering. Mr. Gibson's flag is a good second, a British Union Jack, eighteen feet in length and when floating proudly on the summer breeze high over the green island, makes a pretty picture.

A Grass Fire.

The grass and bush on Mrs. C. H. Winch's summer home, "Wan Winnett" was discovered on fire several days ago and only the vigorous efforts of Mr. A. B. Mitchell and his party who noticed the blaze and came over from their island averted a serious fire It is presumed the blaze was caused by some careless picnickers and the incident only emphasizes the need of bein gcareful with matches and fires on the island or main shore. In spite of the recent rains, everything seems dry as tinder, and a fire once started is not easily extinguished. Shore dinner parties and campers should be sure that they extinguish every particle of fire before leaving.

Big Influx Saturday.

The lake was invaded Saturday by a big crowd, some of them week-end visitors, but the majority coming to spend a vacation here. The Majestic in the afternoon had thirty calls to make and divided about the same number with the Empress on the evening trip. Among the Peterborough visitors there was satisfaction at the better accommodation given by the G.T.R. on the evening train to Lakefield two extra coaches having been put on, which handled the crowd splendidly and there was none of the crowding which characterised last week's week end trip.

Personal Items.

Mr. Herbert Baggs, of Toronto, came up to "Glenwood" on Saturday night

Mr. Jack Eason, of Toronto, was a guest at "Glencairn" over Sunday.

Mr. Joseph Gibson who has just returned from a visit to his home in Scotland, spent Sunday at the lake the guest of his brother, Mr. Alex Gibson.

Mr. U. H. Ferguson spent Sunday the guest of Mr. D. Luddy at "Bona Vista."

Mr. Ben. Simpson, the well known Hamilton Tiger football player is holidaying at his cottage at the mouth of Young's Bay.

Mr. Jas. Donnel spent the week-end at "Kilkenny."

Mr. Robt. Sturgeon came up to his cottage at Clear Lake on Saturday night.

Mr. Ben. Shortly, of Peterborough, was a week-end visitor.

Among the week's arrivals at "Bellevidere," Crowe's Landing, are the following: Mrs. Wilson, Miss Grace Wilson, Toronto; Norman McGibbons Jas. McGibbons, Toronto; Miss Lulu Walker, Linwood, N. Y.; Miss Jean Gilfillan, Pavilion, N.Y.; Miss Augusta Taber, Hilton, N.Y.; Miss Bertha Gilfillan, Pavilion, N.Y.; Wm. Parkinson, Toronto; R. W. Carson, Lake Simcoe; Miss Pearl Beadle, LeRoy, N.Y.; Miss Florence Munger, Byron, N.Y.; J. S. Ryan, Toronto, F. S. Killacky, Toronto.

Well Known Entertainer Is To Appear Here

Mr. Francis Labadie, the eminent interpreter and delineator of human character, assisted by Miss Lillian Jugens, has been engaged for an entertainment in the Conservatory of Music Hall on Wednesday night under the auspices of the Belmont Club.

Mr. Francis Labadie has gained a position so peculiarly his own, and has achieved a success so brilliant, that in announcing his appearance in selections, by the most eminent authors and readings (with remarks) from both classic and modern literary fields, his management feels justified in anticipating for him a cordial reception. He possesses a natural humour that dances and sparkles through his lighter efforts like sunshine, while in the classics, nature's fine endowment lends life, vigour and colour to his work. His selections cover a wide range, from the delicate and airy humorous sketches, to the intense and powerful dramatic scenes from Shakespeare.

IT IS NOT IN THE BLOOD

Medicine Taken Internally Cannot Cure Eczema. It is Caused by Germs

Eczema cannot be overcome by ordinary treatment and the old-fashioned way of dosing the system with drugs. Eczema is caused by a parasitic germ that bores into the skin. It is generally a contagious disease. Until the parasite is completely destroyed and removed, eczema cannot be cured. Fully one-third of skin diseases are in the form of eczema.

We so thoroughly believe that Rexall Eczema Ointment will overcome eczema and allied skin ailments, that we unhesitatingly promise to promptly return the money paid us for it should it in any way be unsatisfactory to the user.

Because of its remarkable cleansing, antiseptic, germicidal, soothing and healing influence, Rexall Eczema Ointment has a very pronounced value in the treatment of skin diseases, especially where the form of ailment is of the chronic, aggravating sort. We highly recommend it for the dry scaly form or the weeping type, where there is a constant flow of ill-smelling excretion.

Rexall Eczema Ointment is very prompt in relieving pimples, blotches, skin discolourations, ringworm, acne, nettle rash, tettar, hives, ulcers, insect bites, and for healing sores and wounds. It is a pleasant smelling, grayish-white ointment, and is very cleanly for use. Two sizes, 50c. and $1.00. Sold only at our store.—The Rexall Store, McDermid and Jury.

FIRST ANNUAL EXCURSION

The first annual excursion under the auspices of All Saints Church Choir, to Idyl Wild per steamer "Stoney Lake," was pronounced, in every way, an enjoyable success. With about two hundred on board, and to the strains of Mr. Charles Tucker's Orchestra, the boat pulled out of Wolfe Street Wharf, on time A stop was made at the Railway Wharf to pick up a few more passengers. One regret was unanimous—the inability of Rev. Mr. Trumpour to be present, his duties compelling him to remain in town. During the trip songs and dancing were freely indulged in, to the delight of everyone. "Dad" Langley and Mrs. Langley gave an example of the old English round dance—the polka. "Dad" is a chorister of 53 years' standing and is in tune yet. The excursion was a financial success and warm thanks were expressed to Choirmaster George Chandler for arranging the trip. The refreshments were in the hands of Miss Birdie Dawson, and a band of helpers, who did their level best to see that every one was supplied with ice cream, fruit, candies, and other little dainties that make life pleasant. Mr. Chandler wishes to thanw the many helpers and those who donated candies, ice cream, etc. and to the many friends for their presence and support.

The orchestra supplied by Mr Charles Tucker, was indeed a pleasure to listen to. Their numbers were varied, tuneful and numerous.

A Garden Party will be held on the lawn at 278 Reid St., on Tuesday evening at 8 p.m. under the auspices of the Ladies Aid of Knox church. There will be a good musical program and refreshments will be served. Admission—Children 5c., Adults 10c. Preparations are being made for a large crowd, and an enjoyable evening is promised. 2d.

POST CARD COLUMN

Editor Post Card Column:

Dear Sir,—I would like to call your attention and that of the authorities to the action of a gang of drunken hoodlums on the Chemong road who, by their actions, make night hideous and travel after dark unsafe. On Saturday night, July 22nd, they were almost run down by a private car, and succeeded in stopping the machine entirely by completely blocking the road and allowing no room for passage. As they occupied several buggies they had no trouble in doing this. In passing the "Rutherford Grimes" auto hurled a beer bottle was thrown, narrowly missing two ladies and smashing against the canopy support, scattering the remainder of the contents and broken glass over the occupants of the bus. Surely, sir, it is time such things were stopped and as it is of almost weekly occurrence, I do not think the authorities would have any difficulty in apprehending the guilty parties.

SUSTAINED BROKEN ARM

On Friday afternoon, George, the young son of Mr. J. Johnston, Sussex street, was the victim of a painful accident. The little fellow was attempting to jump across the Sussex street drain, when, in some manner he slipped and fell, breaking his left arm. The boy was removed to his home and a doctor summoned. He is suffering considerable pain as a result of the accident. Post.

Tire Exploded

On Saturday afternoon Master J. P. Davidson, son of Rev. Canon Davidson, was pumping up his bicycle, and having pumped up the front wheel, proceeded to do likewise with the rear wheel, but at this stage of the game fate intervened. He pumped the wheel up too hard, with the result that the tire and rim exploded with a loud noise. The inevitable outcome of this trivial incident was the attraction of a large crowd

DON'T FOOL WITH YOUR LIVER

MAKE IT ACTIVE AND HEALTHY WITH "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

Don't treat the Liver with common purgatives. Salts, senna calomel and the host of "liver pills" do not act on the liver at all. They merely irritate the bowels.

"Fruit-a-tives" will cure Biliousness and Torpid Liver because this famous fruit medicine acts directly on the liver.

"Fruit-a-tives" corrects Indigestion and Constipation—not by inflaming the bowels like common purgatives, but by making the liver active and healthy.

MRS. REDMOND IS MISSING

Nothing Has Been Heard of Her Since Porcupine Fire

The friends in Peterborough of Mrs. Kate Redmond are decidedly uneasy about her safety, as nothing has been heard from her since before the Porcupine disaster. Mrs. Redmond was employed at the Gold Field Hotel, South Porcupine, which was wiped out by the fire and her friends here fear the worst. They are exhausting every effort to find out some information about her.

"Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cured me of what I believe was the early stage of locomotor ataxia or paralysis. I cannot describe what I suffered, but now I am entirely cured."

TELEGRAPHY WILL STILL BE USED

Mr. A. M. Paton, Principal of the National School of Railway Telegraphy at Lindsay, in a letter to the Lindsay Warder, denies the statement that the telephone will take the place of the telegraph on the Grand Trunk. He stated that he had a letter from Mr. Ashald, Superintendent of the telegraph of the Grand Trunk system, stating that it was the intention of the Grand Trunk or any other railway system to dispense with the telegraph instruments or telegraph operators. He said that the telephone lines are already strung over many districts, but when used on the Company's service, are handled by telegraph operators in charge. The telephone is in use on the Grand Trunk between Lindsay and this city, and several other points along the system, but according to information given by railway officials, it was only a false alarm that the telegraph would be dispensed with.

CELEBRATED THEIR GOLDEN WEDDING

OWEN SOUND, ONT., JULY 21. — Mr. and Mrs. John M. Kilbourne yesterday celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding. CONSTRUCTION WORK ON THE C. P. R.

Rapid progress is being made in the construction of the new C.P.R. line running from Lindsay to Bethany.

A large force of men and horses are employed, together with two steam shovels, one of which is located at Bethany and the other at Brunswick.

Bethany itself has been subject to a complete transformation, a large number of buildings having been moved or torn down, while a large number of land owners disposed of their property for a handsome sum.

It is also expected that Bethany will be favoured with a station, in event of which a large block of land has been purchased.

Considerable difficulty has been experienced in procuring sufficient supplies to feed the large nummber of horses which are employed, a difficulty which is augmented by the fact that the farmers hold their fodder at an exorbitant figure.

It is thought that the line will be completed in time for the carrying of the fall grain.

LIFT LOCK PICTURES IN ENGLAND

It will, no doubt, be of interest to the people of Peterborough to know that moving pictures of the Hydraulic Lift Lock at work, have crossed the ocean and are now being exhibited in Reading, England.

A QUICK PASSAGE

As an instance of what can be accomplished by ocean travel in the matter of speed, might be mentioned the case of the Misses Bickersteth. On Friday, July 14th, they were in Dublin, Ireland, and on the following Friday, July 21st, they were in Peterborough, Canada. Their passage across the ocean was effected in about 5 days by the C.P.R. liner, Empress of Ireland.

FELL THIRTY FEET

A serious accident occurred on Friday at the new C. P. R. bridge being erected over the river at Distillery Creek, when one of the men employed on the structure had a narrow escape from fatal injuries. The unfortunate man, who is a French Canadian, fell from the structure, a distance of thirty feet. It was thought at first that he had received injuries of a fatal nature, but when a local doctor arrived, it was found that one of his legs was broken.—Post.

CAR DERAILED

A rather singular incident occurred to yesterday's "Moonlight" train. When passing over the crossing at Hunter street, by some means or other one of the inmost cars, which was loaded with cement became derailed, causing a delay of about an hour and a half. Save for the tearing up of some of the ties no damage was done.

Jumped A Switch

Whilst proceeding round the curve at Park street, on Saturday evening the last Jackson Park line street car jumped the points. After some time, however, it was replaced on the track and no damage resulted.

NO CHANCE THIS YEAR

Peterborough people will have no chance of seeing the Barnum and Bailey circus this season unless they journey to Toronto for the purpose. Since the announcement that the big show was invading Canada it had been reported that Peterborough was to be favoured with a place on its itinerary, but it has been learned that the circus will not come further east than Toronto.

WINDOW SMASHED

The high wind to-day resulted in at least one miniature disaster. The plate glass door of Thos. Barrie & Co's. large show case, at the corner of Simcoe and George streets, was left open, preparatory to putting display goods in the window. The wind blew it shut with such force that it was shattered to pieces, entailing a loss of about $20.00, which is covered by insurance.

EXCITING RUNAWAY

Some considerable excitement was caused on Hunter street about 2 o'clock this afternoon when Jerry, the ex-fire horse, now belonging to the Board of Works, suddenly bolted.

Whilst the man in charge was shovelling refuse from the street into the cart, Jerry, a fine dapple grey, suddenly took fright at a large piece of white paper which was being carried along by the boisterous wind.

The first thing it encountered was a buggy. Mr. Hickey, the owner, drove his horse on to the sidewalk in an attempt to clear his vehicle. The cart behind the runaway, however, struck the buggy, causing damage to the tune of $25. Seemingly unsatisfied with its display, the large grey rushed madly onward, until it reached another vehicle belonging to Mr. Belleghem, which was standing broadwise in the road awaiting a load. The frightened beast leapt over the vehicle, becoming entangled in the harness on the other side. Meanwhile the two vehicles were jammed together, with the result that Mr. Belleghem's furniture van also suffered considerable damage.

Jerry was sold some time ago by the Fire Deparment as lacking in speed, but his running and jumping propensities were developed this afternoon to an abnormal extent, and yet, after all his experiences, he was not injured beyond a few scratches.

OBITUARY

MRS. ARCHIE DAVIDSON.

The death occurred this morning at 222 Rubidge street, of Mrs. Archie Davidson, aged 41 years.

She is survived by a sorrowing husband and two sons, Mac. and Archie. Funeral notice later.

GEORGE W. TORRANCE.

In the Victoria Hospital, Montreal, Mr. George W. Torrance, of Toronto, brother of Rev. Dr. Torrance, formerly of Peterborough, passed away yesterday after a brief illness of a week's duration. Returning from Halifax a week ago, he was suddenly taken seriously ill, which necessitated his removal to the hospital. It is thought that his sickness was but a relapse of that which laid him up a considerable part of the winter.

Mr. Torrance had for years been connected with the White Star, Dominion and Hamburg-American Steamship lines, as their Ontario freight representative. He had been in the employ of the two former for upwards of 35 years. In sporting circles he was well known, having played in his younger days on several of Montreal's champion teams. Less than a year ago he succeeded Dr. Andrew Smith as chairman of the Executive committee of the Ontario Jockey Club, and had been for years on the directorate.

His death is much regretted by the members of the Albany Club, as he had been a member for twenty-three years, and was one of its most familiar figures. Mr. Torrance was a Conservative, taking, however, no active part in politics. He was a member of a prominent Montreal family, and his father was president of the Bank of Montreal.

The deceased leaves a widow, who resides in London, England, and one daughter, Mrs. Kate M. Barton, also of London, but at present visiting in this city; two brothers, one a Presbyterian clergyman in Kingston, the other in Montreal, and a sister, Mrs. Black, also of Montreal.

Sent In False Alarm

A false alarm which was sent in presumably by a gang of section men working on the G. T. R. tracks, near the corner of Perry and Bethune streets, gave the fire department a run on Saturday afternoon between the hours of five and six. When Chief Howard discovered that the alarm was a hoax he immediately began an investigation with a view to apprehending the guilty party. The offence is a serious one and one that is punishable by a $50 fine.

WEDDING BELLS

PLATT—VOUGHT.

A quiet wedding took place on Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock, at the residence of Rev. Canon Davidson, when Mr. James Joseph Platt was united in marriage to Miss Annie Lena Vought. The couple were unattended. They will reside on Charlotte street.

MARRIED.

The marriage of Mr. William J. Rickner, to Miss Winnifred Pearl Johnson took place in Rochester on Saturday, July 22nd, 1911. The young couple will be at home to their friends at 378 Sawyer street, Rochester after September 15th.

NO DEARTH IN PORCUPINE.

Plenty of Supplies Are Now In Strickon Camp.

Toronto, July 24.—J. L. Englehart, chairman of the T. & N. O. Railway, learned from Supt. Black while speaking over long distance 'phone yesterday that a car of provisions and cooking utensils reached Porcupine on Saturday and that another filled with provisions had only reached there on Sunday last.

"There is absolutely no need for any man to go short," said Mr. Englehart. "There is talk of shortage, but I have personally investigated the charge and find that there is no ground for complaint. Mr. Gourlay has put the relief work in good systematic order and there is no reason for a kick from anyone."

The relief work in Porcupine district is now in the hands of C. A. Foster and Harold Kingsmill, who are devoting their whole time to it. There is now plenty of work for which the Government has devoted $8,000. There is also work to be found on the T. & N. O.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

The Fair of Nations at St. Catharines realised over $8,000.

Mrs. MacTaggart, a sister of Sir William Mackenzie, died at Winnipeg.

A lady guest at the Algonquin Hotel, Sault Ste. Marie, was robbed of over $1,000 worth of jewelry.

Victor Lee, a London boy, was seriously wounded by his brother, who was shooting at a chipmunk.

Diplomatic relations between France and Germany over the Moroccan situation are approaching a crisis.

Four Mount Washington, Maryland, youths are held for running down a street car conductor with an auto.

Mrs. R. Wendell of Delaware was thrown out of her carriage in a runaway at Springbank and had both arms and her shoulder broken.

Willie, the seven-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Cubley of Massena, N.Y., was drowned Saturday afternoon near St. Lawrence Park, Cornwall.

Lord Strathcona, whose retirement from the post of Canadian high commissioner in London, was announced recently, will sail for Canada in a few days.

The bodies of Nelson Peterson and another thought to be Thomas Rosenquest have been found near Goose Lake. The remains were charred and mangled by bears.

Supt. Weller succeeded in raising the blockade in the Welland Canal at midnight Saturday. The engine, which fell in on Friday, was dragged out of the channel.

Paul Lalebvre, aged four, while standing on a platform of an Ottawa River boathouse, let go his father's hand, fell into the water, and never came to the surface again.

Mr. Walter Harland Smith was nominated for the Commons by the Liberals of Halton. Hon. Wm. Paterson attended the convention at Milton and spoke strongly in favor of the reciprocity agreement.

The steamer Amethyst which ran ashore near Cape Race Saturday went to pieces yesterday. On board the ship were fifty oxen, which were lost. The Amethyst plied between St. John's, Nfld., and Montreal.

Captain Censured.

London, July 24.—The Board of Trade enquiry into the accident to the Cunard steamship Ivernia, which struck on Daunt Rock last May and was badly damaged, resulted yesterday in a severe censure of Capt. Potter, the court found that it was not necessary to suspend his certificate.

Grist Mill Burned.

Bryson, Que., July 24.—The grist mill and residence close by were burned on Saturday afternoon from some unknown cause. The loss to Bryson will be more than a financial one, but the mill loss will be about $12,000. J. Work and C. E. Sprout of Vancouver owned it.

MARKET REPORTS.

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Close Higher—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, July 24.—The grain market showed a firmer tendency during today's dealings, prices for all cereals making an advance from the closing prices of last night. The trading was decidedly dull, however, and at no time did the market exhibit any symptoms of vivacity.

Wheat futures closed to-day ½c to ⅝c higher than yesterday, corn ½c to ⅝c higher, and oats ⅛c higher to ⅛c lower. Provisions were comparatively unchanged, with signs of strength in pork and lard.

The Liverpool market closed ¼d to ⅜d higher than yesterday on wheat, and unchanged to ¼d higher on corn. Paris closed unchanged to 1½c lower on wheat, Antwerp unchanged, Berlin ⅜c higher and Buda Pest ½c lower.

Liverpool Cattle Market.

LIVERPOOL, July 24.—John Rogers & Co., Liverpool, cable to-day that with less cattle for the Birkenhead market there was an average advance of one cent on prices last quoted, both States and Canadian steers making from 12 3-4c to 13c per lb. The demand for best is not good, and with heavier supplies it will be difficult to maintain prices on a uniform level.

Thrown Under the Wheels.

Preston, July 24.—Yesterday afternoon about four o'clock several small boys were playing in the yard of the Preston Car & Coach Co. Little Johnnie Drake, the five-year-old son of John Drake, was sitting on one of the tracks that are used for putting under passenger cars, when his little comrades started the truck on the track down grade and threw the little fellow under te wheels, crushing his arm and shoulder blade. Little hopes are held out for his recovery.

Priest Died In Church.

Quebec, July 24.—With the work just completed, and while Bishop Roy was pronouncing a eulogy upon his services, Father P. Lessard, cure of St. Ambroise, Jeune Lorette, was taken suddenly ill yesterday morning in the handsome new parish church, which had been erected through his efforts. The reverend gentleman fainted, and was carried into the presbytery, where he died a short time afterwards.

TWO ARE DROWNED.

Boat Rented by Englishmen Found Near Toronto.

Toronto, July 24.—E. Goby, 1,233 Dundas street, and Harry Hughes of the same address, were probably drowned in the lake off Walter Dean's boathouse at Sunnyside between 7 and 8 o'clock Saturday night.

A submerged rowboat with two coats and a hat was picked up about three-quarters of a mile off shore a few minutes before eight o'clock by Frank Wicks, who was passing in his motor boat.

In one coat was the name H. Hughes, bearing the stamp of Hobberlin, while in the pocket of the other coat was the label E. Goby, with the address 1,233 Dundas street. At the Dundas street address the name of the occupant is James Frank Grant. The directory gives Hughes' address as 1,233 Dundas street, and it is also probable that Goby was a boarder there also.

"The boat was a canoe-shaped one," said Thomas Fitzpatrick, 57 Wilson avenue. It was a light inflated craft. An oar was floating within a few feet and the whole affair appeared to indicate that the occupants had only just been thrown into the water.

A heavy northwester had whipped the lake into whitecaps all day, and it was no easy task to keep a boat afloat in the choppy seas. It is thought that the boat was in poor condition and filled with water, the two men leaping into the lake to escape the inrushing waters.

Must Make Improvements.

Kingston, July 24.—The provincial license inspector spent some days here and has notified the local inspector that half of the hotelkeepers here must make improvements or else he will ask the department to cancel their licenses. They are defective as to fire escapes and lavatories, and a few have more serious defects.

Extreme Unionists Will Hold a No Surrender Meeting—Earl Halsbury is Irreconcilable

FIGHT TO LAST

London, July 24.—The past forty-eight hours have brought small change in the political situation. The Unionists and the partisans have joined in a chorus of hot denunciation against Premier Asquith for what they term his violation of Parliamentary decencies. The majority of the Conservatives in London and the provinces advise the leaders to submit to Mr Asquith's ultimatum, as the lesser of two great evils.

The only uncertain factor in affairs is how many of the Lords will follow the Earl of Halsbury in the fight to the death.

The Prime Minister on Friday notified the peers that he would not send back the veto bill from the House of Commons to them unless assured that they would accept it. If Lord Halsbury can muster enough followers to outvote the small Liberal contingent in the Upper House—which may not be impossible, because there seems to be somewhat of a stop in the fighting—Lansdowne must induce his followers to vote for the Government bill to stave off the degradation of the peerage. While he has not said so, the general belief is that he will do it, if forced to it.

In the meantime interest centres in the meeting of the House of Commons to-day, when Mr. Asquith is expected to make a more explicit statement of his program than he has done up to the present. The pressure for admission to this historic session is enormous. It is possible that the Government may postpone consideration of the Lords' amendment for a few days to enable it to find out what the Upper House will do. If the result of the negotiations is unsatisfactory, the Government may announce the creation of a batch of 50 new peers as an object lesson to the Lords.

A correspondent of The Times, who signs himself "Anti-Corruptionist," declares that it is an open secret that a peer on his creation contributes a minimum of $25,000 to the party funds. He points out that 100 new peers would give the Liberal organization $2,500,000 to play with, which could be used to subsidize candidates and buy local papers.

Sir Edward H. Carson, M.P. for Dublin University and chairman of the Irish Unionists, has issued a statement and has informed Lord Lansdowne that "if we are to have home rule forced upon us without an appeal to the country, it will be as easy to resist it next year as in 1913," and protests against a surrender.

J. L. Garvin, editor of The Sunday Observer, in appealing for a large attendance at the banquet to be given on Wednesday next in honor of the Earl of Halsbury, says that "no surrender" represent the conviction of the masses. In the event of surrender, he says, the party will split from top to bottom, and will never be reconstructed under the present leadership. It is a grave thing, adds Mr. Garvin, that the party is still ignorant of Mr. Balfour's real mind.

Leach Goes Over the Falls To-day.

Niagara Falls, Ont., July 24.—Expressing explicit faith in his ability to safely go over the horseshoe falls, Bobby Leach, who has several times navigated the whirlpool rapids in a barrel, said last night that he would start on the trip as near two o'clock this afternoon as possible. His new barrel was delivered on Saturday, the one in which he made the rapids having been lost in experiments a week ago. Leach's barrel is of quarter-inch steel, eleven feet over all and three feet in diameter. On each end are wooden points, securely bolted to the craft. They are formed of cross sections of wood varying in thickness. A man hole is so arranged that it is fastened from the inside.

Unlike the barrel in which Mrs. Taylor, the only person who ever successfully passed over the falls alive, Leach's craft has a hammock upon which the daring little English navigator will be strapped. "I haven't a cent of insurance and don't expect to need any. I've always wanted to go over the falls. I feel sure of success. I expect the trip will occupy thirty minutes," said Leach.

Lightning Strikes Church.

Canso, N.S., July 24.—The most severe electrical storm that ever visited this territory raged here at an early hour yesterday morning and caused much destruction. The Catholic Church spire is badly shattered and only by the successful efforts of those who answered the alarm was the church saved from destruction by fire. The bolt that shattered the church entered at the point of the spire. Fire was kindled in several places, but the heavy rain prevented its spreading on the outside. H. L. Tate's house

Toronto Will Receive King's Prize Winner, Private Clifford, With Open Arms

1150 COMPETITORS

Bisley, Eng., July 24.—Pte. W. J. Clifford of the 10th Royal Grenadiers, Toronto, on Saturday won the Empire's most coveted shooting trophy, when he carried off the King's Prize after a very close contest, in which his fellow-townsman, Lance-Corpl. Trainer, of the R.C.R., was second from lead at the beginning of the third stage. Clifford's total score was 319 out of a possible 355.

On Wednesday Clifford carried off the Prince of Wales' Prize, the badge, and $500, being the award.

The King's Prize consists of $1,250 given by His Majesty the King, the N.R.A. gold medal, and the N.R.A. gold badge. There were 1,150 competitors entered in the contest, being the representative shots from the volunteer forces of the Empire. The Canadians who fired in the last stage were Lance-Corpl. Trainor, R.C.R., Toronto; Pte. Bibby, Dundas; Sergt. Martin, Calgary; Pte. Clifford, Toronto; Lieut. F. Morris, Bowmanville; Sergt. G. Russell, Ottawa; Lieut. W. Morris, Winnipeg; Sergt. Bayles, Toronto. The last stage is fired at 800, 900 and 1,000 yards, ten shots at each distance.

In the second stage of the St. George's Challenge Vase match, the Canadians scored as follows, with fifteen shots at 900 yards: Freeborn 63, Russell 56, Clark 51, Martin 67.

Civic Reception.

Toronto, July 24.—Private Clifford of the Grenadiers will be given a civic reception on his return from England, it was announced on Saturday by Ald. Maguire.

Clifford was married about a year ago to Miss Winnifred Lewis, whose father before his death was an instructor of musketry for the regular army service in India. Mr. Lewis was also a famous shot and one of the best known regulars in the service.

"Just think of it," said Mrs. Clifford. "The King's Prize! Who would ever think that William would prove the best shot under the Union Jack?"

Clifford was considered the best shot in his regiment for two years. He won the President's Match twice and last year at Ottawa he won the National Association Medal for shooting. In 1909 he was waiting man on the Bisley team and was a member last year and this year. Last year, however, he did not make the finals and didn't shoot for the King's Prize.

From the outset of his military career he displayed an enthusiasm for shooting, and with steady practice he soon came to be recognized as one of the best marksmen in the regiment. At the O.R.A. and D.R.A. meets he carried off several good prizes, and he was "always knocking at the door" at all the matches he took part in in recent years.

Invitation to Laurier.

Montreal, July 24.—A deputation from the Canadian Society of New York, en route for Ottawa to present to the Premier an invitation to be present at the annual dinner of that institution on December 8, passed through this City yesterday. It is expected that President Taft and Ambassador Bryce will also be present on this occasion. The Canadian society this spring had the honor to entertain the President at one of their banquets.

The delegation consisted of T. N. Jarvis, president of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, formerly of Ontario; Dr J. A. MacIsaac, surgeon in the New York Eye and Ear Hospital, formerly of Nova Scotia; F. McLaughlin, real estate broker, born in Quebec; W. W. Johnston, commission merchant, born in Ontario; C. R. Fletcher, D.D.S., also a Nova Scotian, and Dr. John J. United States Senate Passes the Reciprocity Agreement—All Eyes Are Now on Ottawa

MAJORITY LARGE

Washington, July 24.—The Canadian reciprocity bill passed the Senate yesterday afternoon by a vote of 53 to 27. The action of the Senate brings a hard fought victory to President Taft, and ends a fight that has been waged for more than a year. It justifies the calling of Congress in special session by the President.

President Taft will not sign the reciprocity bill until Wednesday. This is caused by the fact that the House is not in session. It will be necessary for the Senate to formally report that the bill has been passed.

The law enacted Saturday will not go into effect until the Canadian Parliament passes on the measure. The opposition which has fought President Taft in the Senate and blocked the passage of the bill for months, is now training its guns on the legislative body at Ottawa and every effort will be made to kill it there. The Canadian Parliament, like the Senate, has no closure rule and the opponents of the measure there have succeeded in blocking its progress by speaking. Beginning to-day, the Government of Canada will force morning, afternoon and evening sessions of Parliament, and if this fails, it will be necessary for the Government to carry the matter to the fall elections. There is, therefore, a possibility that the bill passed on Saturday by the United States Senate, will not go into effect until next winter.

The bill passed the Senate unamended, all efforts on the part of the insurgents in this direction being overwhelmingly defeated. As soon as the bill was passed, an engraved copy, prepared in advance, was rushed to the White House for the President's signature, and Mr. Taft, before he left for Beverley Saturday afternoon, had the satisfaction of affixing his name to this important measure.

The bill was passed by the aid of Democratic votes. If it had been left to the Republicans in the Senate, it would have been defeated, 24 voting against it and only 21 for it. Of the Republican regulars, 18 supported the President and 14 voted against him. Senator Bailey was able to muster only two Democratic votes besides his own against the bill.

Following was the vote on the bill: Republicans against—Borah and Heyburn, Idaho; Bourne, Oregon; Bristow and Curtis, Kansas; Burnham, New Hampshire; Clapp and Nelson, Minnesota; Clark and Warren, Wyoming; Crawford and Gamble, South Dakota; Cummins and Kenyon, Iowa; Dixon, Montana; Crona and McCumber, North Dakota; LaFollette, Wisconsin; Lippitt, Rhode Island; Lorimer, Illinois; Oliver, Pennsylvania; Page, Vermont; Smith, Michigan; Smoot, Utah.

Democrats against—Bailey, Texas; Clarke, Arkansas; Simmons, North Carolina.

Republicans for the bill—Bradley, Kentucky; Brandegee and McLean; Connecticut; Briggs, North Louisiana; Burton, Ohio; Crane and Lodge, Massachusetts; Colom, Illinois; Guggenheim, Colorado; Jones and Poindexter, Washington; Nixon, Nevada; Penrose, Pennsylvania; Perkins and Works, California; Richardson, Delaware; Root, New York; Stephenson, Wisconsin; Townsend, Michigan; Watts, Rhode Island.

Democrats for — Bryan, Georgia; Bankhead and Johnston, Alabama; Bryan and Fletcher, Florida; Chamberlain, Oregon; Chilton and Watson, West Virginia; Culbertson, Texas; Davis, Arkansas; Foster, Louisiana; Gore and Owen, Oklahoma; Hitchcock, Nebraska; Johnson, Maine; Kern and Shively, Indiana; Martin and Swanson, Virginia; Martine, New Jersey; Myers, Montana; Newlands, Nevada; O'Gorman, New York; Overman, North Carolina; Paynter, Kentucky; Pomerene, Ohio; Reed and Stone, Missouri; Smith, Maryland; Smith, South Carolina; Taylor, Tennessee; Williams, Mississippi.—32.

Clears the Way.

Ottawa, July 24.—Saturday's Taft victory in the United States Senate clears the way for the final stages of the fight in Ottawa. Beyond the removal of the Government's last reason for keeping the House in session, the passage of the bill at Washington does not affect the situation here. For the last two weeks the success of the White House influence has been a foregone conclusion. Both parties here expected it, and neither has shown any sign of giving ground because of it.

R. L. Borden last night had no comment to make on the action of the United States Senate. The proclamation ordering preparation of the lists in the unorganized districts of Ontario between July 18 and Sept. 18, instead of between Aug. 1 and Oct. 15, appears in The Canada Gazette, as signed on the 17th. When A. C. Boyce asked the Prime Minister about this proclamation on Friday, Sir Wilfrid said he couldn't give an answer.

Another Aviation Record.

Hempstead, L.I., July 24.—Thomas Sopwith, the English aviator, broke the world's record here at the aviation meet Saturday afternoon for landing on a designated point. Sopwith stopped within one foot 5 1-2 inches of his point. The former record of five feet was recently made by a United States army officer, Lieut. D. E. Milling. Later Sopwith won a cross-country flight, carrying a woman passenger, for the first time in racing, it was said. The passenger was Miss Ella Mohr.

Ministers In Rouville.

Marieville, Que., July 24.—Hon. Mr. Brodeur, Minister of Marine, yesterday afternoon addressed a meeting of three thousand electors of Rouville here. He was accompanied by Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, Postmaster-General.

Aids Nature

The great success of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in curing weak stomachs, wasted bodies, weak lungs, and obstinate and lingering coughs, is based on the recognition of the fundamental truth that "Golden Medical Discovery" supplies Nature with body-building, tissue-repairing, muscle-making materials, in condensed and concentrated form. With this help Nature supplies the necessary strength to the stomach to digest food, build up the body and thereby throw off lingering obstinate coughs. The "Discovery" re-establishes the digestive and nutritive organs in sound health, purifies and enriches the blood, and nourishes the nerves—in short establishes sound vigorous health.

If your dealer offers something "just as good," it is probably better FOR HIM—it pays better. But you are thinking of the cure not the profit, so there's nothing "just as good" for you. Say so.

QUINLAN DID NOT GIVE BOWMANVILLE A HIT AND WON GAME WITH HOMER

Peterborough Manager Was in Rare Form Saturday, Striking Out Fourteen Visitors and Peterborough Won the Battle by 5-3---It Should Have Been a Shut-Out.

Manager Quinlan came suspiciously near being the whole works in Saturday's Midland League game at Riverside Park, which the Petes won by 5 to 3, after an exciting battle. The Peterborough leader and pitcher twirled one of the best games of his career, allowing the visitors not a single solitary hit, or anything that looked like a safety, while to put the finishing touches on his work he drove in the winning runs by a beautiful home run, over the left-field fence, in the seventh. The score was tied at the time and Quinlan's mighty swipe won the game there and then.

Had the Peterborough manager received perfect support he would have had a no-hit-, no-run game to his credit. He had everything Saturday, striking out fourteen, while he did not give a base on balls, although he plugged two batters. The Rubbermen were eating out of his hands, only three balls going out of the infield, and they were easily handled by Shaw and O'Brien. Beith, for Bowmanville, pitched a splendid game as well, fanning ten batters, but the Petes bunched hits, with Bowmanville errors. The game was without any remarkable fielding feature, the nearest approach to the sensational being W. O'Brien's catch of Kavanagh's fly to deep centre, which he juggled momentarily before holding it safely.

It was a good game of ball all the way, featured by Quinlan's grand pitching and the five hundred fans seemed to enjoy the exhibition thoroughly.

Bowmanville took a lead in the first when they scored two of their three runs. Sisler, first up, took one of Quinlan's slants in the short ribs and stole second. Rahmel fumbled Rowe's grounder, sending Sisler to third. Tucker flew out to M. O'Brien, but Rahmel lost Jones' grounder. Sisler scoring. Kavanagh came through with a sacrifice fly to W. O'Brien, sending Rowe across and Logan wound up the innings by grounding out to M. O'Brien.

Peterborough failed to get one back in their half. Murphy dropped a single over Kavanagh's head and stole second. Shaw missed three, but M. O'Brien singled to centre. Quinlan fanned. Gonter took a slant on the top of his head, filling the bases, but Beith pulled out of the hole, by causing McFadden to lift an easy foul to Kavanagh. Quinlan fanned Wilcox, Doll and Beith, in a row, in Bowmanville's half of the second.

For Peterborough, Rahmel was safe on Kavangh's error, but was out stealing—Jones to Logan.

Quinlan made his strike-out record six in succession by fanning Rowe, Tucker and Jones, in the third.

Peterborough broke into the scoring column in their half with one counter Murphy singled and stole second, going to third on Shaw's neat sacrifice. M. O'Brien lifted a fly to left, which Tucker grabbed and returned so quickly that Murphy was held at third. Quinlan came to the rescue with a timely single over second, scoring Murphy. Gonter was passed but McFadden ended by fanning.

Both sides went out in order in the fourth, and Bowmanville were blanked in their half of the fifth. Peterborough took the lead in this innings. Murphy started it with a walk. Shaw hoisted one to Rowe which the centre fielder obligingly dropped. M. O'Brien singled to centre, scoring Murphy; Shaw and O'Brien pulled off a double steal. Quinlan was passed, filling the bases; Shaw scored on McFadden's out—Logan to Kavanagh. Rahmel ended the scoring by missing three.

The Rubber men tied it up in the sixth. Tucker was safe when Gonter missed his third strike, and then threw wide to first. He stole second while Jones was fanning. Kavanagh hit to Quinlan, who threw wide to first, Tucker scoring and the runner going to second. Wilcox ended the innings by grounding to Craig.

The Petes were blanked in their half. Craig, first up, singled to centre but was out stealing—Jones to Logan.

The visitors went out in order in the seventh, but the Petes wound up the game in their half. With one gone, M. O'Brien hit to Sisler, who threw badly to first. Quinlan followed with a clean home-run over left field fence, sending O'Brien in ahead of him.

That ended the scoring, and the excitement, as well as not a man on either side reached first base afterwards.

Home run, Quinlan; struck out by Quinlan, 14, by Beith, 10; bases on balls, off Beith, 3; left on bases, Peterborough 7, Bowmanville 3; sacrifice hits, Kavanagh, Shaw, McFadden; wild pitch, Quinlan 1, Beith 1; passed ball, Gonter 1, hit by pitcher by Quinlan 2, (Sisler 2). Umpire, D. McCabe. Time 1.55.

Besides allowing Bowmanville no hits on Saturday, striking out fourteen men and winning his own game with a homer, Manager Quinlan of the Peterborough team tied Bert Murphy, the third baseman for the box of cigars donated by Mr. Snelgrove for the best hitting average during the day. Each got two bits out of three times at bat and had things to themselves as M. O'Brien and Craig were the only other batters to hit safely. In fact there were only four men who made hits on either side.

Quinlan's feat of keeping Bowmanville from gathering a hit was a duplication of his stunt in 1906, when he did not give Bowmanville a hit and won his game 6 to 3.

Local Printers Lost To The Lindsay Type Jugglers On Saturday

It was 13-6 with our Lindsay brethren taking the hoodoo number which of course, was all very popular. Nothing like that for our team which is composed of ball players whose exhibitions of difficult plays is truly wonderful. We had the Lindsay people gaping at us with expressions which would do credit to any country fair side show audience and it sure was better to have played and lost than never to have played at all. Our adventures during the afternoon and evening will remain deep rooted in our upper storeys for some time to come. It was a great trip, particularly the home journey on the flyer. Then there was no time to think of the meeting at the hay field just on the outskirts of the village which we reluctantly left behind. We were traveling. Quite the contrary were our experiences as our crowd numbering about fifteen, including 'Scotty', the mascot, made the trip via Millbrook, Bethany, Omemee and Beaboro. It was alright as far as Millbrook, where we adjourned for other connections. Someone suggested that we walk, but this was cried down with charges of "cold feet" and each of us gamely took his medicine. To dispel our apprehensions as to the hour of arriving at our destination, two cars of black diamonds of the softer composition were annexed to our special, and we started, after making sure of a good start. We tore into Bethany with all ceremony due us, but most of the inhabitants were busy at lunch, only those who had duties to perform on the side door pullmans, awaited us when our mogul slowed down. Mascot "Scotty", who had hitherto failed to make our spirits aviate, awoke our manager, Mr. 'Mack' Miller, and doped out a programme, by which we might have a workout with the village champions during the interval between our arrival and departure. This failed to appeal to Manager Miller he being of the opinion that we might suffer injuries. Words would fail utterly to explain the great joy that permeated every atom of our interior when the 'Con.' gave the signal for another start, which was successfully carried out. Thus the minutes and hours slipped on and finally we all awoke to find that Lindsay had been reached.

All hands beat it for the first 'bus, but as the accommodation was not sufficient to warrant everyone continuing the jaunt to slumberland, some of us walked, in our sleep, and generally behaved as the natives of the bury which we had invaded. We all met again at the Royal Hotel, where the proporietor, Mr. T. McCarroll received us as honoured guests and showed us to a room, also a bath tub. Changes in our apparel were soon effected and we were carted off again, this time to the ball field, where Mr. Richard Butler took charge of the fray, and our Mr. Miller preceded to the plate and promptly struck out. Such was the beginning. Our extreme modesty will not permit of our making any further explanations as to what we did during the game, save for a few general remarks. Mr. Miller twirled for us as long as possible, and then retired in favour of Kid Swanston, who had the Lindsay swatsmen performing all manner of manoeuvres in an attempt to connect with his repertoire of slants. Previous to his taking posession of the twirler's headquarters, the enemy had very selfishly made eight circuits and what is more to their discredit, all in one inning—the second. However, our clever middle sacker, Mr. Sharrard, with the able assistance of George Johnston, commenced the good work with the willow and then we all started banging to the uttermost parts of the hay field, and when it all ended we were just seven behind, after which both teams left the grounds.

Devilisms.

The collection amounted to $1.30.

The umpire played well.

Lindsay will be here next Saturday.

'Chub' Sharrard almost had a perfect fielding and batting average.

It was plain to be seen that our first pitcher lacked condition.

The 'Siamese Twins' Masters Swanston and Taylor, made hits of various descriptions.

The combatants were:

To Encourage Tobacco Growing.

New York, July 24. Great Britain will not rely wholly on the decision of the U. S. Supreme Court to re-establish competition in tobacco. Under the Lloyd-George budget she has $6,000,000 to spend on improving agriculture and a part of it has been set aside to determine if tobacco can be raised in England and Scotland.

The expert who has tobacco in charge, A. V. Campbell, arrived here on Saturday on the Campania. He plans to spend nine months in Canada and the United States during which time he will visit the tobacco growers districts.

LATEST CITY NEWS.

—Practical man to clean windows, also to cut lawns, etc. Phone 149, Peterborough Messenger Service, 345 1-2 George street.

It pays to advertise in the Lost and Found column of the Examiner. It also pays to read Lost and Found ads. Look at page 2 and read.

Discharged.

Will Kerry, a local man was arraigned in the police court this morning on a charge of being drunk and disorderly. He was discharged.

Two Bargains.

One Heitzman & Co. piano, Rosewood case, in perfect condition. Must be sold. One Edison phonograph, "in perfect condition." Large horn and stand. No reasonable offer refused. C. J. CARROLL & CO., 372 Water St.

Probabilities.

Strong winds and gales, south-west, shifting to northwest; local showers, much cooler to-night. Tuesday, strong, northwesterly winds, mostly fair and cool, but a few local showers.

Eat Fresh Fruit.

We are always well supplied with fine fresh fruit. Berries, cherries, oranges, bananas, lemons, etc. Also new vegetables — tomatoes, potatoes, cabbage, peas, radishes, beets, etc. S. A. Oke, 340 George street; both phones 275.

Preserving Gems.

Good preserves are spoiled every day by bad sealers. My new stock of gems are recommended for all kinds of fruit. They come in half-gallons, quarts and pints, and the prices are right.—James R. Bell, 43 Hunter, East, 161 Hunter, West.

Third Troup, Boy Scouts.

There will be a meeting of the 3rd troop and all boys going to camp, held in the armouries on Monday night at 7.30 sharp. Every boy must be on hand, in full uniform. Final arrangements will be made, including church parade on Sunday morning next, July 30. W. J. Miller, Scout Master.

Choicest Cherries.

The best of cherries are coming in now at W. J. Oke's, 376 George street. Don't fail to get a basket of Montmorency cherries, a fine late variety, which we can highity recommend. Order your raspberries now, as the crop is likely to be short. Large quantities of California and domestic fruits to hand daily. Phones: Bell 18 and 19. Machine 18.

What We Manufacture.

—The Peterborough Showcase Co. situated at 709 Water street, manufactures all designs of counter cases silent salesmen, showcases, wall case store fittings, and all designs of high-grade cabinet work, such as china cabinets, kitchen cabinets, music cabinets, writing desks, book cases, medicine cases, etc. Furniture made to order and repaired. Dealers in British late glass and mirrors Telephone No. 1153. W. Theobald manager.

Trent Canal Guide Book.

—Just issued from the Examiner presses, a most comprehensive and artistic reference and guide book of the Trent Canal, containing a host of valuable and hitherto unpublished information concerning the waterway, compiled by Mr. E. S. Clarry. This book gives precisely the information about the Canal that is so much in demand. Containing as it does, charts of the lakes throughout the system from Orillia and Barrie on Lake Simcoe to Healey's Falls on the Trent, with the main steamer channel clearly indicated it will be of invaluable assistance to the owners of power boats. The maps and charts which the guide book contains are alone worth many times the price of the publication, and they will be appreciated by all navigators in the district. The book is beautifully illustrated by artistic photographs of many points of interest along the system and will be much in demand, if only for souvenir purposes. It is now on sale at Trebilcock Bros. Peterborough Book Store.

Aitken on Taft.

London, July 24.—In his maiden speech in the House of Commons, on Sir Gilbert Parker's resolution to reduce the Colonial Secretary's salary because of his action in excluding the consideration of desirable changes in the British fiscal system from the purview of the imperial royal commission on the trade relations of the Empire, Sir William Aitken declared that President Taft had begun with his campaign against the British Empire by reciprocity with Canada. He would next hit British trade by reciprocity with Newfoundland and lastly sweep the West Indies into the American net.

Sir William Aitken charged the Rt. Hon. Lewis Harcourt with turning the Imperial Conference to British party uses. Mr. Harcourt, he said, knew that all the overseas dominions, and more than half of the English people, favored Imperial preference, and yet he hamstrung the royal commission by ruling out this vital question.

Eight Cars Smashed.

Cayuga, July 24.—A bad smash-up occurred about 11 o'clock Saturday night at the G.T.R. station, when eight cars were derailed and badly smashed. Traffic was completely blocked till 8.30 in the morning, the Fort Erie and St. Thomas wrecking trains being called. The train was heavily loaded with merchandise and a car of chickens. In the chicken car slept an attendant, who was not wakened by the smash-up, although car next was badly damaged. The cause of the wreck was thought to be a broken truck.

The car had left the rails several hundred yards before striking the first switch, where there is a sharp curve. For a distance of several hundred yards it being impossible to stop the train owing to the heavy down grade and the crippling of the air brakes.

Nova Scotia Forest Fires.

Halifax, July 24.—The forest fires which have been raging in Cumberland for a week now and miles of land have been devastated.

The fire on Saturday was burning within a mile of the Mynies settlement, and is also burning on the buildings of B. B. Barnhill and Kelly Brothers. It is difficult to estimate what extent Mr. Barnhill's property has been damaged by the flames, but the total area already burned will be in the vicinity of $500,000, and the fire is still burning.

Hessian Fly In Wheat.

Galt, July 24.—W. V. Longley, who has been employed by the commission of conservation in taking an agricultural survey of parts of Waterloo County, reports that there is considerable Hessian fly in the wheat.

Ontario produces about $17,000,000 worth of fall wheat, and of this amount Waterloo produces about $600,000 worth, so that wheat growing is no small item in the production of Waterloo County farms and it would be a serious matter if steps were not taken to prevent losses.

Notice to Contractors

TENDERS FOR STATION AND OTHER BUILDINGS.

SEALED TENDERS, addressed to the undersigned, and marked on the envelope "Tender for station buildings," will be received at the office of the Commissioners of the Transcontinental Railway at Ottawa, Ont., until 12 o'clock noon of the 3rd day of August, 1911, for the erection of station and other buildings required along the line of the Transcontinental Railway as set forth below, viz:—

Section 10.—From Cochrane to Currie, in the Province of Ontario.
Section 11.—From Fraser to Grant, in the Province of Ontario.
Section 12.—From Superior to Dugald, in the Province of Ontario.
1,000 ton Coaling Station at Grant, Mile 252.7, District "D".

Plans and specifications may be seen and full information obtained at the office of Mr. Gordon Grant, Chief Engineer, Ottawa, Ont., and at the following District offices:

For Sections 10 and 11 and the 1,000-ton Coaling Station, Mr. A. N. Molesworth, District Engineer, Cochrane, Ont.
For Section 12, Mr. S. E. Poulin, District Engineer, St. Boniface, Man.

Tenders must be made on the forms supplied by the Commissioners and be signed and sealed by all the parties to the tender, and witnessed, and be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered Bank of the Dominion of Canada, payable to the order of the Commissioners of the Transcontinental Railway, for a sum equal to ten per cent (10 p.c.) of the amount of the tender.

The right is reserved to reject any or all tenders.

By order,
P. E. RYAN,
Secretary.

The Commissioners of the Transcontinental Railway.

Dated at Ottawa this 3rd day of July, 1911.

Newspapers inserting this advertisement without authority from the Commissioners will not be paid for it.

Department of the Naval Service

SEALED TENDERS, addressed to the undersigned and endorsed "Tender for the Erection of Wireless Telegraph Station," at Midland, Ontario, will be received at this office until noon, on July twenty-fourth, 1911

Plans, specifications and form of contract to be entered into can be seen on and after July tenth instant, at the office of the Superintendent of Wireless Telegraphs, Department of the Naval Service, Ottawa, the Office of the Agent of the Department of Marine and Fisheries, Parry Sound, Ontario, or the Office of the Postmaster at Midland, Ontario.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed forms supplied, and signed with their actual signatures, stating their occupations and places of residence. In the case of firms, the actual signature, the nature of the occupation, and place of residence of each member of the firm must be given.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of the Naval Service, equal to ten per cent. (10 p. c.) of the amount of the tender, which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,
G. J. DESBARATS,
Deputy Minister.

Department of the Naval Service,
Ottawa, July 7th, 1911.

REASONS WHY THE BY-LAWS SHOULD BE CARRIED ON FRIDAY NEXT

Mayor Morrow and Ald. Buller, Chairman of the Manufacturers' Committee, Tell Ratepayers to Support the Measure.

EXPLAIN THE BY-LAWS

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—On July 28th, the qualified electors will be asked to vote upon three By-laws, and we wish to give to them, through your columns, an explanation of them.

Parks and Playgrounds.

The growth of the city has made necessary the procuring of more land for parks and playgrounds. The open spaces are filling up, and the breathing spaces and playgrounds are becoming scarce. To provide places for children to play, and resting spots, land must be purchased and held for these purposes.

Part of the city is served by Jackson Park and another part by the Nicholls Park, while the centre is benefitted by the smaller Victoria and Central Parks. But the western and southern parts of the city on the west side of the river, and the southern part on the East side of the river are without park accommodation. The proposal is to purchase three acres adjoining the present King Edward Park, and thus make that park consist of about six acres. At present it is not large enough to be of much service. With the enlargement it will be a good play-ground and resting place. On the east side of the river, it is proposed to purchase about six acres on the river, which will afford an excellent playground and fine park of the size. The city owns an island out from this ground and in time it could be filled up higher and a rustic bridge constructed, and bathing places could easily be built there. This park will be admirably suited for the southern part of the East Ward, and with a bridge across the river, which will some day come near this point, will serve other parts of the city as well. It is also intended to purchase about six acres adjoining the city to the west, near Charlotte street, or Sherbrooke street. Thus three parks of about six acres each will be provided in the districts where they are most needed, and they should be procured while the land is available, for if not procured now there will be no suitable property obtainable and the loss of the opportunity will be regretted by all.

The Ackerman By-law.

A year ago Mr. Ackerman contemplated enlarging his manufacturing facilities, either by adding to his factory here, or by starting a branch in Regina, where he had purchased property for factory or warehouse purposes. The Chairman of the Manufacturers' Committee conferred with the firm several times, the result being that the Council agreed to fixing the assessment of the factory for ten years at $15,000 for municipal (not school) purposes, and the firm agreed to enlarge their building and plant here. The factory accordingly has been enlarged, and the electors are asked to confirm the city's part of the arrangement.

The Lock Works By-law.

The Lock Works are assessed, including the building occupied by Mr. Rishor, for this wholesale grocery, at $26,450. The Lock Company, in view of their increasing the capacity of the factory, asked that the assessment be fixed at $25,000. A United States concern has been given concessions in St. Catharines, including tax emption, and the request of the Lock Company here, whoh has to meet the competition of the western factory, is a moderate one. The Council passed the By-law and it is submitted to the electors for endorsation.

Should Receive Support.

These by-laws should be supported by the electors. Nothing should need to be urged to emphasize the advisability of procuring necessary parks and playgrounds now, and the other two By-laws are reasonable and moderate proposals that should commend themselves to the favourable opinion of the electors. The Council, after giving these matters their best consideration, have submitted the By-laws and recommend the electors to vote for them

W. G. Morrow,
Mayor.
W. Buller,
Chairman Manufacturers' Com.

GREAT SPECULATION

LONDON, JULY 25.—Speculation is rife this morning as to the next move of the Government regarding the veto bill following the turbulent scenes of yesterday. Asquith had many conferences with his lieutenants as well as with representatives of the rank and file of the party this morning. Unionists are plainly somewhat perturbed as the result of demonstration yesterday and while openly professing that the situation demanded it, have a feeling that it hurt them with the country.

WILL NOMINATE CANDIDATE FOR DOMINION ELECTION

Liberal Convention Which Meets in the Grand Opera House on Saturday, August 5th, Will Not However Make a Nomination for the Provincial House.

At a meeting of the Liberals of West Peterborough on Saturday evening, it was decided to hold a mass meeting of the supporters of the Liberal party in the Grand Opera House, Peterborough, on Saturday afternoon, the 5th of August, at 2 o'clock p.m., for the nomination of a candidate to contest the constituency for the House of Commons.

It was decided that, as no election for the Local Legislature would probably be held till after another session, nomination of a candidate for the Local Legislature would be left to the decision of the convention.

All interested, in the success of the Liberal candidate, to be chosen, are invited to be present. Prominent public men will address the convention.

A New Industry For Peterborough Will Employ About Sixty-Five Hands

Public Meeting Held Last Night With a View to Establishing a Straw Hat Factory Here---It is Proposed to Operate a Plant Capable of Turning Out 300,000 Straw Hats a Year---Large Market for Product.

The proposal to establish a straw hat factory in this city, which would give employment to about 65 hands, was freely discussed at a public meeting in the committee rooms last night. Among those present were: His Worship Mayor Morrow, Ald. Morgan, Ald. Graham, Ald. Kerneghan, Ald. Bradburn, Ald. Brown, Ad. Metheral, Ald. Anderson, Mr. F. Adams, Mr. G. N. Gordon, Mr. D. W. Dunbie, Mr. F. Barrie, Industrial Commissioner Armstrong, Mr. Kendry, Dr. Morrison and Mr. M. Mannist. The latter represented the proposed new hat company.

Mr. Gordon presented the case for the company. He intimated that the new company would be prepared to manufacture hats of a high grade. With $50,000 worth of stock they would be prepared to secure a location for their plant, equip and stock same.

Mr. Mannist also went into detail concerning the cost of manufacturing the hats, a sample of which was produced at the meeting. He stated that the company would employ about 65 hands and would rent a suitable building to carry on the business in.

Mr. Thomas Barrie, who was present, testified as to the good quality of the sample hat which was produced. He considered the proposition to be one worthy of support.

After considerable discussion it was decided to appoint Mr. Barrie and Mr. Kendry to act as a committee to secure further information concerning the possibilities of establishing a hat factory here from a profitable standpoint. This motion was moved by Mr. Gordon and seconded by Ald. Bradburn

The meeting then adjourned to await the committee's report.

Besides Mr. Mannist, there would act in co-operation with him, Mr. Roy Wood and Mr. Arthur Buckley, two practical men. They would each take $5,000 of stock, leaving $40,000 to be secured elsewhere.

ASQUITH RECEIVED WITH AN OVATION

LONDON, JULY 25.— When Commons reassembled this afternoon, Speaker Lowether gave the members some mild admonishment and warned them that the session would be immediately suspended if anything like yesterday's disorder occurred again. When Asquith appeared he was received with government ovation which completely drowned the opposition groans. Lord Cecil again distinguished himself as a demonstrationist, by asking Asquith if he would communicate his mind on home rule to the Commons before sending it to the Press. "I consider that an insolent question" Asquith said, and then there were signs of another approaching storm like yesterday, but wiser heads kept the would-be rioters in check.

GERMANY TO ASK FOR OFFICIAL EXPLANATION

LONDON, JULY 25—That the German Government is expected to make a demand upon the foreign office for an official explanation and, at the same time, a disavowal of the recent speech of Lloyd-George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, was admitted at the British foreign office to-day. Germany, it is explained, has been forced into this position by the attitude of the London newspapers, which have quoted members of the Cabinet as insisting that the speech was aimed directly at Germany and was intended to serve notice that the German territorial aggression in Africa must be curbed, and the situation caused much nervousness on the stock Exchange to-day. Lloyd's is, of course, alarmed; it usually is at the first whisper of trouble; so all ship owners have been warned that present insurance rates will not hold so far as war risks are concerned, after Aug. 6th.

Even the president of Moon College was once skeptical about 30-Day Shorthand.

THE CONTEST IN HALTON.

Many people all over Canada will have their attention directed during the next few weeks or months to the County of Halton, which has been represented for many years in the House of Commons by Mr. Henderson. He is in some ways a gentleman and a parliamentarian of the old school, of which the members believed, and acted on the belief, that the proceedings of Parliament should be carried on with a sense of propriety and dignity. Some of his fellow members of the Opposition have been for years acting in a way to bring Parliament into disrepute, but Mr. Henderson never showed any disposition to help them in vulgarising the great body of which he is a member. He can be in a plausible way as unfair as any of his associates, but it is something to be able to say that he has never been rudely and habitually offensive. For this reason his opponents have always felt more or less kindly to Mr. Henderson, and but for his attitude towards reciprocity he might have had an easy time of it at the coming election; as matters now stand he will have the fight of his public life, with the chances strongly against him.

Halton is an almost purely agricultural county, and reciprocity is very largely a farmers question. Halton has always had a high reputation for horse-breeding, and the Liberal candidate, nominated on Saturday last, is a thorough going horse man. After acquiring a Provincial reputation by many years of honourable and profitable dealing in horses, with Toronto for his headquarters, and all outside of that city for his field of operations, he has bought a fine farm in Halton, which he will no doubt utilize for the breeding of his favourite stock. Mr. Harland Smith starts his campaign, therefore, with good odds in his favour. He believes there is possible a great future for the horse industry in Canada, and especially in Ontario, and there is no other man in the Dominion better fitted than he is to put his opinion to a systematic and thorough-going test.

It is natural in this connection to think of the frequently suggested idea of breeding horses in this Province to supply remounts for the British army. Cavalry horses are constantly passing out of use on account of age, to say nothing of accidents and disease. The waste thus incurred must be provided for by a perpetual source of supply. Experts are on the search all the time for suitable young horses of the type they prefer, and there is no reason, except that they cannot find such horses in Canada, why they should not buy them here. The field of propagandism and leadership in this great enterprise is open, and Mr. Harland Smith is pre-eminently adopted to pre-empt and occupy it. If the electors of Halton are wise they will, for their own sake and the sake of the whole country, give him a chance to show what he can do with the help of membership in the House of Commons, where his ideas can be exploited more effectively than they can be anywhere else. Mr. Smith has, it is needless to say, other qualifications than his interest in and knowledge of horses.

After Seven Years' Absence

TORONTO, JULY 24.—Mourned for dead by his wife and relatives, Thomas Jackson, who formerly kept the Balmoral Hotel at Bowmanville, has turned up alive in Toronto. He disappeared from Bowmanville seven years ago, and as his friends never heard from him they thought him dead. He is suffering from Bright's disease and may not recover.

THE MOSQUITO AS A BEARER OF DISEASE

Now that Toronto and other Canadian cities have opened war upon that whining, hungry pest called the mosquito, the following article by H. E. Chandlee will be of interest to many. Writing in Pearson's Magazine, Mr. Chandlee says:
